RICH BOSTON WOMAN MUST BE TRIED AS SMUGGLER

Mrs. Frederick P. Chesbrough Ordered to Court in $23,000 Pearl Necklace Case.

NOW IN A SANITARIUM

Federal Hearing Will Be Held in Trenton, N. J., First Week in Next Month.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Mrs. Frederick P. Chesbrough, the wife of the Boston steamship owner, will have to stand trial for smuggling a $23,000 pearl necklace into this country from Paris. The trial will take place in the United States Court in Trenton, N. J., the first week in November. This statement was made today at the New York Custom House.

With the announcement the fact became known that Mrs. Chesbrough has been in a sanitarium near her home in Massachusetts for most of the time since her arrival from Europe, last June. It was charged when she reached here that she had brought over with her valuable laces, furs and jewels, which she failed to declare to the inspectors. In a false bottom of her trunk was found a bill for a $23,000 pearl necklace, which she had purchased in Paris.

Mrs. Chesbrough's Explanation.

When Mrs. Chesbrough was charged with having smuggled the goods into this country, she said:

"Somebody packed the trunk for me and told me that it would be all right. I took the man's word for it."

Great influence has been brought to bear to shield Mrs. Chesbrough from prosecution. Offers have been made by her attorneys to settle the case out of court in such a way that the Government would lose nothing, but this could not be done.

Officials Retain Necklace.

The customs officials of this city have in their possession the $23,000 necklace, the chief article Mrs. Chesbrough is charged with having smuggled. After dodging the bill for the jewels in her trunk detectives traced the necklace to a safe deposit vault in Windsor, Canada. Mrs. Chesbrough's husband surrendered the necklace on demand. The present rate of duty on pearls is 60 per cent, and Mr. Chesbrough will have to pay a duty of $13,800 on that one article.

Mrs. Chesbrough was indicted by the Federal Grand Jury at Trenton. Mr. Chesbrough, who was formerly a Michigan lumber man, has stood by his wife in the ordeal through which she has been forced to go.

"My wife was in a railroad accident four years ago," said her husband, at the time the smuggling charge was brought, "and as a result of this her health was greatly impaired. I have not offered this as an explanation of her acts. They need no explanation.

Device of French Packer.

"The trouble so far as I have been able to see arose over what seemed to the custom officials a false bottom in my wife's trunk. From their point of view it may have been a false bottom. But, as a matter of fact, the device of a French packer to prevent the contents of the trunk from being jumbled in handling.

"Before my wife left Paris for this country she gave all of her things to the packer for him to prepare for shipment. She had gowns that would have been spoiled if they were tossed about.

"There were no trays in the trunk and the packer placed the heavy things in the bottom naturally. Among them were some furs. To keep them in place and to prevent them injuring the other articles in the trunk, a deal board partition was used to fasten down the furs.

"It was this board bottom that caused all of the trouble, arousing as it did the suspicions of the custom officials. My wife thought that the furs would not be available, and they were not. The gowns and other things she had worn, and they did not come under the law.

Has Receipts for Furs.

"The furs were shipped over to my wife in March by me, and I have the express receipts to show for it. She did not declare the furs because they were not dutiable.

"When the customs officials examined the fur coats they told her that if they were dutiable because the coats had new linings. It is up to the customs officials to decide whether a new lining makes a new coat. I happened to be in New York at the time and I went to the custom house and explained matters.

"There was no jewelry in the trunk. There was a memorandum of the purchase of some jewelry. There were two necklaces. When we went to Nice we bought a necklace of pearls from a man known who was hard pressed for money. The expensive necklace was left in Canada pending a settlement of the question of tariff on strung and unstrung pearls."

Mr. and Mrs. Chesbrough came East from Michigan about three years ago, and live at No. 260 Waverly street, Newton. The family consists of husband and wife. Their daughter, Elsie Noe Chesbrough, was married about a year ago to William Austin of Detroit.

U. S. Judge Robbed By Boston Crooks: Who'll Be Next?

Edgar Aldrich of New Hampshire Touched by Pickpockets; Roll Vanishes.

Boston thieves are no respecters of persons. They would as lief rob a United States Judge or a police patrolman as a common, ordinary, hard working citizen.

Just to show the democratic spirit of Boston pickpockets one of them lifted the pocketbook of Judge Aldrich of the United States District Court for New Hampshire Friday night and he was mean enough not to leave a clue warning the Boston police could find him.

Just a few weeks ago an enterprising, up-to-date thief went into one of the downtown police stations and picked a roll, and a big roll at that, of money one of the policemen had been saving for a year. The officer thought his locker a safer place than a Boston bank vault, but the thief found the roll and walked off with it.

Now the sanctity of a United States judge is not respected and Judge Aldrich, who ran down here from New Hampshire to sit for Judge Lowell for a few days, was "touched" for his wallet containing a good sized roll. Uncle Sam's check for his salary and some private papers.

Who'll be the next?

Is even Police Commissioner O'Meara safe under this regime?

$2 FOR VANDERBILT SHAVE.

But Too Much Valet, Atlanta Barber Thinks.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 23.—"I wouldn't mind shaving him every day," said the black-haired barber at the Piedmont hotel yesterday as he came from the room of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who has been in Atlanta in attendance upon the horse show where he won twenty-two ribbons, fourteen of them blues.

"I didn't like the way his valet inspected me, and when Mr. Vanderbilt looked me over before he let me begin work, but he was easy to shave, only once with the powder cut out, and he certainly was liberal enough. He paid me two dollars, one for the shave and one for Mr. H. T. McGraw, of Philadelphia.

"But I can't stand the personal inspection. Why, Vanderbilt even required his valet to examine his face and see if my work was properly done."

SALVATOR DEAD.

Great Race Horse Who Held World's Record for a Mile.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 23.—The famous racer Salvator is dead. The great runner died at Elmendorf farm, owned by I. B. Haggin, where he was foaled in 1886.

It was in 1890 at Monmouth Park, N. J., as a four-year-old that he reduced the world's record for a mile to 1:35⅗, which record still stands. That year he won all the races including the match races with the great horse Tenny.

He was sired by Imp. Prince Charlie and out of Salina by Lexington. He won on the turf $120,000.

LIMBURGER FOR LEPROSY.

Sure Cure, Though Some Victims Might Prefer the Disease.

DENVER, Oct. 23.—The powers of limburger cheese have long been celebrated, but the latest virtue to be claimed for it is the cure of cancer. Philip B. Inch, Jr., a Denver druggist, today declared that he had proved that limburger poultices and glycerine are a sure remedy, and that it will also cure leprosy in its first stages. Rival druggists say that they know most people would prefer leprosy to the cure.

R! R!! R!! GLIDDEN'S BROUGHT OUT AN EXPLANATION

Now, Truly, You See, He Often Gets Excited and Slips Over Those Little "R's."

BOUGHT EXPERIENCE DEAR

Once He Called Man "Fine Crook;" "Thanks," Said the Latter, Who's a Baker.

SOME men lisp. Others stutter. But Councillor Walter S. Glidden of Somerville has an impediment that's all his own. He slips over his R's when he's excited.

And that's how Mr. Glidden accounts for the fact that newspaper reports of his speech at Cambridge a few nights ago quoted him as saying that the Republican vote in Somerville would come out on election day. If it had to be "bought." What he says he said was that it would come out if it had to be "drought."

The member of Governor Draper's Council from the Fourth District explained the whole thing yesterday to a group of his marketmen associates down in the Faneuil Hall district. Clad in a long white butcher's coat—he's the custom representative of the Swift's, but he's not afraid to put on working clothes—he held forth on the sidewalk outside the Swift headquarters. Mr. Glidden was not excited and he didn't slip over his R's.

But let him tell the story himself.

"That habit I've got of slipping over my R's has got me into all sorts of trouble, boys. You never notice it except when I'm excited. You see, it's all the fault of the school teachers I had when I was a youngster down in Maine. I was born in Pittston, you know. Went to school in Augusta. Somehow or other the teachers down there thought more of arithmetic than they did of anything else, and my pronunciation was neglected.

Thought It Was "Dying."

"Result was that I followed a habit of slipping over my R's. Did well it plenty much since I came down to Boston, but when I get excited, the old habit comes back. I'll never forget one time I went swimming with some other boys off one of the wharfves in Augusta. I had to come home early, and Jim Haskins, one of my chums, asked me to stop at his house and leave a note that he'd got at the skule fol' his mother.

"I BROUGHT the bundle, 'Whelle's Jim?' asked Mrs. Haskins.

"'Down on the wharf DRYING, said I.

"The poor woman fainted. She thought I said 'DYING,' and that hell Jim had been caught in one of the log jams on the Rivell.

"I Remembell another time when one of my followmen was handing in Repolls from the slaughtell house that welte too long and too full of unimpoltant things.

Really It Was BRIEF.

"I told him I wasn't satisfied with his Reports.

"'How do you want 'em?' he asked.

"'MORE BRIEF,' I said. 'MORE BRIEF.'

"Next day the Repolts welte longelt than ever, and I noticed that evelly page was filled with items about beef.

"I sent for the foreman and gave him another call-down.

"'But I did just what you told me,' he said. 'You said you wanted MORE BEEF in them.'

Now Truly He Said CROOK.

"That isn't all. When I fiRst Ran for Councillor I gave a certain bakell in Somelville some money to look out for me in a district. He fRiluned, and worked for my opponent. AfteR election I met him and told him to his face that he was a 'FINE CROOK.' To my sulplise he only smiled and said he'd send some of his biscuits up to my house. As I look back now, I imagine that he must have thought I said he was a 'PINT COOK.'

"And now the habit has got me in thRouble again. The othell night out in Cambldige I told a lot of banqueteRs that in Somelville we weRe going to get out evelly Republican vote if it had to be coaxed, dRagged or BROUGHT to the polls. The newspapeR steng'aphers RepoRted me as saying 'coaxed, dragged or BOUGHT.'

"I was all enthused when I made that speech and I suppose I must have slipped over the R.

"But it's me for a school of oRatory. I can't affold to take any mo!e chances."

Fell on Common; Broke Skull.

Redmond F. McDonald, who claimed two residences, one at No. 23 Upton street, and the other at No. 22 Mt. Pleasant avenue, last night fell down a flight of steps in the Common. His skull was fractured on the base and he received multiple injuries. He was taken in a dying condition to the Relief Hospital.

SWEDEN PROTESTS TO UNITED STATES OF NEGLECT TO PROBE CLUBBING TO DEATH OF YOUTH BY BOSTON POLICE

Victim of robber whom Boston police clubbed to death, schoolmate who seeks justice for his name and Quincy family which is bending every effort to hasten further Bergstadt investigation.

MAEL W. LEAF, OF QUINCY AND FAMILY."

Bergstadt's Father Declares Officers Neglected Duty as Human Beings.

"THE only remedy is the immediate removal of the Police Commissioner."
JAMES H. VAHEY.

THE Swedish Foreign Office has called on the Secretary of State at Washington for immediate investigation of the clubbing to death of Gustaf Francis Bergstadt, one of her subjects, by the Boston police. Thereby an international question arises out of a case which has for months in the pigeon holes at Pemberton Square.

The Sunday American has told at length the sad story of Bergstadt—how he lay for weeks in the City Hospital without word being sent to his parents and friends, before his body was saved by chance from a pauper's grave. New facts just brought to light show that the young man was the only son of one of the richest men in Sweden, a member of an honored family. He was not a friendless sailor, a drunken loiterer defamed by the police with the approval of Commissioner O'Meara.

The Sunday American to-day prints the letter written by Bergstadt's father when he was told of his son's awful fate. It is as follows:

Father Is Heart-Broken.

"Karl W. Leaf, Quincy, Mass.

"My dear old friend—

"Your worthy letter of the 20th is at hand wherein you notify us of our beloved Francisco's more than sorrowful end. It was the most heartrending document that I have ever had in my hand.

"Good God, why did the hospital authorities not notify the Swedish consul who they knew what nationality my boy was? Then I could have come over to him and comforted him with my presence. I could have seen and talked with him before he died.

"He went out to sea when he was only sixteen years of age. He has been home several times, and last Winter he wrote that he would come home this Fall and stay at home for good.

"I thank you from the bottom of my heart for the goodness you so thoughtfully and freely have bestowed upon me, although I have in no way deserved it. This sorrow was and is very great, almost unbearable, but your thoughtful letter was a balsam for my heart. I can readily feel that you have a heart that is beating really for the unfortunate and afflicted.

Mother Prostrated.

"How can I write? My wife is prostrated. I am almost crazed with grief. Oh, to think that my only beloved child met such a brutal death. And then to know that Francisco was asking for his mother and no one there to comfort him. Why, oh, why did they not notify the

HILL POINTS TO VANDERBILT CASE

Insists Rich Men Have Been Dealt with Severely in Office of Prosecutor.

"My Democratic opponent is very fond of criticising cases where he says I have shown favorable action in regard to what he calls 'rich men,' though usually, when it comes down to the facts, he selects some case like Charles F. Berry who is penniless," said District Attorney Hill in a statement last night.

"He never says anything about the cases where rich men have been severely dealt with in the office—cases like the Orndorff case, where a wealthy automobilist is serving a sentence of six months for operating an automobile while intoxicated, and that of Harold Vanderbilt, who was tried and acquitted by a jury for an offence against the automobile laws.

"Both of these cases were defended by republicans, intimate friends of my own, Orndorff's counsel being the Hon. Herbert F. Parker, and Vanderbilt's counsel being Joel F. Godwin, whom I have known all my life.

"In both cases counsel felt strongly and expressed their belief that they ought not to be pushed. In Orndorff's case Mr. Parker has since repeatedly urged on me the propriety of a pardon.

"Vanderbilt's was a case which was very near the line and which I came very near not insisting on trying, as the defendant was a young man and the evidence was not strong. It seemed to me, however, proper that it should go to the jury, and it did go, with the result that proved that a Suffolk County jury can be trusted, as well as the District Attorney, to deal fairly with a defendant, whether he be rich or poor.

"Because I know my Democratic opponents' tactics I will say myself that Herbert Parker is on the stump in my behalf, and if any man who hears me is mean enough to believe that his action is through any hope of favor in the Orndorff case, or any other case, he is at liberty to do so."

COLD STORM DUE IN BOSTON TODAY

Warning Signals Are Set All Along the Coast; High Winds in Forecast.

Storm signals were displayed last night all along the Atlantic coast.

The local forecast for today: "Sunday, rain and colder; Monday, partly cloudy to cloudy and continued cold. High northeast winds shifting to northwest and diminishing."

The following telegram was received here at 10 o'clock last night from Washington: "Storm center on the middle Atlantic coast will cause high winds along the entire Atlantic coast."

Another telegram received some hours earlier said: "Northeast storm warning at 11 A. M. at Brenkwater, Rocky Island, Portland, Cape May, Atlantic City, Philadelphia, Sandy Hook, New York. Storm over middle Ohio Valley, moving east. Increasing east to northeast winds becoming high to-night and shifting to northwest Sunday."

A sprinkle of rain fell last night in Boston. To-day more rain may be expected and the temperature will fall rapidly.

Yesterday the highest temperature here was 61 degrees at 3 o'clock in the afternoon while the lowest was 47 degrees some time before sunrise.

Judge Censures Police.

Chief Justice Bolster yesterday, in the Municipal Criminal Court, told the police men present that if they didn't stop talking and preserve better order he would have the court officer take their names and then he would send them to the Superintendent and Commissioner of Police.

HOME RULE BUT NO BOSS RULE, DEMAND OF PELLETIER

"There's Too Much Government by Appointees, Too Little by the People," Says Candidate for the District Attorneyship

"Poor Old Boston" a Prey of Commission Rule; Calls on Hill to Explain His Hint About "Back Room Conferences"

Kelliher Calls Republican Candidate a "Rah Rah" Boy at Dudley Street Opera House; Quincy Sounds a Warning

A "HOME Rule for Boston" cry shot forth from the stage of the Dudley street Opera House last night by Joseph C. Pelletier, Democratic nominee for District Attorney, was echoed by an audience that packed the historic old playhouse—floors, galleries, stairways and stage—with an attendant demonstration that has seldom been equalled in this city. The audience rose as one man, with cheers, shouts and everything else that goes to make up real enthusiasm, for the Home Rule theme.

Mr. Pelletier's speech was a straight-from-the-shoulder attack on boss rule, commission rule and particularly Lodge rule.

O'Neil Is Chairman.

The rally from the point of enthusiasm and attendance was one of the best ever held in Boston. Joseph H. O'Neil, former Congressman from the ninth district, presided. He and Mr. Pelletier are Ward 21 residents. Besides lauding Mr. Pelletier as the man of the hour, Mr. O'Neil cast a few sidelights on Boston's new charter. He pointed to it as one of the evil results of boss rule, and one of the most startling illustrations of the absence of home rule in Boston. He let the audience understand that he favors Plan One.

Other speakers were former Mayor Josiah Quincy, Congressman John A. Keliher and John H. Brett, former member of the Boston school committee. They all boosted the Home Rule for Boston argument.

Hill an "Amusing Cuss."

Congressman Keliher referred to District Attorney Hill as an "amusing little cuss." He declared Hill was appointed by Governor Draper for purely political purposes.

"This spectacular product of the Back Bay," he continued, referring to Hill, "who is anxious to establish a social equality with the sturdy sons of South Boston, last night ventured into that section. Attired in the regulation Bowery boy garb, with small cap jauntily set upon his bullet head, corn-cob pipe in his mouth and the general air of a rah-rah boy—Arthur Dehon Hill opened his campaign in South Boston.

"Whoever advised this theatrical exploit must have intended it as a joke upon the young district Attorney, for ordinary common sense would teach that such an appeal was an insult to the intelligence and manhood of the peninsular district. Mr. Pelletier is a gentleman and whether in or out of a political contest or the courts, his manner is ever such as to so distinguish him."

Give the People a Voice.

Mr. Pelletier spoke as follows:

"We have before us the question of government by appointment. Mr. Hill was not placed in office by the people, he was put there by Governor Draper. There is no government by appointees, too little by the people.

"The Republican party has fostered a system of government by appointed Commissioners, which is not in accordance with the true principles of Democratic government. The people should choose those who are to govern them.

"Poor old Boston! the finest city in the world, but in a constant struggle for her autonomy against the aggression of the State with its Commissioners for the city and for the Metropolitan District, all appointed from the State House, all representing government by appointment.

"Gentlemen, we must be up and doing; we must wage eternal war for Home Rule. Boston for Bostonians. Suffolk County for the majority party, government by the people and not by appointment; these must be our watchwords.

"Democracy stands for Home Rule.

INEZ MILHOLLAND TO RETIRE FROM THE LIMELIGHT

Too Much Publicity for Young Woman After Talking Socialism at Vassar.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Miss Inez Milholland, who used to preach the cause of women to the Vassar girls and to explain to them what Socialism really means, has announced her intention of temporarily retiring from the limelight.

"I am going to keep out of the public eye as much as possible during the next two years," she said this afternoon in a farewell interview at the Hotel Manhattan, "and devote myself to the study of law."

"But I thought you were not admitted to Harvard," ventured some one in a deprecating tone.

"That is true," admitted Miss Milholland. "But there are other good law schools. It is, of course, as I told the Harvard faculty, a great disappointment to me that I cannot go to the school which is admitted to offer the greatest advantages to students, but mere disappointment is not sufficient to turn me aside from a seriously formed purpose.

"I do not feel," she continued, "that the time I spent in Boston endeavoring to make arrangements to enter Harvard was wasted, even though I did not gain my desire. I have at least made prominent educators and lawyers think seriously over the discriminations which are made against women in the professions, and I succeeded in convincing many of them that it was both foolish and unjust.

Trustees the Obstacles.

"Many of the most prominent lawyers of Boston wrote letters to Harvard faculty in my behalf before I had seen them and explained my case to them, and the faculty voted to admit me. Everything would have been all right had it not been for the attitude of the board of trustees. Only two of them voted in my favor, but persons who have lived in Cambridge all their lives told me that I had achieved a great victory."

Miss Milholland could not be persuaded to give the names of the trustees who had opposed her cause.

"I don't want to seem to criticise those that voted against me," she explained. "They said that the reason they could not do as I wished had nothing whatever to do with any ideas as to the inferior mental capacity of women, but was merely a question of policy.

"One man shook his head and said that lots of the most desirable students would be sure to say that they didn't want to go to Harvard because there was a pack of girls there. Another man told me right out that he agreed with me in my prophecy that eventually the Harvard doors would eventually be open to women, but added that he certainly didn't want Harvard to take the lead in any such fundamental. He said that he absolutely opposed the entrance of women into public life and into men's occupations and professions, and said everything he could to discourage it."

SOMERVILLE CELEBRATES.

High School Students Create "Rough-House" Over Victory.

All efforts of the high school students and their instructors in Somerville to prevent any disorder or disturbances in connection with the celebration of Somerville's victory of 22 to 0 over the Waltham foot ball squad were rendered useless last evening by the actions of about two hundred hoodlums who followed the parades and caused the marked dangerous spots and indulged in the pastime of smashing, breaking windows, ringing in false alarms of fire and in creating, generally, a well defined "rough house" all along the line of march.

The high school students and their friends, 1,000 strong, serenaded Mayor Woods. He made a few complimentary address and then the students marched to Central Hill, where, around the cannon in the park, they sang and cheered and enjoyed themselves until they were tired out.

Francis A. McCarthy, '09, addressed the students on the school grounds.

BARRILL PAID FOR STORY.

Charge in Affidavit Now in Hands of Cook Agent.

MISSOULA, Mont., Oct. 23.—The affidavit of Edward N. Barrill, the guide, to the effect that Dr. Cook was not with Mr. McKinley, is said to be controverted by statements now in the hands of Dr. Cook's special representative, and in the hands of whom he has retained in Montana. An affidavit by C. O. Bridgford, a friend of Barrill's, quotes the guide as replying to a question:

"I cannot go. That party, Miller, from Seattle is at Missoula and I am to meet him there tonight. This means from $5,000 to $10,000 to me. See?"

From which Mr. Barrill stated, I judged that Dr. Cook and he had reached the top of Mt. McKinley," Bridgford said.

VISITING LOS ANGELES.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 23.—Seventy members of the Massachusetts Street Railway Association arrived at the Alexandria this evening on a special train from Boston. They attended the convention of the American Street and Interurban Association at Denver, and are returning home by way of California. During their stay here extensive tours have been planned. Among the visitors are: Charles S. Sherrill, president of the American Street and Interurban Association; Charles S. Clark, secretary; Henry L. Wilson, Paul Winsor, Henry I. Page and Charles J. Pierce, all of Boston, and John A. Arnold, president of the Taunton & New Bedford Railway Company.

TAFT SPRAINS VOICE TALKING TO FIVE ACRES OF PEOPLE

President's Throat Breaks Down Just as He Concludes His Roundup of Texas.

By WILLIAM HOSTER.

DALLAS Tex., Oct. 23.—President Taft is to-night nursing his round-up of Texas. After a speech at the Fair Grounds and a banquet to-night, he went to sleep aboard his private car and at 8:30 to-morrow morning will begin the twenty-four-hour run to St. Louis where the host will be boarded late on Monday after noon for the run down the Mississippi River.

Twenty thousand people heard the address at the Fair Grounds to-night. For the first time since he began the long tour the President is having serious trouble with his throat. Compelled to address five acres of people, he has improved it. From the balcony of the Rice Hotel in Houston this morning, he strained his voice, striving to make himself heard.

Against the advice of Dr. Richardson, he insisted on making rear-end speeches at short stops between there and Dallas, and only a complete rest and careful treatment between here and St. Louis will permit him to carry out the remainder of his speaking program.

His voice was so husky when the train reached Henrietta that he dragged out Secretary of War Dickinson and explained the condition of his throat, and made the necessary do the talking.

The Dallas reception was on a par with the enthusiasm with which the President has been received all through Texas since he entered the State at El Paso a week ago to-day. Houston turned out a big crowd and Galveston welcomed him at every station on route to Dallas.

He spoke from a white rose bower at Houston and reviewed ten thousand school children before departing at 10:30 a. m. for Dallas.

A brief stop was made at Prairie View, just outside Houston, where the audience was composed entirely of negro girls from a nearby school. At the next stop, Hempstead, there was a county reunion and the real South had been entered in the gift to the President of a live possum, carefully crated, and a goodly portion of sweet potatoes.

SILVERMAN FOR HEARST.

Famous Rabbi Will Vote Fusion Ticket in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Joseph Silverman, chief rabbi of the Temple Emanu-El of Fifth avenue and Forty-third street, one of the most influential congregations in the city, ex-president and now honorary of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, and the confessor to the wealthy-wide benevolences and charities of the Seligmans, Jacob H. Schiff, the Speyers, Louis Stern, the Bloomingdales and many others, was asked to-day by a visitor, who mentioned the name of no candidate, what bearing he considered pro-eminent in the present campaign and whether he believed the continued dominance of Tammany was good for the Jewish people or for the city. The famous rabbi said that he would make no answers to both questions in one reply. He then dictated and signed the following:

"I think it sufficient to say in answer to all questions that I am going to vote for Mr. Hearst and the Fusion ticket throughout. JOSEPH SILVERMAN."

ATHLETE UNDER KNIFE.

PITTSFIELD, Oct. 23.—Following his recovery from typhoid fever, William A. Schick, of New York, former Harvard oarsman of renown, has been operated on for appendicitis. The operation was in a Pittsfield Hospital and was successful. When first attacked last Summer in Great Barrington, typhoid fever developed and Schick has been building for the operation since.

Suffragists Denounce Spain.

The execution of Professor Ferrer, "the Socialist of Spain," was yesterday denounced by resolution by the Massachusetts Women Suffrage Association at a business meeting in headquarters in Boylston street. Alice Stone Blackwell, the newly elected president of the association, presided. Mrs. Emmeline Parkhurst was congratulated for her work in England.

FRENCHMAN EARNS DRAW WITH SAYRES

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 23.—In his first bout in this country, Henri Piet, of France, although greatly outweighed, earned a draw with Maurice Sayres of Milwaukee at the Nutional A. C. to-night. Sayres led on the first two rounds. He used a straight left to the face with great success and landed some good body blows in the clinches. The third round was about even.

In the fourth round the Frenchman did much better. He was much faster than in the preceding rounds, and while his punches lacked speed, he landed often and the defense was almost flawless.

Piet continued to work well in the fifth round, and appeared to gain strength. His punches were much harder and he blocked the terrific rushes of Sayres with great ability. Sayres also did some good hooking in this round, and it would up about even. In the sixth round, it was in favor of Frenchman by a safe margin. He danced away from Sayres's swings, and sent both hands to his opponent's body with telling effect. Sayres was on the defensive all during the final session.

Fell and Injured His Face.

John Flinn, aged 40 years, driver of one of Austin Corey sons' coal wagons of this Boston, fell while alighting from the train on Main street, Winthrop, yesterday afternoon and received such injuries to his face that he was removed to the East Boston Relief Hospital.

SONG BIRDS, STUDY OPERA IN AMERICA

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—"American girls desiring to become operatic singers do not have to go abroad to study," said Mme. Eames to Miss Ellinor Virginia Rost less than four years ago when Miss Rost sought the opinion of the prima donna. That Miss Eames's confidence in the teachers in the United States was justified was evidenced a few days ago when Miss Rost proved to be one of the four successful candidates for the Metropolitan scholarship.

"I was singing at the Maine Festival about four years ago," said Miss Rost yesterday, "when the idea struck me that I should go abroad to study singing. I hoped with the money I had saved to be able to go to study right here. She told me there were just as many good teachers here as abroad, and that the results were the same. I then began training with Signor Pizzarello, and to him I owe a great deal of my success.

"I am very happy to have been one of the winners of the Metropolitan scholarships. It is a great honor to have the opportunity to study with such a noted singer as Nordica. It has always been my ambition to sing in grand opera, and I look forward to the next two years with the greatest pleasure."

Miss Rost is of a musical family. Her mother was a singer and her father is the nephew of George F. Root, whose musical ability has given his songs and compositions world-wide reputation.

BIG MOTOR BOAT BLOWN UP AT HULL

A forty-foot napatha launch was blown up and its three occupants thrown into the water, opposite Rumkin Island, near Hull, last night.

The tremendous noise made by the explosion attracted the attention of those on the sands of persons at Hull, Nantasket, Cohasset and Hingham, who rushed from their homes to see what was the matter.

Edward Monahan of South Boston, the owner of the launch, his brothers, John Monahan and George A. Jenkins, proprietor of the Oakland House, Nantasket were on board the boat. They managed to climb into a small tender, fastened to the stern of the launch, and cutting the rope which held it to the sinking launch, rowed towards the shore. The three men were swimming around in the water for only a few minutes before they succeeded in getting into the tender, but that was long enough to chill them.

They had not rowed far when they realized that the small boat was leaking badly and rapidly filling with water. They shouted for help and their cries were soon heard and answered by Captain Frank Sherrow of the life saving station at Point Olive, who had witnessed the unfortunate affair when he heard the explosion. Captain Sherrow put out in a boat with some of his men, and soon they were alongside the three men in the tender and had transferred them to the lifeboat. The half-drowned men were hustled ashore in fine time to Hull Village.

GAS KILLS WOMAN IN FAINTING SPELL

Falls on Tube, Disconnecting It from Stove, While Preparing Supper.

Mrs. Mary A. Leahy, wife of George D. Leahy, was asphyxiated at 6 o'clock last night in her home, No. 5 Quincy terrace, Roxbury.

She was cooking her husband's supper on a gas stove. The gas was supplied the stove through a long rubber tube which was fastened to a ceiling jet. Mrs. Leahy was seized with a fainting spell. In falling across the tube it was disconnected from the stove, allowing the gas to escape.

An hour later Mrs. John Mooney who lives in the flat overhead smelled gas. The police were notified. The body was found on the kitchen floor.

BRIDESMAIDS IN ACCIDENT.

With Minister for Scoville Zabriskie Wedding in Mishap.

STAMFORD, Ct., Oct. 23.—The marriage of Miss Orlena A. Zabriskie, elder daughter of Mrs. Cornelius Zabriskie of Brooklyn, to Herbert Scoville of New York today was in danger of postponement because of an auto accident. The car in which the bride and groom intended to start after the wedding, skidded, shaking the minister and two bridesmaids. The car was wrecked.

'FITZGERALD IS NOT JUST,' SAYS STEVENS

Declares State Taxes Lower This Year Than Since Record of 1893.

CLIFTONDALE, Oct. 23.—State Treasurer Elmer A. Stevens declared at a Republican rally in Odd Fellows' Hall, tonight, that ex-Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston "showed poor taste and was unjust in his recent campaign statement to the effect that the financial management of the State is poor and that he has found it impossible to get any trace of bills which the State has paid for public institutions.

Mr. Stevens declared that the original of every bill that the State has ever paid for an institution is on file in the office of the State auditor, and is open to full and free inspection by the people, and furthermore, that the institutions all keep copies of the bills. He declared that Mr. Fitzgerald had apparently made no effort to get at the truth and that his statement was made entirely at random and was unjust criticism, "particularly in view of such a state of affairs as was disclosed under his own administration of the city of Boston."

Mr. Stevens also took Mr. Vahey to task for his declaration that the State taxes are higher to-day than ever before, and declared that, instead, they are lower this year than at any time since 1893, which was a record low year, despite the fact that the Commonwealth is now burdened with the care of the insane at a cost of $1,500,000 a year, thus relieving the cities and towns of this item. Horace Allerton, Jr., presided, and Frank E. Bennett, Jr., and Stephen J. Gilman were the other speakers.

THREE FATALITIES IN CARNIVAL RACE

Scores of Narrow Escapes Also in Deadly California Auto Contest.

OAKLAND, Cal., Oct. 23.—Three fatalities and scores of hair-breadth escapes marked the Portola automobile races over the 23-mile Alameda county course today. C. F. Johnson was instantly killed when the Knox car, driven by Frank Free, dashed from the course at Stanley road and the Boulevard above Elmhurst in the first race. In a previous lap Joseph Robinson of the same car fell from it on the San Leandro road and was fatally injured. While the Stoddard-Dayton car No. 8, was rushing past Melrose at fifty-eight miles an hour, one of the rear wheels cast a tire, which flew into the crowd with tremendous force, striking a spectator named McKittrick. The victim was knocked down and sustained a compound fracture of the skull. He will die.

Pleuting, in the Pope-Hartford No. 4, won the race for the light cars, with the Autocar No. 3 second. The Apperson car took the second race, with Lesher second. The Pope-Hartford car won the 238-mile free-for-all race, finishing with an elapsed time of 3 hours 57 minutes 42 seconds.

City Loses $23,000 By a Land 'Bargain'

But There Was a Chance to Be $25,000 Out, so Morrison Is Pleased After All.

Superintendent of Public Buildings Morrison is elated over the prospects of making a bargain by which the city will make about $23,000. He is pleased because the city is not losing more.

The deal in question is the sale of the city's ride range property at Woburn. In 1901 the property cost the city $25,000. Investigations were held, but the property has remained a white elephant since.

Just what to do with the land has been a problem which more than one Mayor has considered. It is absolutely useful for a rifle range as no one is behind the Arctic Park. Superintendent Morrison has been in communication with a man from Stoneham who wants the land for a farm.

The property is assessed for $2,000, and he hopes to get $2,000 for it.

GREAT ELECTRICAL SHOW.

The first electrical exposition held in Boston will open in Mechanics Building on November 15 and close on November 25. It is proposed to exhibit at the Electrical Exposition every device which electricity has been found adapted. Visitors will have a chance to inspect recent and wonderful developments in utility. One feature of the show will be a finely furnished model of a home equipped with every modern electrical device for domestic use. In the yard a cow will be milked by electricity and chickens and ducks will be hatched in electric incubators. The laundry, the kitchen, the dining and other rooms will be provided with latest devices.

KILLS HUSBAND, WOMAN SUICIDE

Son Receives Notice of Tragedy, but Mother's Body Cannot Be Found.

WARREN, Pa., Oct. 23.—"I have killed father and have made my own grave. When you receive this I will be dead." was the startling statement in a letter received by Elmer Anderson of Warren, this afternoon from his mother. Alarmed, he went to the home of his parents, about five miles from the city, and found the father, F. O. Anderson, dead. Two bullet wounds from a 38-calibre revolver and two deep knife stabs were in the body. Search about the house and among the buildings for Mrs. Anderson's body revealed nothing, and it is believed she drowned herself, as she was missing from the house.

Anderson was a wealthy farmer and had extensive oil interests. He and his wife had frequently quarrelled. Large parties are now searching for Mrs. Anderson and arrangements have been made to drag the river.

Thought Hotel was Afire.

Smoke from one of the chimneys on the roof of the Hotel Dreyfus, No. 16 Essex street, last night caused a citizen to pull in Box 61 at the corner of Bovidon and Washington streets, summoning the fire department. A large crowd collected. There was no damage.

SMUGGLERS NOW FLOCK TO BOSTON

Scared from New York, They Are Coming Here in Large Numbers.

Following close upon the searching investigation into the methods of the Boston Customs House by special agents from the Treasury Department in Washington, inquiries have been issued by the department that the vigilance over passengers and imports at this port shall be greatly increased.

That has been learned that the petty smugglers who have been frightened away from New York by the increased vigilance there and the numerous arrests, have changed their routes of travel and are now coming to Boston. Others are coming across the Canadian border in large numbers and even precautions are said to be taken all along the border.

Women are said to be the main offenders and have smuggled in valuable laces, silks and lingerie.

The names of four women have been cabled here from Europe, and it is expected that they will be arrested soon after their arrival. Whatever dutible goods they may bring with them under concealment will be confiscated. The names of their employers in New York are known, and they, too, will be arrested when a clear case can be made against them.

An extra force of women inspectors have been assigned to work on orders from Washington. These women may hold up suspects on board railroad trains and examine them rightly for smuggled goods.

HOLD M'CARREN FUNERAL TUESDAY

State Senator While on Death-bed Outlined Plans for Services.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The news that Senator Patrick H. McCarren had died in St. Catherine's Hospital was broken to his aged twin-sister mother to-day at her home. She received the information with resignation, her bravery under the blow showing whence came the nerve and determination that make her son successful in his political career.

Soon after this the body of Senator McCarren was carried into the house where he had lived so many years with his brother. The McCarren home is at No. 97 Berry street, Williamsburg. The funeral will be held from there Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. A requiem mass will be sung at the Church of St. Vincent de Paul, and the body will be interred in Calvary cemetery.

Senator McCarren, with the hand of death almost upon him, Friday afternoon called his confidential secretary, Christopher Dalton, to his bedside and outlined plans for the funeral. His cynical sense of humor was still dominant in his mind.

$3,000 Incendiary Fire.

An incendiary fire at 10:30 o'clock last evening destroyed a vacant house at No. 3 Alford street, Roxbury, in the heart of the tenement district. There was a high wind and a second alarm was sounded. The loss is about $3,000.

DOUBLE STAMPS MORNINGS

POLICE VICTIM PROVES TO BE RICH MAN'S SON WITH AN HONORED NAME

Swedish consul? They are criminally neglecting their duties, even as human beings.

"I have heard nothing from the Swedish Ambassador until I had a letter from a Mr. Adolph Cohen, a Swedish newspaper man, who writes in the Swedish paper, Skandinavia. He notified me of my son's horrible end. Let me know if I can employ counsel to straighten out his horrible affair.

"If the policeman has a conscience, why did he himself not notify the Swedish consul? He must at least know that it was from his crime that the boy's death resulted. But he seems to keep everything a dark secret except to the police and hospital authorities.

Victim Not Quarrelsome.

"My son Francius was not of a quarrelsome disposition. To the contrary, he was very good natured and very quiet. So I am sure he never offended the police officer. The officer must in some unfriendly way first have insulted him.

"How can we find the names of the persons who were with him when the brutal deed took place? Can you find other witnesses who saw what really occured? It is hardly fair to my son and his family to use only the witnesses of the police.

"My dear Mr. Leaf, do all you possibly can to find someone to straighten this out. Any trouble that I am putting you to I am perfectly glad and willing to repay you for. And if you are not willing to work for that kind of remuneration, do it for humanity's sake. I and my family will be thankful forever to you and those people who are assisting.

"I am so far away and not able to speak the English language that even if I were there I should be able to do very little.

"Tell the Boston American and the Swedish newspaper Skandinavia that they have so bravely brought to light this horrible catastrope that I am obliged to them for their noble work and pray to God to bless the hours very gratefully.

"I, A. BERGSTADT,

"Karlsborg, Sweden."

Victim of Robbers.

There is a most sinister import to the facts found by the Sunday American in spite of police interference, and the intimidation of witnesses.

A young Bergstadt was set upon at last, it was robbed by one of the things which police interference are wont to protect with a club. His clubbing was a fatal error.

The young man was on his way to his ship from his boarding house when he met two sailors whom he knew. One of the things in that sort of the city joined the group unbidden and under pretext of doing Bergstadt the service of brushing off his new shore clothes, put his hand in the savings of his seven years at sea, all in Swedish bank notes, drawn for the purpose, taking proudly home to show his old father that the Bergstadt spirit of enterprise and independence was undiminished in him.

Bergstadt and his two friends chased the thief who ran out of the saloon through a back door and was pursued to another place where he ran in, locking the door after him. There, as the young sailor thumped up against the door the pick-pocket mucked him from within. The owner of this saloon is a police witness.

Every fibre in the boy was aroused, and he was trying to break down the door when along came Policeman William Kelley, of the Hanover street station. To him Bergstadt and his sailor companions were just so many wops, and he ran at them. He was soon joined by two other policemen.

Grabbing Bergstadt by the arm he told him he was under arrest. He resisted this treatment.

When Bergstadt regained consciousness in the hospital days later with his skull fractured, and told how he had been robbed and had done nothing to justify his arrest, the young fellow's utterances were mere "ravings" to those who heard him.

For three long weeks he "raved" and called on those about him to notify his father, to send word to his mother. Fortunately, before he sank into the coma which mercifully ended his agony, the hospital authorities did send for the Bergstadt woman with whom the sailor lodged and she with her daughter twice visited him.

Karl W. Leaf, a Quincy merchant, read of the boy's death in the Sunday American. He had known the boy from the time he held him on his knee. At once he sent a notice of his death and almost simultaneously one from Adolph Cohen of the Swedish paper Skandinavia, sent to the lad's parents. Mr. Leaf says that there never came out of Sweden a more honored youth.

"I have known him all his life and right up to a few weeks of his death," says Mr. Leaf, "and will swear that the boy was mild in manner, that he was extremely temperate in the use of stimulants.

"You cannot understand how deeply the Swedes feel about this case. My niece, Miss Ellen F. Brant, who was the boy's schoolmate and chum, weeps whenever his name is mentioned.

"Now suppose it was Governor Draper's only son," said Mr. Leaf. "Suppose he was elected Governor Mr. Draper was no higher relatively here than this boy's father in Sweden. He was just a rich merchant who was highly respected, as was Mr. Bergstadt. Suppose Mr. Draper had an only son, a bright, handsome American boy, one who had never given him a moment's sorrow.

"Then, supposing a letter came to Governor Draper or Commissioner O'Meara saying that his son had been clubbed to death in a foreign land. I ask the Governor now what he would have done had he received such a letter from a former Boston friend, say, in Karlsborg, had it been his son, had the boy been an American, the police Swedish.

Reversing the Case.

"I ask the people of Boston what they would have said had an American boy of spotless character been clubbed to death and his body left as one of the friendless, unclaimed dead in the morgue for many weeks, there to be discovered only by accident."

Mr. Leaf and the prominent Swedes who have interested themselves declare that the facts as given by them to the Sunday American will all be established under oath by reputable witnesses either before Judge Murray, when Vice-Consul Rosenqvist presents their wife, or laid before the Department of State at Washington, so they may be transmitted to Sweden and the oath removed from an honored name.

The police claim that an Italian who is a vital witness in the case had not been summoned because he had returned to Italy, and they had since been told that he had died there.

The man has been located by the Sunday American in Boston and has been given employment by a man of great prominence who has interested himself in the case.

This man has assured the Swedes who are demanding an investigation that it will fare ill with any one who dares to repeat threats made against this Italian.

This witness says he had been warned by two policemen that if he did not keep well in the background or dared to tell his story, a radically different one from their version, they would at once lock him up on a charge of having been implicated in the alleged resistance of Bergstadt and his companions.

At the Bergstadt inquest the police made the desperate move of trying to extend the "system" policy of ex-parte investigation into the very court itself. They went there in stealth. Before Judge Murray in the Municipal Court, they were permitted to go on with the "inquest" although the other side was absent. When a Sunday American reporter asked the judge if this was the custom of the court at inquests, if it were equitable, just and fair, he replied that he had not called the case, that it is still open and he will gladly hear further testimony "from responsible witnesses."

The Sunday American has been unable to discover any record of any attempt by either the police, the court officials or the District Attorney's office to find such "responsible persons" or to get their testimony.

VAHEY SAYS: 'OUST, O'MEARA; REMEDY POLICE EVILS"

"Killing of Swedish Sailor a Startling Disclosure; Public Should Resent It."

FOSS BLAMES BOSS RULE

Reply of Draper and Frothingham to American's Statement of Case Still Awaited.

THE Sunday American sent a letter yesterday to each of the four men who head the Republican and Democratic tickets giving the principal points in the case of Gustaf Bergstadt, the Swedish sailor clubbed to death by the Boston police. The letter was personally handed to each of the men who are asking for your suffrages, the Hon. Eben S. Draper, now Governor, who has on a former occasion stated that he has complete faith in Police Commissioner O'Meara; Lieutenant Governor Frothingham; the Hon. James H. Vahey and the Hon. Eugene N. Foss.

Governor Draper and Lieutenant Governor Frothingham said they would consider the facts stated and make reply, if they thought one necessary, as soon as possible. Up to a late hour last night neither had made answer to the Sunday American's questions.

Mr. Vahey said that if he is elected Governor, and the facts prove to be as stated in this newspaper to-day, he would immediately remove Commissioner O'Meara from office.

Mr. Foss said the trouble seems to be the rule of the Boss from Beacon Hill, and the denial to the people of Home Rule. He thought the social status of the boy clubbed to death immaterial, and declared for equal protection under the laws of the Commonwealth for rich and poor.

The statement made by Mr. Vahey follows:

Startling Disclosure.

Editor Boston American:

The state of affairs disclosed in your letter of the 23d instant is a startling disclosure. Every man, woman and child who walks the streets has a vital interest in this case.

The police are said to protect our citizens from lawlessness and violence. They must themselves by their lives and conduct represent the supremacy and majesty of the law which they are sworn to uphold. If your statement of the case is accurate not only the Swedish people, but the entire united and law-abiding citizen mind, with righteous indignation, resent this indignity.

You ask me what I would do if I became Governor of Massachusetts to prevent the repetition of this ill treatment of the subject of another nation, or perhaps one of our own citizens. My answer to this question as it is, not as we think it ought to be.

The only remedy for the condition you say exists is the immediate removal of the Police Commissioner.

The fundamental objection to the present system is that the citizens of this city are entitled to home rule, which they do not get.

The tendency of the Republican machine of late years is to destroy home rule for political purposes. We have a recent recording on the city charter at issue; the people have not the right to reject both; they must take either. The same condition exists in Fall River, Taunton and other cities of the state.

The next step will be to interfere with town government. It must be stopped.

You are doing great work in behalf of home rule government as outlined in the Democratic state platform. Hope you will keep it up until you have aroused public opinion sufficiently to stop the Legislature from unwarrantable interference with local self-government."

JAMES H. VAHEY.

Foss Declares Stand.

"As Lieutenant-Governor of the Commonwealth, I could do nothing in an official capacity, as it would not come before me. I believe in Home Rule for the cities of Massachusetts and I believe that most of our troubles are due to the fact that we haven't Home Rule. We are suffering from governed from Beacon Hill by the Lodge machine.

"I want a Greater Boston, all these towns within cities should be governed under a federation plan and the whole city to be governed somewhat after the London plan, by a large council. The responsibility for government must be placed on the people.

"Now, under Boss rule from Beacon Hill, the people don't take proper interest in how they are governed, and we have troubles wholly due to not having the responsibility of government placed on the people. Whether this unfortunate Swedish boy was the son of wealthy parents or the child of homeless folk, has no bearing on the case, as he was entitled to the fullest protection under our laws, no matter what his rank in life."

OSBURN KISS MAY BRING BOSTON BRIDE TO NAVY

MISS FRANCES H. INGERSOLL

Beautiful Miss Ingersoll Met Lieutenant In Home of Naval Constructor Evans.

A ROMANCE of the navy that recalls the famous kiss divorce sensation in which handsome Lieutenant Franklin Wayne Osburn, known as "Boy" Osburn, figured, promises to reach its natural fruition next February by the marriage of Lieutenant Holden C. Evans to the beautiful Miss Frances H. Ingersoll of Boston.

To be sure, Miss Ingersoll refuses to confirm her engagement to the naval officer, even going so far as to declare that she hasn't been asked, but she admits that she corresponds with him and is greatly interested to him. As Evans will not be free to marry until February, according to the provisions of his divorce decree, it can be seen that neither he nor Miss Ingersoll would desire that any intention to wed be made known until after that time.

The marital disruption of the Evanses at Vallejo, Cal., was the subject of considerable gossip last Winter. Osburn and Evans were friends, and when the boyish looking lieutenant visited the Evans family the husband did not dream that his fine-looking visitor was being attracted by his handsome wife. One day his eyes were opened, and slipping from the house in company with a brother officer, they found Osburn and Mrs. Evans in the parlor, and the young man was kissing her ardently.

"You Must Marry My Wife."

Evans accosted the couple.

"You must marry my wife," declared Evans, "or I will court martial you and ruin your career."

Osburn said that he was willing. But Mrs. Evans demurred.

"It is true that he kissed me, but what of that?" asked the woman. "I shall not marry him."

Evans and his wife were divorced and into his life came Miss Ingersoll, one of Boston's most charming and beautiful girls. Miss Ingersoll had been visiting the family of Naval Constructor Evans at Vallejo and while there she and Evans saw a lot of each other. When Miss Ingersoll returned to Boston it was said that she left her heart behind her in the Golden West and that she had received her hand to the gallant naval officer.

But Miss Ingersoll would not admit an engagement when seen at her home, 124 Mt. Vernon street, Boston.

"Why," she declared, "I am not even engaged to Lieutenant Evans. I do not know how this story got started. I was in Vallejo last winter and did not meet the lieutenant until March. Then I returned in April, so you see that we did not have much time to get acquainted.

Hasn't Even Proposed.

"The whole thing places me in a most embarrassing and unhappy position. Lieutenant Evans has not asked me to be his wife and I am sure that the announcement did not come from him. If it did, it is very strange for a man to announce an engagement before he has even asked the girl in the case whether she would marry him or not.

"I have corresponded with Lieutenant Evans since my return, I am willing to admit. In fact, I am perfectly willing to admit all that is the truth.

"I suppose gossiping people have made surmises and guesses and you know what naval circles are? If two persons walk out together, people set them down as engaged.

Miss Ingersoll said it was still undecided when the story started. It was:

"Well, that is a hard question to ask a girl," she returned. "When can a girl say when the man in the case hasn't proposed?"

Miss Ingersoll said it was still undecided whether or not she would visit in Vallejo again this winter. She is a fascinating girl of the brunette type, of refined and cultured taste and the possessor of a remarkable musical voice.

Shadow Comes in Life.

The first Mrs. Evans was also a beautiful brunette. Before she met the dashing naval officer, she was Maude Merwin, a London music hall singer.

The shattering of their romance was most dramatic. Only six days before Evans and Osburn sailed on the maiden voyage and the launching of the giant steel collier Prometheus, the suggestion that a divorce suit be ever attempted and made from his own despicable conduct was presented to him with his beautiful wife leaning on his arm. His little daughter, then ten years old, broke the bottle of wine over the ship's prow on the launching and the two were there to witness and all the wealth and pride of San Francisco looking on.

It was the triumph for which he had toiled. For many years Evans had devoted his life to the navy, but never before had he turned out such a magnificent piece of work. It was the fulfilment of one of his most cherished dreams, of which he had written many times for the magazines. Six days later, on Christmas afternoon, he left a sick bed and went into the parlor of his home to find his wife in the embrace of "Boy" Osburn.

That was the end of happiness for Evans until he saw Miss Ingersoll. He fell in love with her at first sight, and it is fondly believed that the pretty Boston girl is destined to become the reigning beauty of the naval circle.

LIEUTENANT HOLDEN C. EVANS.

Navy officer and Boston girl whom it is said he will wed.

SEEK LENOX BURGLARS.

Former Secret Service Man Visits Society Colony.

LENOX, Oct. 23.—Unknown to Lenox society R. D. Redfern, a former U. S. Secret Service man who, as the special friend of the late Senator Mark Hanna, conducted the famous tour of former President Roosevelt in the West in the second McKinley campaign, watched the Lenox home show this afternoon. It was said that his visit was caused by the recent robbery at the villa of Frederick Butt, the master of hounds of the Berkshire Hunt Club, whose wife was robbed of jewelry worth several thousand dollars last Sunday night by a porch-climber. On the next night an attempt was made to enter the villa of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Frothingham at Overlea.

DRAPER ARRAIGNED IN LABOR CIRCULAR

Federation Asks His Defeat to Resent Veto of Eight-Hour Bill.

Governor Draper is severely arraigned in a series of special circulars being sent out by the campaign committee of the State Branch of the Federation of Labor. All workingmen are urged to vote and work against him because of his attitude on the eight-hour bill. Reception on the Governor's part is one of the charges, and the general indictment asserts that "He is unfit to be Governor."

The first two of the circulars were mailed yesterday. The members of every trade union in the State will be reached with these special appeals, and advised to make strenuous efforts to bring about the defeat of Draper. The campaign committee precede the attitude of Eugene N. Foss on the eight-hour bill without mentioning Mr. Foss by name. It implies that the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor was deceived by those who asked him to sign the petition for the bill and that the real nature of the petition was misrepresented.

On this point the campaign committee of organized labor of the State says:

Say Letters Were Misleading.

"We say we have no grievance with the manufacturers who signed the protest because the protest has no bearing on our bill. We say defeat Draper because he knew the protest had no bearing. If Draper doesn't know it, he should know it and hides behind the deception he now says was made to him in either case he is unfit to be governor. Draper vetoed our bill. Knowing as Worcester he said he will veto it next year if it comes to him.

"To make sure that it will not come to him, defeat him. Workingmen, we want an eight-hour bill that cannot be evaded."

In another of the special circulars he says:

"The Employers' Association inaugurated a system of sending misleading letters to all the manufacturers in the State to have them sign the same and mail them, asking the Governor to veto the eight-hour bill, when our bill in no way interfered with those manufacturers."

As regards the bill itself, and in refutation of the claim that it either was drastic or against the interest of private capital, the circulars state that:

"Labor unions seeking to make effective the present eight-hour law, which applies only to State, county, city and town laborers and contractors, so far as their labor is concerned. As it now stands it is next to impossible to secure a conviction.

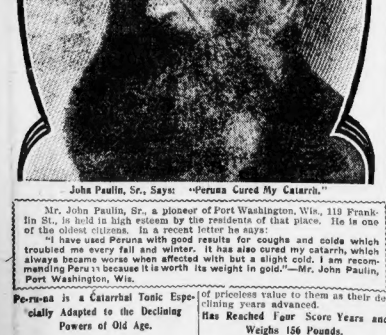
Issue 100,000 Circulars.

"The eight-hour bill presented by the Massachusetts State Branch, A. F. of L., was in the interest of the employes of the city, town and State of this Commonwealth, directly or indirectly employed, directly, excluding contracts for the purchase of materials or supplies, thus aiding the destroying of the padrone system which is going on in this State, and which promises ever more to grow."

An issue of 100,000 of these circulars are being sent out. They will also be distributed in every factory where the State Federation of Labor campaign committee places its literature. The speaking campaign of the labor men opens Monday, when Frederick J. Kneeland, a member of the committee, is to address a street meeting at Gloucester. Other speakers are to be sent to the trade unions direct, and the committee having established a headquarters at the Quincy House, the fight against Draper will be pushed vigorously.

A WISCONSIN PIONEER

Says Pe-ru-na is "Worth its Weight in Gold."



John Paulin, Sr., Says: "Peruna Cured My Catarrh."

Mr. John Paulin, Sr., a pioneer of Franklin St., is held in high esteem by the residents of that place. He is one of the oldest citizens. In a recent letter he says:

"I have used Peruna with good results for coughs and colds which troubled me every fall and winter. It has also cured my catarrh, which always became worse when affected with but a slight cold. I am recommending Peruna because it is worth its weight in gold."—Mr. John Paulin, Port Washington, Wis.

Port Washington, Wis., 119 Franklin St.,

Pe-ru-na is a Catarrhal Tonic Especially Adapted to the Declining Powers of Old Age.

Hale and hearty old age means simply healthy organs and healthy functions retained beyond the usual time.

As a rule, at the age of 60 or 70 years, the functions begin to wane and the various organs to lose their natural power.

This need not occur. At least not in all cases. Many a man and woman have retained their health and vigor much later in life.

We have on file several letters from octogenarians who have found Peruna of priceless value to them as their declining years advanced.

Has Reached Four Score Years and Weighs 156 Pounds.

Mr. Levi Kegg, Rainsburg, Pa., writes:

"Your medicine has done me so much good I intend to keep it on hand all the time.

"I had all the symptoms of systemic catarrh. My eyes were red and inflamed, my throat, stomach and bowels troubled me, was nervous, had nervous headaches. I am now entirely cured by Peruna.

"I am eighty years old, and I never weighed more than 140, but now I weigh 156 pounds."

Mrs. Hibbard Will Play 'Rosa Dartle,' Famous Character in Dickens' Novel

The Mayor's Wife.

MRS. GEORGE A. HIBBARD.

Mayor's Wife to Make Up as Disfigured Spinster for Art's Sake, in Women's Amateur Theatricals.

FEW women like to make themselves unattractive, even on the stage, but Mrs. George A. Hibbard, the beautiful wife of the Mayor of Boston, has agreed to do this when she appears as "Rosa Dartle," Dickens's character in "David Copperfield" at the Franklin Square House on Tuesday evening at an entertainment for the benefit of the Mt. Pleasant Home for Aged Couples.

"Of course, the character of Rosa Dartle is a horrible one," said Mrs. Hibbard, "but I love to play the part and I love to act."

This is the description of Rosa Dartle that Dickens gives:

Dickens' Rosa Dartle.

There was a second lay in the dining room of a slight, short figure, dark, and not agreeable to look at, but with some appearance of good looks too, who attracted my attention; perhaps because I had not expected to see her; perhaps because I found myself sitting opposite to her; perhaps because of some thing really remarkable in her.

She had black hair and eager black eyes, and was thin and had a scar upon her lip. It was an old scar—I should rather call it scars, for it was not discolored and had healed years ago — which had once cut through her mouth downward through her chin, but was now barely visible across the table, except above and on her upper lip, the shape of which it had altered.

I concluded in my own mind that she was about thirty years of age, and that she wished to be married. She was a little dilapidated—like a house—with having been so long to let; yet had, as I have said, an appearance of good looks, for thinness seemed to be the effect of some wasting fire within her, which found a vent in her gaunt eyes.

She was introduced as Miss Dartle, and both Steerforth and his mother called her Rosa, and I found that she lived there and had been for a long time Mrs. Steerforth's companion. It appeared to me that she never said anything that she wanted to say, outright; but hinted it and made a great deal more of it by this practice.

"I Am the Villain."

"I have been acting in different amateur performances since I was a child, and I think the work is intensely interesting," continued Mrs. Hibbard. "Rosa Dartle is a difficult character to play and I have spent a great deal of time in perfecting myself in the part.

"I suppose I am the villain of the performance.

"The play we are giving is based on the different characters of Charles Dickens. It is called 'Dickens' Remonstrants' and shows the different 'freak' characters of the great author at the 'Red Lion' Inn in London, where they have assembled to complain at the way the author used them in making them play their parts in fiction. When all the other characters are holding an indignation meeting I come in and add to the general discomfort with the terrible 'Rosa Dartle.'

"Adolphe Rothe makes me up to look the part. I have a twisted lip and wear a riding habit of the fifties. Mr. Rothe spent much time in studying the character. It is supposed to be true to the time when the fictitious 'Rosa Dartle' lived. My part is only five minutes long, but it is a hard five minutes of acting."

Scene in the "Red Lion."

The play itself, which runs fifty minutes, was written by Mrs. Alice P. Bates of Ashmont. It gives a scene in the "Red Lion Inn" in London. The Thursday Morning Fortnightly Club of Dorchester, of which Mrs. Hibbard is a past first vice president, is in charge of the entertainment.

Mrs. W. C. Brooks has charge of the music. The officers are: President, Mrs. Alice P. Bates; first vice-president, Mrs. Annis L. Burr; second vice-president, Mrs. Lottie B. Feibelmann; treasurer, Mrs. Mary A. Ivey; press correspondent, Miss Adelia T. Libby. The object of the association of women is literary and philanthropic.

WILL CONFIRM 150.

Following Dedication of St. Patrick's Church, Cambridge.

Archbishop O'Connell will officiate this afternoon at 3:30 at the dedication of St. Patrick's Church, Berkshire and York streets, Cambridge. Mgr. Splaine will act as master of ceremonies. After the dedication the Archbishop will confer the sacrament confirmation on 150 children of the congregation. The dedication sermon will be preached by the Rev. John T. O'Brien of St. Peter's Church, Lowell. The new church is the result of the division of the Sacred Heart parish, and is due largely to the efforts of the Rev. Lawrence W. Slattery, the pastor.

Chinaman Fights Deportation.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Gong Tang, a Chinese boy, recently ordered deported by Commissioner Taylor of Washington, has appealed to the District Supreme Court, and pending a hearing before Justice Stafford has been released on $1,000 bonds. The boy was arrested on the charge that he had been smuggled over the Canadian border.

TEACHERS IN SESSION.

Boston Men Teachers at Annual Convention.

SALEM, Oct. 23.—Several teachers from Boston were among the speakers at the seventh annual convention of the High School Commercial Teachers' Association of New England at the State Normal School to-day. All discussed the relation of the high school pupil with business life.

Among those who spoke were Frank B. Thompson, principal of the High School of Commerce, Boston, on "Want the High School is Doing for thePupil;" Harry J. Clark of Clark's Commercial School, Boston, "How to Secure Accuracy in Shorthand;" Winthrop Tirrell, of the High School of Commerce, Boston, "Importance of Economy in Commercial Training," and Edward S. Cotton of Brookline, "What Businesses Are Best Taught in Bookkeeping."

He also got the sweepstakes prize of $20 for the best box of Baldwins, the prizes for the best barrel and the best barrel of Baldwins grown in New Hampshire. J. F. Moore of Boscawen, N. H., won the sweepstakes prize for the best barrel of Rhode Island greenings, for the best box of the same kind, and the prize for the best box of greenings grown in New Hampshire.

CUT BY FALLING GLASS.

Passenger Escapes Rock Thrown at New York Express.

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 23.—While L. J. Strause, of No. 451 Broadway, New York, was on the New York express to Boston, he was seriously cut by flying glass which followed the hitting of a rock through the car window. The police are working on the case.

FATAL RUNAWAY CRASH.

Salem Man Thrown to Street Dying from Injuries.

SALEM, Oct. 23.—As the result of a runaway here to-day, Frank P. Williams, sixty-seven years of age, of No. 1 Central street, is dying in the Salem Hospital. His left eye was destroyed, and his left leg and left arm broken. He also sustained internal injuries. Williams was driving a horse owned by George E. Wells, a grocer, when the horse became frightened at an electric car, bolted, and dashed into a tree. The force of the collision threw Williams from the wagon.

Another Judge Harlan.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 23.—The rumor here is insistent that Interstate Commerce Commissioner James S. Harlan, son of Supreme Court Justice Harlan, is to be appointed by President Taft federal district judge for Chicago to succeed Judge Bethea. The possibility of a vacancy being thus created in the Interstate commerce commission has occasioned much speculation as to the possible selection to fill the place. It is assumed at the outset that the position would go to Illinois.

ARREST EX-CONGRESSMAN

Van Duser Accused of Not Paying $97 Hotel Bill.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 23.—Clarence D. Van Duser, former Congressman from Nevada, is in the Central Police Station on a charge of issuing a suspicious person. While in Pittsburg three years ago he stopped at the Fort Pitt Hotel, and it is alleged that he forgot to settle a bill of $97. Van Duser registered at the Colonial last night under the name of P. H. Harris of Chicago. He was recognized as the man who had sold mining stocks to many Pittsburg ministers, and they told the police.

Prefers Death to Cell.

Rosa Baum, sixty years old, of No. 653 Massachusetts avenue, threatened yesterday to cut her throat rather than go to the Charles street jail. The woman had been arrested charged with sending improper letters through the mails. She was arraigned before Commissioner Hayes Thursday, but adjourned to go to $300 bail until yesterday. Then when the Commissioner postponed the case until next Tuesday and told her she would have to go to jail she went into hysterics.

DEATH FOR A NEGRO.

Maryland Law for His Crime Means the Gallows.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Maryland Justice will be given the opportunity to inflict the death penalty on Walter Ford, a negro who, yesterday, at a lonely spot on the road near Landover, Md., attacked and robbed Florence Harvey, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Clinton Harvey, a farmer living near Glendale. Prince George's county, that State. Ford's crime, to which he confessed, to-day is punishable in Maryland by the death penalty.

Boy Rescues Sister.

Nine-year-old Colin McGilvary, of No. 127 Auburn street, Cambridge, is being praised by his parents and friends for his pluck in rescuing his seven-year-old sister, Anna, from a would-be kidnaper. On Friday night Colin and Anna were coming home from a neighbor's. A man handed the boy a penny, telling him to go to Kennedy's factory where he was wanted. As with a gray mustache he was wanted. As with a gray mustache he was wanted. As with a gray mustache he was wanted. As with a gray mustache he was wanted. As the man began to drag the little girl away with him. Colin came back on the run, yelling for help. He flew at the kidnaper and drove him away.

A Sale of Tailored Suits at $28.50

That Will Be a Positive Revelation in Style, Fit, Quality and Workmanship at the Price

When the manufacturer of these suits, who makes the high-class models sold in the leading Boston and New York Stores, approached us with a proposition to take off his hands about 500 tailored suits, with which he was overstocked on account of the continued warm weather, we refused and made a proposition of our own. Second Floor.

We would take EVERY SUIT HE HAD IN STOCK at our OWN price and make it a sale that would set the entire New England States talking about the wonderful styles and qualities for $28.50 at Henry Siegel Co.'s.

These suits undoubtedly have never been equalled in Boston for $28.50. Each particular model fits so smoothly and hangs so gracefully that it could not be distinguished from the $50.00 or $60.00 model of the high-priced ladies' tailor. They are suits for those who have never worn ready-to-wear suits before; suits for those who have always paid $40.00, $50.00 and $60.00.

Sale begins at 9 O'Clock Monday morning, and we have your size in just the style you want and just the color you want or black.

Boston's smartest dressers will recognize this as a suit-buying occasion so unusual that it will be their most important duty this week to attend this sale. Those who have never worn our suits before, but are wedded to some other store or tailor shop, will be unable to resist the magnetism of these powerful values. It will be a veritable suit-buying carnival, unsurpassed and unequalled.

The illustrations will give you an idea of the rare beauty of four of these models.

One style at $28.50 is a rich broadcloth suit copied from an expensive imported model. The coat is 45 inches long, elaborately braided and lined with guaranteed satin. The skirt has embroidered panel and side-plaited effect. This suit comes in black and the popular shades of the day. Special, $28.50

Another extremely fine model of broadcloth with 45-inch coat, button-through style. The long satin Tuxedo collar effect will win many patrons for this suit. The design in braid forms a very effective trimming. The buttons are self-covered. The skirt box plaited, panel side plaits, $28.50

Another model is the three-piece suit of fine broadcloth, embroidered in contrasting colored braid. The coat is 46 inches long, lined with guaranteed satin, while the princess dress is made on the Messenger-lined, braid trimmed, military collar, side kilted skirt effect. This suit is so carefully finished that it would be taken anywhere for a much higher priced model. Special, $28.50

Still another model in the diagonal weave in the new 45-inch coat with Tuxedo collar effect of satin. This is the three-button style coat. Skirt has panel front, yoke and side-kilted effect. Special, $28.50

$28.50 $28.50 $28.50 $28.50

MAX NORDAU ARRAIGNS SPAIN FOR THE KILLING OF FRANCISCO FERRER

Special Cable to Boston American.

BY MAX NORDAU.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—In all the countries of Europe and in some of the republics of South American storms of indignation are raging over the execution of Ferrer. Thousands of men, women and children are marching the streets, keeping time to the thundering cry: "Long live Ferrer! Down with the murderers!"

The important newspapers always on the side of law and order, brand the King and the Government of Spain with words that fall like drops of molten lead.

Mayors, decorated by the King's own hand, have sent back his star.

Scholars of worldwide renown have written to the Academy of Sciences at Madrid, asking that their names be struck off the roll.

Hundreds of popular meetings have adopted resolutions expressing to the Spanish Government in the strongest terms its own different language the loathing and contempt of honest men.

Representatives of Spain must everywhere be greeted by a crowd hurling the street demonstrations.

Certainly the Church alone could do public opinion in civilized countries is doing since it has afforded Spain such an interdict by the condemnation of the authors of Ferrer's death.

Spain's Hypocritical Policy.

The clerical and conservative newspapers in Paris, Berlin, Rome and Vienna in those last few days contain cautious leading articles that read as if by agreement they were playing variations on this frivolity:

What an impropriety to criticize the sentence of the Barcelona court martial! What right have foreigners to interfere in to the home affairs of a nation! Is not every nation master in its own house? Ferrer's offense was to Spain. Why should any one in a foreign country presume to lay down the law to her or how she will treat her culprits?

Seldom has a bad conscience found a subtler defense.

Every nation is master in its own house certainly, but there are actions that are the neighbor's fair and content him to step in.

That has always been admitted even by governments that otherwise always observe the greatest respect for treaties, statutes and law.

It is easier a fortnight since the delegates of the Great Powers made representations to Sultan Mulay Hafid becoming the vast intrigues and cruelty manifested the captive followers of the vanquished Rogul and Hafid himself. Morocco is an independent country; this fact has been proclaimed by solemn treaty. It almost seems as if world's war because certain powers would not peaceably enough accord his independence, but although Mulay Hafid has been subjected to torture and death by his own house, foreign governments would not permit him to act in accordance with the laws of his country in order to punish the miscreants and their abettors due to the Hots and thus bring him alive.

It is not the same thing. The hypocrites who declared for Spain's Government object to Morocco's barbarous country. The civilized powers, the natural guardians of humanity, have a right to step in when it transgression in respect to regular form upon point, there is no such right; that alone was not of this opinion when King Ferdinand of Naples savagely revived his reign on the Italian patriots who and fallen into his clutches.

Gladstone's Honest Anger.

The English statesman did not hesitate a moment before interfering in the interior affairs of an independent kingdom of the Two Sicilies. His flaming denunciation of the atrocities of the Neapolitan jail affronted the cause of Italian unity offered as much as the armed intervention of Napoleon III. in Lombardy.

Twenty years later the same Mr. Gladstone was the impassioned accuser of the unspeakable Turk. His eloquence inspired for the cause of the tortured Bulgarians and Armenians. Indeed, it does not yet events that changed the face of southeastern Europe.

There is something that is more than the independence of a people, more than the noble goal to the evolution of humanity. More sovereign than the sovereignty of a state is the sovereignty of foreign will has not existed for a long time; it is no more perfectly respected. It still exists and observed, and does not yet speak with perfect freedom. It does not yet give sufficiently strong expression to be made use of it there, and it does.

It is the last fruit of the civilization; its noblest and the incentive and humanity, the first types of our species always had the most powerful effect. It is a moral control—not of appeal that should control and influence the doings of foreign will one that could summon kings and nations before the tribunal of the peoples. One week against the powerful to prevent crime disguised under loyalty from being perpetrated on the most sacred and natural right.

The Bar of Public Opinion.

Henry the Fourth of France designed a scheme for a kind of United States of Europe, a Sanhedrim of all Christian powers, who should be the supreme court of appeal in the home affairs of a nation. It was defeats for the peace and righteousness of all nations. The murderous acts of the Hawaiian Queen, the Russian Czar, the tangible form to his plan. That which the Pope who not in the Middle Ages had which Henry the Fourth's Sanhedrim of monarchs would probably not have come public opinion in our free lands, 50 years earlier, suffices to compel under a pretext of legality; it takes to task the most oppressing governments and even a whole people for unheeded perpetrated against the inalienable rights of humanity, against the sacred majesty of personality endowed with a soul.

Its authority is so great that despots mad with power tremble before it, the conscience of humanity armed and speaks through her bravery. Spain has been thrown from the circle of civilized nations into the sea. The conscience of humanity protested against the Modern Inquisition caused Arguelles to be slaughtered; it has saved the life of Mulay Hafid; it has not let the murderer by the threat it was because a portion of the European governments is not ruled by conscience, but by a traditional and financial influence. Also in the case of Russian pogroms, the conscience of humanity did not do its duty; this was because it was only in the beginning, so to speak, but that it will develop into the most powerful court of appeal against Ferrer's assassins is a hopeful sign.

N. Y. ANARCHISTS SHOUT FOR FERRER

Goldman and Berkman Speak at Carnegie Hall Protest Meeting.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—The Anarchists of the city this evening held a mass meeting in Carnegie Hall to protest against the execution of Professor Francesco Ferrer. Leonard D. Abbott presided and the principal speakers were Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman. Both denounced in unmistakable terms the "murder of Ferrer, and Berkman promised the death of King Alfonso as a result of his refusal to reprieve Ferrer.

Miss Goodman's attack on the Catholic Church was the most violent that the press of America had been assembled, evoked much applause from the 1,000 men and women in the audience, which was composed mainly of persons of foreign birth.

Before the meeting there was a parade from Madison Square up Fifth avenue to Carnegie Hall. The parade in Madison Square, which was participated in by 600 men and women, carrying red banners with black borders, would have been a tame affair had it not been for the origin of the cry: "Down with the church" and "Oh, Christ, tell us who killed Ferrer," which shouted when St. Patrick's Cathedral and the other churches were passed.

WHITE GIRL WEDS CHINESE.

Mabel Williams Bride of Oxford Place Merchant.

Mabel Williams, pretty and twenty-one, became the bride of Yee "Fat" Wah, of No. 10 Oxford place yesterday afternoon. They have gone to housekeeping at the groom's home. Mr. Wah is a native of Yee Wah, the mayor of Chinatown. The "fat" is used to distinguish him from the many Yee Wahs of the city.

Mabel blushed all over the city registrar's office in the old court house and nearly fainted when the clerk John Breen, who wanted a marriage license, she explained. The clerk was surprised. Pretty girls do not often come alone for marriage licenses, and when she told her name Mabel Williams, and her address as No. 10 Union Park street. She was born in New York. "The bridegroom's name?" asked Clerk Breen.

"Yee Wah," came the answer, "residence at No. 10 Oxford place and his occupation is that of a merchant." Clerk Breen made out the license and the girl blushed her way out of the office.

Last night Mrs. Wah refused to tell where she had been since she had been married. "We love each other and we have been married. That is all she volunteered.

Injured By Automobile.

Timothy Devine of No. 308 Codman street, Dorchester, while crossing the street in front of his home yesterday afternoon, was seriously injured when he was run down by an automobile, owned by George F. Smith of No. 18 Huntington avenue.

KISSES AND ANGEL'S FACE IN LOVE SUIT

Fitchburg Man Bases $10,000 Alienation Action on Love of Fervent Letters.

FITCHBURG, Oct. 23.—Many "X's," presumably meaning kisses, and drawings representing "Little Eva" of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" soaring to heaven illuminate the great batch of love missive upon which Jean B. Cossaboom bases a suit for $10,000, which he has brought against Alexander A. Harrington, a village blacksmith, Leominster, for the alleged alienation of his wife's affections.

In the letters and postcards which gay blacksmith is accused of writing to Mrs. Cossaboom, the wife of another, has caused Cossaboom much mental suffering because he has not been able to find out the exact words of affection which he can only guess at. Occasionally the ardent wooer breaks into verse. This is a sample:

This is he only girl I love,
My sweet and been that fairy;
Of a r I dream and in my heart
Her picture I always carry.
I'm love to very fine
When I know the gun comes!

An Invitation to Graves.

Cossaboom says that until Harrington came into their life about three years ago he and his wife were most contented. He held that not only did Harrington write letters to his wife, but nearly every week he has made a trip to Gardner and placed flowers on the graves of Mrs. Cossaboom's parents. Then, to be sure, that his beloved affinity would know that it was he who placed the flowers there he took his card and wrote a few sentiments, which would be found next day by the woman.

Harrington declares that the feeling that he has for Mrs. Cossaboom is one which is not that of love, but of pure friendship. This statement was made before Harrington's counsel before the letters in question came into possession. Harrington said, "You can see, I consider this whole affair as a joke. I know of no reason why I should be sued. I do not take the matter seriously, and have not even engaged counsel."

Besides is a letter solidified by closer bonds, which he claims Harrington wrote:

"My Darling Little Wife."

"My Darling Little Wife—God bless you. I feel better than I have since I left you. I will write you a long time to-night and I hope you are feeling the best. O darling, I see everything is right and you now have to work harder my instructions. The evil has been cut out and I am here. I must see you right away. I will not write much about this affair, but I must see you. Don't get nervous, all will be over soon.

I will tell you now what is going on. A couple called here about 2 o'clock in the evening, said he had an ad, from a paper that Cossaboom of Gardner had rented for him. He was not satisfied, and he would not print it until he saw me.

I was busy, so told him to come in the next morning, and he said he would. Then I will talk with him and I will give him some points which will be published. Don't say a word till you see me. Now look out when you say, even one word will go out in print. Leave this to me alone. I will be busy to-night, if I am alone. Now act for me as I have acted for you and look out things. If you come here be careful as you can. Still, no one can help it. I will look for you any time. Will be all alone.

Don't fret. No harm has been done. Keep a tight rein on all. I must go to work right away. Bye bye, little darling girl. I have lots of XXXX for my darling little pet.

From your life and loving ——. It all for my loving and true little wife XXXXXXX

Burn this note.

Opens His Heart.

Another letter was received some time ago by Mrs. Cossaboom after the writer had returned to Leominster from a short vacation. In this letter the writer "opens up his heart" to his "darling little Eva" as follows:

Darling little Eva: I am home again. O darling, how can I stand it. God bless you. I know you are as good to me and I have so much feeling for you and your dear face as I know it beats alone for me. I know there is no other love. No matter what comes, my heart is open to receive you at all cost. Darling, I know you would not take the life of one you love so dearly, and you know you promised to be my darling little wife. I have not forgotten the pounds you made me from those tender and inviting lips that I have pressed to mine. No one but God can take them from me.

At the end of this loving epistle were two lines of jumbled letters which it is thought belonged to a code used by the writer and the woman. Among the belongings of Mrs. Cossaboom was found a number of drawings with a message attached. One picture showed a figure with wings supposed to represent "Little Eva" going to heaven and underneath was written:

Little Eva, as I see her in my dreams. Darling, this is too true. As I awoke last evening to open my eyes, I saw you coming to me just as I now see and I am holding out my arms to meet you.

On a postcard with a picture of an angel was written: "To my darling Eva. I thought of you much to-day. I dislike to see these days waned but cannot help it now."

At the bottom of the postal the code was once more in evidence.

On another postal was written:

I wish you were here. May see you soon. Don't go into the cold, dear, as this is bad weather to be in the cold.

After drawing a picture of an angel flying over housetops, the following was written underneath:

"To my poor little Eva, who tried to keep her blue eyes open, but she fell asleep. 'Tis so close and stupid and dull and warm and I hold her safe in my tired arms.

Another postal contains the following:

It is a lovely poem for those that are happy. I hope you pass good sweet Eva. I did not very well.

Father Left Her $20,000.

Mrs. Cossaboom was the daughter of Benjamin Hallips, a former well-known resident of Gardner, who left his daughter about $20,000 when he passed away, about three years ago. The Cossaboom own a good home in a good section of Gardner, and the husband has an interesting. He has been employed for twenty years at Bent Bros. chair shop. Harrington and his wife are separated. One night several years ago there was trouble between them, and Mrs. Harrington, about midnight, jumped out of a two-story window, lightly clothed, and ran into Monadnock Square, where she attracted a crowd by her cries. Some of the men who gathered about her gave her their overcoats to protect her from the cold.

About five years ago Harrington's wife left him, and the court gave her separate support.

Metropolitan Founder Dead.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Edward A. Jones, who founded the Metropolitan Life Insurance company of New York, and raised the first $200,000 of its working capital, died today at No. 273 Springdale avenue, East Orange, N. J., of kidney trouble. He was eighty-five years old and was a native of Wales.

THREE DISTINGUISHED VISITORS FROM JAPAN AT PRESENT IN BOSTON

TORCHES LIGHT SQUARE.

1915 Illumination in Front of Old Art Museum.

Copley Square presented a unique appearance last night during the first test of the thirty-five flaming torches erected in front of the old Art Museum building for the "1915" Boston Exposition, which is to open there one week from Monday. They attracted a great deal of attention. These lights form one of the most novel outdoor illuminating effects ever produced in the city.

Japanese Baron Lauds New England Industry At Brilliant Banquet

An impressive tribute to New England and its people was paid by Baron Shibusawa, chairman of the Japanese Commercial Commissioners, at the dinner tendered the Commissioners by the Boston Chamber of Commerce at the Algonquin Club last night.

"When we entered New England we found ourselves in a country very different from that part of the United States we had passed through," he said. "There there no great natural resources, and yet we have been created an industry, a commerce and a civilization of which you may justly proud. In the progress of Japan, also, we find there are lessons for Japan, which equally unfortunate in its natural resources and the sterileness of its soil. To my mind the great secret of advancement is not natural resources so much as certain human qualities. The men of New England resembled those of Japan which sprung up on stony soil. They may not attain the mushroom growth of those favored with everything easy for their development, but what they gain they hold for all time.

"We bear no official message to the United States, but all Japan is interested in our visit, and it cannot but result in closer relations between the two nations."

Speeches Are Translated.

About 120 persons were present at the dinner. The Japanese and Boston merchants mingled at the usual tables, and opportunities were given for intimate conversation. President James J. Storrow of the Boston Chamber of Commerce presided. Baron Shibusawa discovered that Mr. Storrow as a graduate of the Lawrence Scientific School, which opened Japan to the world, and expressed his delight and surprise at meeting him for that reason.

The speech of the Baron was translated into English by Motosada Zumoto and the speeches of the Americans were translated into Japanese by Zumoto and Consul General Mitsuno.

Toastmaster Storrow called upon Frederick P. Fish, chairman of the State Board of Education, to speak for the State. Professor E. S. Morse of the Peabody Museum in Salem was called upon as the most distinguished Japanese scholar in New England.

An impressive feature of the banquet was the letter to the Mikado and to the President of the United States. Baron Shibusawa, as grand master of the ceremonies, called his letter to the Emperor, raised his glass and shouted "Banzai" and the other Japanese guests responded with deep-throated banzais.

Visitors Have Busy Day.

A very busy day was spent yesterday by the delegation from Japan. There are fifty-nine of the visitors from the land of cherry blossoms, the chafing six women. They represent the Chambers of Commerce of Tokio, Yokohama, Osaka, Kyoto and Kobe. When they joined the Dutch Santos in one of the finest special trains that was ever made up in the country they were met by a delegation from the Boston Chamber of Commerce, consisting of Congressman J. W. Weeks, Walter C. Fish, George W. Brown, Erwin H. Walcott and Shigeiro Yamanaka.

One of the newspaper men in the party is Motosada Zumoto, editor of the Japan Times of Tokio. It is the only newspaper published by Japanese in Japan in English. At the head of the visiting commissioners is Baron Eiichi Shibusawa, who is sometimes called the Rockefeller of Japan.

Some of the visitors were taken to the Fore River shipyards at Quincy and the others were whirled in automobiles to the Arnold Arboretum in Jamaica Plain. The party went on board the new battleship South Dakota and there were treated with great interest the twelve-inch guns.

Luncheons at Shipyards.

Luncheon was served and Colonel William A. Gaston, who is a director of the Fore River ship yards, was host. Baron Shibusawa, speaking in Japanese, thanked the colonel for the company for their visit.

When the party had returned to Boston they were taken to Harvard, where they were shown the museums and halls and later escorted to the stadium, where they saw the Harvard-Yale football game.

Luncheon of the party wanted to see the watchmakers of Waltham, and under the escort of Henry Howard they went to that city. One thing that impressed these experts was the high rate of wages that are paid there, the women earning from $12 to $25 a week.

Baron Shibusawa gave to the Sunday Post-Boston interpreter his impressions of Boston.

Interested in Shipyard.

"I have had little chance to see Boston as yet, but everywhere I go there are upon all sides. The immense manufacturing interests of the city surprised me. The city is like my own city of Tokio.

"I was very much interested in hearing Mr. Howard's address before the private school and the requirement that to enter upon a study of business here it is necessary to have a college degree.

"I was much interested in the Fore River shipyards, where some of your battleships are built. It is a splendid plant. Japan has no fear of American warship building, because she knows that they are built to preserve peace, not to make war."

Football in Japan, Too.

Hills, one of the journalists with the commissioners, said:

"I should like to visit the United States and study the country at leisure. We have been simply overwhelmed with hospitality. We have been constantly on the go. We have had no idea that they ran so fast and been shown everything of interest, but we have been so rushed that we only could skim to look.

"I enjoyed the football game between Harvard and Brown immensely. We have football in Japan, you know. Our Japanese team beat the Shanghai team in playing the line. It is a fine, manly game."

HENEY WINS RECOUNT.

Will Run for District Attorney In San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23.—The recount of votes cast in the recent direct primary election for district attorney on the Democratic ticket was concluded and Francis J. Heney was declared the party's candidate by sixty-five votes over Charles M. Fickert, Republican and Union Labor nominee for the same office.

GERTRUDE BEECHER WEDS.

Granddaughter of Noted Preacher Is Bride in Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—In historic Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, Miss Gertrude Rose Beecher, granddaughter of Henry Ward Beecher, was married to-day to Charles Francis Park, Jr., of Englewood, N. J.

FIRE BALL HITS TOWN

Connecticut Villagers Thrown out of Bed by Shock.

WINSTED, Ct., Oct. 23.—A meteorite or ball of lightning from a clear sky, the villagers have not decided which, at Storrs yesterday, causing consternation in every home. The crash of the exploding ball of fire which made day of night, almost shook windows and rocks. The force was spent near the residence of P. H. Chadwick, members of whose family were stunned and thrown out of their beds.

Funeral of Dr. J. W. Ryder.

The funeral of Dr. James W. Ryder, the well-known South End physician, was held yesterday from the Church of the Immaculate Conception, where solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Thomas J. Gibbons. Father Gibbons was assisted by Rev. George A. Keenan, Rev. Francis X. Higgins and Rev. Thomas J. McCormack.

RIOT IN CHINATOWN WITH THRILLS ON THE SIDE

Street Car Collision, Washington Street Runaway, Even Globe Theatre Is in It.

THREE policemen were hurt, one of them probably fatally, another policeman was severely beaten, a patrol wagon was wrecked in collision with a street car and the horse tore through crowded Washington street into the Globe Theatre lobby last night, all the result of the arrest of Detroit Rivers by Policeman John Hanrahan in Chinatown.

Herman Bowers, living at No. 24 Stanford street, was arrested by Hanrahan on a charge of beating Yee Wing, a Chinaman. The policeman took Bowers to the box on Oxford street and Harrison avenue and called the patrol wagon from the Lagrange street station.

Crossing Washington street a City Point electric car ran into the patrol wagon, overturning it. Driver Fred Howell and Policemen Caffrey and Foley were all ruined to the street. Howell and Caffrey were both unconscious and were hurried to the Relief Hospital.

There it is said that Howell had received internal injuries which may cause his death. Foley was treated by a doctor and sent to his home.

The horse, freed from the wagon, dashed along Washington street, endangering hundreds in the crowded street. At the Globe Theatre the frightened creature made a dash for the corridor leading into the house. Here he was captured by Policeman Farwell.

In the meantime Hanrahan, in charge of Bowers at the patrol box at Harrison avenue and Oxford street, was set upon by a mob numbering fully 300 men and boys. They called to Bowers to free himself from Hanrahan's clutches, declaring they would help him.

Bowers began to fight with the policeman, encouraged by the yelling mob. When the crowd saw that Hanrahan was holding his man the fusilade took a hand.

One man dealt the policeman a blow on the jaw felling him to the earth. Then the hoodlums kicked the prostrate officer in the back, face, side and stomach. Powers all the time was clawing and pounding and kicking Hanrahan with all his might. The policeman's helmet was torn away from him and his night stick wrenched from his hand.

Hanrahan fought pluckily against odds and finally recaired his night stick. Fighting every inch of the way the policeman started for the Lagrange street station still holding to Bowers and defending himself as best he could with his club. The mob dogged every step. Blow after blow was rained on the policeman's head and missiles were thrown at him.

Hanrahan managed to get to the station house where he almost collapsed. His hands had become so cramped that he could scarcely let go his hold on the prisoner. A doctor was summoned, but it was a long time before the exhausted policeman was able to be sent to his home.

RIVER EMPTIED, BUT FAILS TO GIVE UP THE HEAD OF AMELIA ST. JEAN

Fall River Police Will Demand Continuance of Case Against "Dr." Frank L. Hill.

FALL RIVER, Oct. 23.—Not having found the head of Miss Amelia St. Jean, the comely young Woonsocket girl who was the victim of the Fall River-Tiverton tragedy, the police will on Monday ask a continuance of the case against "Dr." Frank L. Hill, who is held for her murder. It has already been agreed that the case will go over until Wednesday, when Lawyer Higgins, for Hill, will ask that the girl either be discharged, on the ground that he is being held for killing a person who has not been proven dead.

All day long, under the direction of Policemen Woods and Desmond of the automobile squad, the river that runs through and under part of the city has been searched for the head of the dead girl. When the mills shut down at noon the water was allowed to run out of the stream, which is controlled by a system of dams. Men with high rubber boots waded through the shallow stream for nearly half a mile seeking the head that for a week has eluded the searchers in the mysterious crime. It could not be found.

Head Not in Hill's Office.

It was settled to-day that the head of the missing girl is not secreted in Hill's office. That has been searched thoroughly, even to the tearing up of the floors. It is believed that Hill either buried the head or threw it into Mt. Hope Bay, weighting it down.

No more pathetic tragedy has been brought to light than of this frail factory girl who tried to avoid the pitfalls of life but who could not. Here was the fate of one who was unable to resist temptation—of one who could not save herself and whom others refused to save.

What adds to the pathos of it all is the fact that Miss St. Jean's mutilated body was picked up on the very day that she was nineteen years old. She was cruelly slain just as she was beginning to look out upon the sunshine of life. She went to her death and to her God without loved ones or friends to say a parting prayer for her soul.

Victim a Loveable Girl.

Amelia St. Jean at heart was a good girl, a lovable girl. She tried ever so hard to live a good-fearing life and to follow the teachings of her faith. But she yearned for what others have, for the things which she could not. That is why she lost her life.

Her earthly existence was short, very short, even for a girl who has had to shave in a big mill, where lives are of less value than a ring in some dividend earning machine.

For a brief nineteen years she lived the life that other girls in the mill towns of lower Massachusetts are living. At that is left now of the young woman who loved all with a great, big, overflowing heart, is a discovery that will be swept in a vault in Tiverton.

Amelia St. Jean suffered more than any one can tell. But she was not the only one to whom cruel fate came. Over in Woonsocket, in a big tenement block, is another woman who has also suffered. She is the mother of Amelia.

Her heart is broken. Life holds nothing in store for her. She has lost for all time the little girl who was her joy, the girl whom she loved more than anybody else in the whole wide world.

Sad Shock to the Mother.

Ever since the day when she saw her first child—the baby was Amelia—this little woman, to whom life has always been a hard, cold, almost impossible, has looked forward to the time when her girl would become a wife. Is it any wonder that the shocking death of the fleeting, loving girl has been a crushing blow to the aspirations of this little woman? Is it any wonder that the death of Amelia St. John has left her mother broken hearted?

To friends, relatives and neighbors in fact to all who knew the pretty girl, Amelia St. Jean's death was but another pathetic event in a life full of similar tragedies. To Mrs. St. Jean it was a terrible, crushing blow—a blow that not only a mother can receive—a blow that threatened to snap the frail strings of life.

Many will undoubtedly say that she erred. No one will say, can say, that she was other than a hard working, truth-loving, craved wealthy things and who in trying to realize some of her hopes and ambitions was cruelly slain.

Amelia a Pretty Baby.

To go back to a time a little over nineteen years ago. At that home there lived in the small mill town of Whitinsville a hard-working young couple. The husband —he was Amelia's father—labored in the big cotton mill. The wife attended to the household work in a three-room tenement in a great factory block.

Joseph St. Jean, a French Canadian, was a second hand in the mill. He earned about $8 a week, but by economy he and his wife were able to provide the necessaries of life. Then there came into the house one day a blue-eyed baby, the first to bless their married life. The baby was Amelia, and a pretty was she that the children of the neighborhood cried with one another in taking her out in the baby carriage.

The months and the years sped by, and the child blossomed into a pretty girl. The St. Jeans, sober, industrious and hard-working, sent the girl to the small public school around the corner from their home. There she was fourteen years of age she went to work.

First Day in the Mill.

Amelia walked with her father that day when she first entered the big mill to begin work at a great, whirling, roaring machine. Around her were girls like her. Around her were machines all grinding out money for the owners of the mill.

A clerk entered her name on a book: "Amelia St. Jean, fourteen years, spooler, $4."

The four dollars was what she got for working ten hours a day for six days a week. That was the start of Amelia St. Jean's life as a mill girl.

Every day for a year, with the exception of Sundays, Amelia left her home before the sun rose and did not return until it was dark. The work aged many other children in the big mill, but not Amelia. She grew more beautiful with the passing days.

Then the St. Jeans—there were five other children to care for now—moved to Southbridge. The father went to work in the mill there. Amelia was left to keep pace in the spooling room. A year later they again moved, this time to Webster Bridge. Joseph St. Jean and Amelia St. Jean took up their old work.

Four years ago the family moved to Woonsocket, taking five rooms in a big tenement block at No. 200 Cor street. Amelia and Alphonsine were the wage earners. This time, however, the girl got $6 a week.

For three years Amelia St. Jean never lost a working day. Every week she brought home every Saturday night and gave to her mother. She kept but a few cents.

Didn't Care for Clothes.

Once—her mother tells the story with tears in her eyes—she was so poorly clad that her mother wanted her to get a new suit.

"Oh, I don't want any new clothes, mother," she answered. "These clothes will do me for a few months. You need the money. Buy Lillian a new coat and dress. She needs them more than I do."

Often girl friends in the same mill would ask her to go to a party or a dance, but Amelia always declined. It may have been that she was ashamed to go to places where other girls were better dressed than she.

Like her parents and her sisters and brothers, she was a devoted communicant of the Holy Family Church. She went to mass every Sunday, and to Holy Communion once a month.

In the four years she lived in Woonsocket she never missed a mission. For two weeks at a time she would arise at 4:30 o'clock, attend 5 o'clock mass, return to her home for breakfast and then go to her work. In the evening she would go to hear the Paulist Father preach a sermon.

Every Sunday she would visit relatives. Often they came to this city to see her aunt, Mrs. Amelia Lamoreux, at No. 6 North Eighth street. It was on these visits that she met Delina LeBlanc, the pretty, unobtrusive Fall Rover girl, who sweetheart of Wilfred Thibault, who was killed in the Fall River police charged with the murder of Amelia St. Jean.

During the past summer they ent down the force at the mill where Amelia and her friend worked. He was unable to get work in Woonsocket, and so he came here, living with his sister, Mrs. Lamoreux. Amelia tried day after day to find employment, but to no avail.

The latter part of July she read an advertisement in a Boston newspaper. It was for a girl to go on the stage. The writings called to the little mill girl. She yearned to become an actress. She believed it would bring her wealth. Above all she thought she would be able to provide for her parents, to keep them from want.

Before she answered the advertisement she asked the counsel and advice of her aunt, Mrs. Lamoreux. The aunt advised her not to go on the stage, but to come to this city where she could undoubtedly get other work.

Lure of the Footlights.

The lure of the stage was too strong. Amelia wrote, saying she would accept the position. Over night she thought the matter over and sent another letter saying that she had changed her mind and that she would not accept the position.

The following day a man who said his name was Daly and represented himself as behind a theatrical attraction called "The Human Flies," called on Amelia. He looked prosperous. He told her that she might earn fame and wealth if she went on the stage. Amelia left home to become a "great" actress.

A week later she returned to Woonsocket. All that she would tell her folks was that she did not like the life, and that she had come home to take up her work in the mill.

Five weeks ago, on the advice of her aunt, she came to Fall River to obtain work. She made friends among girls in the French colony near Mrs. Lamoreux's home. A good piano player and singer, she was always a welcome guest at the home of her girl friends, Delina LeBlanc.

Something during this period she became acquainted of Fact that she had done wrong; that she was destined to pay for her error dearly. She appealed to everybody she knew to help her. No one responded.

What thoughts came into her mind no one knows. She kept her feelings to herself. Not even to her aunt did she breathe a word. She bore the ordeal without flinching.

In the St. Jean home are countless evidences of the good life Amelia led. There are her prayer book and her beads. Over her bed is a picture of the Saviour. On the dresser is a crucifix which she bought but a few weeks before she died.

On a table are a number of letters received from friends. They are all addressed "Dearest Amelia."

Fatally Stabbed By a Taft Guard

Texas Militiaman Uses Bayonet on Man Who Wouldn't Get in Line.

DALLAS, Tex., Oct. 23.—President Taft's visit to Dallas was marred this evening, shortly after his arrival here, by the bayonet stabbing of a bystander by one of the Texas National Guardsmen. Louis Reichtenstein is the injured man, and it is reported to-night that he is mortally wounded.

Reichtenstein was in the crowd that gathered to greet the President, and he failed to get back into the line when ordered to do so by Sergeant J. D. Manley of the Third Texas Regiment. Words passed between the men, whereupon Sergeant Manley jabbed his bayonet at Reichtenstein, inflicting a severe wound in the stomach.

The injured man was hastily removed to St. Paul's sanitarium, where he was operated on, and Sergeant Manley was arrested.

CORPORATION CASH OFFERED HALE BY STATE LEADER

Member of Republican Committee Had Purse Ready for Campaign.

THE corporation agent who offered to pay the campaign expenses of Alderman Matthew Hale at the election last year was a member of the Republican State Committee, counsel for a big Boston public service corporation, and well known to members of the Boston City Council.

Nathan B. Knox, the man to whom the offer was made for Hale, last night gave this information to the Boston Sunday American, but refused to give out the name of the corporation or the name of the man who offered the money.

This is the charge Mellone made at a meeting of the Massachusetts Reform Club at Young's hotel:

"It is rather a risky thing to say, and I don't know that I ought to say it, but it is a fact that a large corporation came to me last year and offered me money in any amount I might name for campaign, which I naturally refused. Do you suppose a large corporation is around like that offering money to run a campaign unless it is looking for something in return?"

Mr. Knox, who was Mr. Hale's campaign manager, and who has just come to town from his new home in Newton, N. H., to help Alderman Hale fight his battle with Mayor Fitzgerald, last night gave out the reason for refusing to name the corporation man who made the offer:

"I might want to go to him again and can't afford to do anything that will make him believe that I would do anything for him."

This is Knox's statement:

"I don't suppose anybody is believe that my friend Hale was four-flushing when he made the statement that a public service corporation came to him and offered to pay his expenses without asking for any favors then and there, and that he refused. It is absolutely true.

"A personal friend of mine, a member of the Republican state committee and counsel for a big Boston public service corporation, came to me when the campaign was fast getting under way, and knew that Mr. Hale did not have much money and that he was refusing every offer that looked like a corporation gift.

"We talked over the campaign and the chances for Hale's election. He told me that he was interested in Hale and offered to pay all the expenses. I declined it because I knew that Mr. Hale would not tolerate it.

"Do you think it was a personal contribution he was offering?"

"I've been in politics for almost a generation and I have met a good many corporation attorneys who offer up money out of their own pockets. Of course I don't know whether the offer came from the corporation, but you may take your own conclusions.

"Why don't you give out the man's name and save Mr. Hale from the charge of professionalism?

"I have known the man for twelve years and he has always been a friend of mine. If I were to do him the least bit of harm, I think I was a pretty nasty sort of speet to be."

The only three members of the Republican State Committee who are lobbyists in the interests of Boston public service corporations are:

J. Otis Wardwell of Haverhill, representing the Fourth Essex district, a member of the House of Representative, "King of the State House lobby," and legislative agent for the Boston Elevated, Massachusetts Gas and Electric Companies and Edison Electric Illuminating Company.

Charles F. Choate, Jr., of Southboro, the Fourth Worcester District senator, representing the Second Middlesex District in the State Committee. He lobbies for Boston interests, though he is not registered as a lobbyist.

Fred W. Dallinger of Cambridge, ex-Senator, representing the Second Middlesex District in the State Committee. He lobbies for Boston interests, though he is not registered as a lobbyist.

Constipation and Appendicitis

The Latter Usually Caused By The Former, Which, In Turn, Has Its Origin In Intestinal Indigestion.

Chronic constipation is a disease which is about as prevalent as dyspepsia and indigestion. Nearly every one suffers from it occasionally, but there are millions of people who endure it habitually, and who are accustomed to resort to the use of laxatives and cathartics daily.

Many people seemed to have developed a perfect mania for taking pills, and instead of trying to ascertain the latent cause of the disease, and removing it by appropriate treatment, they are content to continue the reckless use of laxatives, aperients, drastic cathartics and violent purgatives, until finally inflammation of the bowels occurs, which reaches the appendix, and the result is appendicitis.

In investigating and tracing the causative factors of constipation and its frequent sequel, appendicitis, it has been noted by physicians that the majority of cases were preceded and accompanied by a long-standing gastro-intestinal indigestion.

The idea that appendicitis is brought on by foreign bodies, such as seeds, etc., becoming lodged in the appendix, is an exploded theory. It is now definitely known that constipation is the most prolific cause of this dread disease, while the constipation itself is previously induced by intestinal indigestion. Just what gives rise to the inability to digest starches—so the relation between cause and effect is readily seen and appreciated.

The absurdity of attempting to cure constipation by the use of physic should be apparent to every one. Laxative drugs and powerful purgatives will never cure a disease of this sort, and those who make frequent or regular use of them will, sooner or later, set up an inflammatory condition of the intestinal system.

A person with first-class digestion will never be annoyed with chronic constipation, and when this trouble does exist instead of slugging the system with pills, liquid laxatives, candy cathartics, etc., use a remedy which will cure the gastro-intestinal indigestion, and you will find that the constipation no longer bothers you, and with its removal, the risk of developing appendicitis will be reduced to the minimum.

STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS have been the means of curing numerous cases of constipation, by first curing the intestinal indigestion. They contain every kind of foods, a single grain being capable of digesting 3,000 grains of albumenum, and in addition to pepsin, nux vomica and other powerful digestives, they also contain diastase, which converts starch into sugar, and readily cures anaemia dyspepsia and intestinal indigestion.

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, constipation, and, in fact, indigestion in any kind, don't run the risk of getting appendicitis, but strike at the root of the trouble—the original cause—use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which will quickly rid you of all functional disorders of the alimentary tract.

Secure a box of this digestive remedy from your druggist for 50c and send your name and address to the F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., for a free sample package.

A MYSTERY SOLVED

ECZEMA NOW CURABLE BY AN ENTIRELY NEW COMPOUND

For a great many years the medical profession has been seeking a cure for eczema, the most common, most torturing and most stubborn of skin diseases. Up to the year 1908 no remedy was known that could be depended upon. There were ointments and salves and greases. There were tonics and blood medicines and mixtures of every nature, but eczema in its different forms remained unconquered. In fact, eczema was shrouded with mystery. Nobody knew what it was. Some said it was a blood disease; some said it was the result of indigestion. Still others attributed its cause to something else. The remedies offered did little more than relieve temporarily, and frequently they seemed to aggravate the trouble. It remained for one studious chemist to settle beyond any question that eczema in all its forms is a skin disease and related in no way to a disordered condition of the blood. This same chemist experimented with many antiseptic, healing and soothing agents, but it was not until he discovered the compound known as Cadum that he at last realized he had given to the world something that would bring relief and cure to millions of sufferers. Cadum ranks today with the great discoveries of the medical world. Its action is so positive that the itching of eczema is stopped immediately. People who have itched and scratched for years find sleep and rest as soon as Cadum is used, and in ordinary cases a complete restoration of the skin to a healthy condition is reached in two or three weeks. The soothing, healing effects of Cadum are almost instantaneous. Cadum is sold at all druggists at 10c. and 25c. a box. The 10c. box is sufficient for trial purposes, and may be used not only for eczema in all its forms, but also for hives, pimples, blotches, tetter, itch, acne, herpes, scaly skin, psoriasis, ringworm, rash,

Boils, Pimples and Carbuncles

Cannot Exist When Stuart's Calcium Wafers Are Used.

The blood is a natural antiseptic and germ-destroyer. That fact has long been recognized by medical men. Under ordinary conditions it contains within itself sufficiently strong germicidal powers to destroy and eliminate all blood poisons, disease germs, microbes and bacteria.

The blood is alkaline in chemical reaction, and its alkalinity alone will kill many germs. Then, the blood also forms antitoxins which neutralize the poisons formed by the bacteria. A considerable amount of the said bacteria is burned up by the oxygen in the blood. Next are the alexins, which hinder the growth and development of germs, and, finally, it is one of the functions of the white corpuscles to attack and kill the microbes, which they do by literally eating them away to the filters—the lymph glands.

But in spite of all these powerful precautions taken by Nature to keep the blood pure and to enable it to destroy and eliminate all blood poisons, impurities and germs, and thus protect the system from invasion by disease, it very often happens that the blood becomes so overloaded with various impurities and bacteria that it is utterly impossible for it to destroy and dispose of them without outside assistance.

In such an emergency the only thing left to the blood to do, in order to prevent the self-poisoning of the system, is to send out as many of the impurities as possible through the pores of the skin, where they exhibit themselves in the form of boils, pimples, carbuncles, rashes and various other localized inflammations and skin diseases.

It is in such cases as this that STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS, the great blood-purifying and germ-destroying remedy, gets in its fine work. When the blood, overcome by weight of numbers, is struggling to rid itself of poisons, germs and impurities, these wonderful little wafers, whose chief ingredient is calcium sulphide, come to its assistance, rendering valuable help in the work of destroying the microbes, removing the impurities and eliminating the poisons from the system, and the skin disease, having no further poisons to feed upon, dry up and disappear.

Purchase a box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers from your pharmacist today for 50 cents, and commence taking treatment. Send us your name and address and a free sample package of this wonderful remedy will be sent you free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

TO COURT MARTIAL MASCOT KANGAROO

"Murphy" of Battleship Wisconsin Deserts and Is Captured by Strong Guard.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Oct. 23.—"Murphy," the mascot kangaroo of the battleship Wisconsin, who has been in more mixups than any other pet of the navy, has just finished another stunt and is up for a general court-martial by the crew.

Murphy jumped ship on Thursday afternoon, and after cutting capers all over the navy yard made a dash through the main gate, after an attempted hold-up by the corporal's guard, and was soon lost in the woods of the town of Eliot.

Every dog he met on his way through Kittery wanted to eat him up, but Murphy put them all out of business. He was finally lured before it was discovered that the crew had escaped, and forty of the crew were ordered out to hunt him up. By this time men, women and boys had joined in the chase, and with the sailors a small army was jumping ditches and stone walls in the game of tag.

Murphy was finally surrounded in a swamp by the shipmates, lassoed and brought back to the vessel under guard this afternoon, where the deck division court-martial board is liable to make him fourth class and have him confined to the coal bunkers for a month.

MAN KILLED AT WORK.

Fatal Elevator Accident in Washington Street Store.

Frank J. Cavanaugh, of No. 67 Emerald street, was fatally injured yesterday as the result of an elevator accident in the building of No. 823 Washington street, occupied by J. G. Small & Co. The elevator is operated by a cable between the car floor and the stone platform leading to the alley. Mr. Small does not operate this story, and says that if the accident occurred in this way the man's head would have been cut off.

"Cavanaugh was a good, bright man," said Mr. Small today, to an American reporter. "I am surprised that such a thing could have happened to him. I believe that the heavy gate, which he was repairing, fell and struck him on the temple. The elevator, in descending, brings the gate down. No one can blame Colby because Cavanaugh said no word to anyone that he was going to fix the gate."

Young Gymnast Has a Fall.

Robert Hoffman, aged 11 years, of No. 240 Chelsea street, East Boston, fell from the cross-bars at the Wood Island gymnasium yesterday afternoon a distance of ten feet, and received fractures of both arms and of the right fore-arm also.

WIRELESS WINS A BACK BAY BRIDE

Cupid's Message Heard by Miss Barnes at Lynn Station and Elopement Follows.

YOUNG PEOPLE WHO FELL IN LOVE WHILE STUDYING WIRELESS

If she had not been so keen to learn the mysteries of wireless telegraphy, Lillian Thiens Barnes of Boston would not now be Mrs. Harry Elmore Hurd of Lynn.

Hurd and his attractive girl-wife are back in Lynn now—oh, yes, of course they eloped—receiving the congratulations of their friends.

The romance had its beginning in young Hurd's office at the station in the front of his home, No. 4 Grand View street. Miss Barnes had gone to Lynn to visit friends. At the dinner table conversation turned to the wreck of the Lucy Republic, and the great part wireless telegraphy had in saving those on board. Incidentally Hurd was mentioned as being one of the first wireless operators in the country to pick up the "C. Q. D." flashed by the Republic operator.

"Oh, but I'd like to see a wireless station," exclaimed the young Boston girl. "Do you suppose you, friend, Mr. Hurd, will let us inspect his station?"

Her friends didn't know, but of course they could ask him. They did. Hurd was delighted. That is to say, the wireless station Hurd has received an invitation to call at No. 240 Marlboro street, Boston, and meet Miss Barnes's father and brother.

From that time on Hurd and the pretty Boston girl were "two of a kind." Cupid was there, also, playing his old, old game.

Hurd and Miss Barnes eloped to Providence, where they were married by Rev. Albert Legg. Now Papa Hurd will take his son into the real estate business as his junior partner.

Mrs. Hurd went to a private school, but left it to take a position as a clerk in a Back Bay dental office, believing that every girl, no matter how independently wealthy, should make a living for herself.

BIG GOVERNMENT FRAUD.

New York Importers $1,000,000 Ahead by Bribing Weighers.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Millions of dollars have been stolen by importing firms in this city from the United States Government in customs duties, according to revelations in the Muskra trial, which it was announced today will be laid before the present Federal Grand Jury. It is charged that these importers, through the connivance of bribed assistant weighers in the service of the custom house, have defrauded the government out of a considerably more than $1,000,000 in the last year or two.

In the Muskra case three assistant weighers testified that they gave the firm short weight on importations, by which they saved thousands of dollars in duties. In return for this, they testified, the Muskras paid them considerable sums from time to time. It is alleged now that more than a dozen firms of importers, doing a business that aggregated many millions a year, have had assistant weighers in their pay and have been doing the Government for many years.

FEAR 2 LOST IN WRECK.

No Trace of Men After Yacht Sinks at Beverly.

GLOUCESTER, Oct. 23.—Daniel Shea, who left Gloucester harbor Thursday afternoon on the ten ton sloop yacht Lucy Alice, is missing and the yacht lies on the Club Island rocks at Beverly Farms. The yacht struck the rocks late last night during a blow. She is a sailmaker. It is thought that he had a companion when he left this harbor. The yacht is owned by Charles A. Steele of this city.

SCOTCH HIGHBALLS LIKELY TO GO UP

Much Woe Among the Thirsty Caused By New Tariff Law's Effect.

The new tariff on "wet" goods goes into effect soon and there is fear among the thirsty that retail prices will be sent sky high. In New York there is positive apprehension. Boston is taking it more calmly.

The advance in whiskies would only be on Scotch and other foreign brands. Highball drinkers could dodge it by taking American distillations instead of anything with the smack of heather.

Rye and bourbon whiskeys are not subject to the tariff increase and there will be no excuse for saloon, cafe and hotel keepers to feel as raise for any beverages. Most all the beer drank is American brewed. Those who buy the imported brews as a class wouldn't mind paying more for them. That is true, too, of champagnes.

The new tariff raises the champagne duty from $6 to $9.60 a case. This means that it will cost 20 cents more to import a quart bottle. The man who sells it would probably raise his price 50 cents and that is not an over the counter tax rate. People who "open wine" are generally in a fit mood to pay a dollar a quart.

There have been tremendous importations since the new tariff was passed. Big declares laid in a heavy stock because they could save an enormous amount by anticipating the rise.

The consensus of opinion among Boston hotel men is that the average patron of bars will get his drinks just as cheap as ever.

LORD ACTING GOVERNOR.

President of N. H. Senate Has Job For Two Weeks.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 23.—Harry T. Lord, president of the State Senate, is acting Governor of New Hampshire to-day and will be for the next two weeks. Governor Henry R. Quinby left the State yesterday afternoon for St. Louis, where he is to attend Wolfeboro Party's party in the trip down the Mississippi River, to study the flood sufferers sympathies.

Under the State constitution, the President of the State Senate acts as Governor during the Governor's absence from the State. President Lord has been officially notified to assume the office as Governor through Secretary of State Edward N. Pearson. Mr. Lord will preside over a meeting of the Governor's council on November 1.

DELAWARE'S SPEED 21.98.

ROCKLAND, Me., Oct. 23.—American shipbuilders demonstrated their ability to push the battleship Delaware, the highest powered vessel afloat, to the speed of over a measured mile course to-day at a speed of 21.98 knots an hour, subject to tidal corrections, in accomplishing which 30,000 horsepower, the greatest ever attained by a ship of the first class battleship type, constantly known as the Dreadnaught class, was developed. The mean of her maximum run to-day was 21.44 knots an hour, a margin of 44 of a knot over the contract with her builders, the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Company.

"MIKE" REAGAN IS HIT BY A VERDICT

Noted Baseball Fan Must Give an Accounting of the Brown Estate.

A finding ordering Bat Michael J. Reagan of the Hotel Marlborough, known to baseball players and followers of the game all over the country as "Mike" Reagan, should make an accounting of the $80,000 estate of the late Mrs. Harriet N. Brown, a wealthy Back Bay widow, for whom he acted as trustee, has been made by Judge Richardson of the Superior Court.

A bill in equity was recently filed by Attorney John Louis Sheehan of the Pemberton building asking for the Brown estate, alleging that Reagan fraudulently received upwards of $70,000 from Mrs. Brown, while she was physically and mentally weak and under Reagan's influence. Mrs. Brown died at the age of eighty-two on May 21, 1907. She was the widow of Joseph N. Brown, a wealthy Back Bay real estate owner and operator. She made her home at No. 160 West Newton street.

Ten years ago the wealthy widow and Reagan met on the train on the South End, while Mrs. Brown was collecting rents in the property. She took a fancy to Reagan and, until her death, took a deep interest in him. For several years, Reagan lived in what was called "The Blue Room" in Mrs. Brown's house.

According to Reagan's testimony on the witness stand during the preliminary court proceedings last June he and Mrs. Brown made a trip to Europe. Four years ago, Mrs. Brown advancing a $5,000 check for the trip. Soon after Mrs. Brown and Reagan returned from their trip to Europe, he was appointed trustee of her estate.

Judge Richardson, in making his finding, said: "I find that the allegations are sustained. All the property which Reagan has invested belongs to the estate. It is expected that Judge Richardson will hand down his decree this week.

GROOM COMETH NOT.

But Sent Word to Assembled Guests He Had Wed Another.

LEICESTER, Oct. 23.—Not waiting at the church, but waiting at Westerly, R. I., with minister and guests for a bridegroom who didn't come, but who, on the contrary, went to Boston, where he became another groom's husband, is the experience of Miss Sarah J. Swain of Rhodesia, Me. Thomas Carson, who boarded at the home of Mrs. Mary Ryan, Rawson street, Worcester, where she became acquainted with Miss Nellie Ryan, daughter of his landlady, were the ones engaged.

Then Mrs. Ida White Ward of Milford and Miss Ward and Mrs. George Almond, who lives across the street from the Ryans, were the matron of honor attended by Mrs. Ward, too. Last Saturday it was planned that Carson and Miss Swain should go to Westerly, R. I., on Sunday and be married on Monday night. Monday night, while the minister and invited guests were waiting on the bridegroom at Westerly, a telegram was received by Miss Swain and it told her that at the same hour she was to expect a groom. Miss Carson's groom was making Mrs. Ward his bride in Boston. Miss Swain disappointed. Her friends here believe that she hurried to her old home in Maine.

BUTTER TO TAKE DROP.

If the milk dealers do not combine to keep the people from benefiting by an error made by Congress in revising the tariff, the price of butter, which has soared until it is almost as valuable as radium, will soon take a decided slump.

The error is in the duty on cream and the source from which the lower priced cream will come in Canada. For years the dairy products of Quebec and Ontario provinces, almost as near Boston as the northern counties of Maine, have been shut out of this country by the excessive duties.

Now by some error, the duty on cream has been reduced to five cents a gallon. The difference of nine cents a gallon, its most prominent Boston dealers say, will make it possible to import cream from Canada and make it into butter in this country and sell it at lower prices than are now demanded for the native product.

Charcoal Lozenges Powerful Absorbents

Offensive Breath and Stomach Gases Cannot Exist When They Are Used.

Charcoal, by virtue of its porous nature, takes up gases more actually than as a sponge takes up water. Its capacity in this respect is in proportion to the number and fineness of its pores. Charcoal made from poplar, beechwood, vegetable ivory, cocoanut shells and willow-wood is a compact, heavy substance, having a metallic luster, the pores being quite invisible.

Chemical tests of various kinds performed by expert chemists have revealed the fact that charcoal made from willow-wood is not only absolutely harmless, but that it is by far the most powerful absorbent of all kinds of gases. Certain other woods, mentioned above, are used by some manufacturers in making charcoal, and besides not being half as effective in absorbing stomach gases, have also been found to be positively harmful to the digestive system.

Willow-wood charcoal is, then, the very best for the purpose of absorbing excessive gas of the stomach, relieving intestinal flatus, and purifying foul breath. Charcoal, to be effective against gastric disturbances, must be introduced among the gases of the stomach in the same state as when fresh from the cyanide. The means of effecting this is to compress them into soluble lozenges, so that after being dissolved in the mouth and swallowed the charcoal is "set free, and at once begins its work of oxidizing and absorbing foul gases, and also, through its antiseptic properties, of purifying the entire alimentary tract.

It is definitely known that the absorbent and cleansing action of charcoal is protracted and continued through the intestinal system as well as in the stomach, and it proves beneficial there also.

In STUART'S CHARCOAL LOZENGES we have a gas-absorbing remedy which readily takes precedence over all others. The charcoal used in them is the very best that can be obtained. They are composed of the finest young willow-wood, converted into charcoal by the above-mentioned scientific process, and before being compressed into lozenges the powdered charcoal is combined with other thoroughly agreeable to the taste by being mixed with pure honey, and the result is a product equally as palatable as candy.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges have attained a wide popularity among the people, millions of boxes being sold every year. They have, over and over again, proven their efficiency as rapid and powerful absorbents of foul stomach gases, relieving and curing flatulence, belching, or the eructation of gases, and finally in the purification of offensive breath.

Buy a package of these little lozenges from your druggist for 25 cents and forward us your name and address for free sample package. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

G. O. P. CANDIDATES EVADE INCOME TAX ISSUE

Harvard Club Canvass Secures Only Sixty Replies from 510 Letters to Nominees.

THE Harvard Political Club, which has been making a canvass on the sentiment on the income tax resolution among the candidates for the Legislature reported yesterday that of the sixty replies received up to date, fifty-three favored the adoption of the income tax.

Roger Sherman Hoar, son of ex-Congressman Hoar, has been a prime mover in the canvass. All the other members of the club are Republicans, with the exception of one Socialist. Young Hoar, who is twenty-two years of age and a student at Harvard College, has joined the Democratic spellbinders this year.

In discussing the results of the canvass with Chairman McCleod of the Democratic State Committee, yesterday, he said that replies had been received from seven Republicans stating that they favored the adoption of the income tax resolution.

Republicans for Tax.

The Republicans who favor the adoption of the income tax include: Arthur G. Nason of Haverhill, candidate for the Senate from the Fourth Essex District. William Halliday, candidate for the House from the Tenth Essex; Robert B. Harvey of North Andover, candidate for the House from the First Berkshire; Fred W. Ferl of Lynn, candidate for the House in the Fourteenth district; Frank E. Holt of Lynn, candidate for the House in the Fourteenth Essex, and James H. MacDonald, candidate for the House from Gloucester.

The Socialist candidate, John A. Goss of Quincy, stated that he favored the income tax.

The only Republican who replied that he would not stand by the income tax resolution was Orrell Gells, Jr., of New Bedford, a candidate for the House from the seventh Bristol district.

The club sent out 510 letters. Since many envelopes still missing, and since the borders of the canvass has had to do with the Republican candidates, it appears to be fairly certain that most of these gentlemen do not care to take any attitude on the income tax if they are opposed to it.

The Democrats Say Yes.

The Democratic candidates who put themselves on record in favor of the income tax are as follows: Candidates for the Senate: William J. Keaney, Adelmore; William Morse, Mill River; Clarkson P. Bearse, Harwich; James H. Moulton, Swampscott; Frank C. Richardson, Essex; David P. Kimball, Boston; Frank E. Mafley, Springfield; James S. Cannon, Newton; George A. Glidden, Somerville; Richard E. Heeon, Everett; Arthur W. Hall, Holyoke; Joseph P. Lomasney, Boston; James Hayes, Boston; Edward A. Harris, Worcester; John F. Meaney, Blackstone. Candidates for the House: John Devlin, North Attleboro; John P. Field, Taunton; Thomas Sheriff, New Bedford; Daley Barrett, Merrimac; William A. Hester, Lawrence; William J. Mosh, Lawrence; Joseph A. Burns, Andover; John A. MacCauliff, Joseph H. Murray and Robert H. Coughlin, Lynn; John C. Chase, Chelmsford; Peter H. Griffin, Salem; Dennis Foley, Salem; Richard T. Twomey, Swampscott; Frank A. Foster, Manchester; John E. Hennessy, Chicopee; Thomas P. Kenny, Waltham; Stephen F. Monahan, Lowell; Walter S. Campbell, North Reading; Joseph H. O'Connell, Everett; Edmund H. Bowler, Boston; Joseph Robichaud, Plymouth.

Independent citizens: Herbert L. Chipman, Sandwich; Fred P. Greenwood, Everett.

Ex-Gov. Long to Preside.

Former Governor John D. Long, chairman of the Board of Overseers of Harvard, will preside at the Harvard-Tech night at the Boston City Club next Thursday night. President Lowell of Harvard, President MacLaurin of Tech and Governor Draper will make addresses.

PELLETIER'S DEMAND FOR BOSTON HOME RULE STIRS BIG AUDIENCE TO CHEERS

JOSEPH PELLETIER.

Democratic Candidate for District Attorney.

Keliher Calls Hill A "Rah-Rah" Boy at Rally in Dudley Street Opera House.

Boston must govern herself, every other city and town must govern itself, the government of and by the people is a farce and the pretense of a free republic a piece of hypocrisy.

"My friend Mr. Hill talks of bosses and back room conferences. I wonder if he was there with Mr. Fitzgerald and Mr. Donovan; he pretends to describe a conference. Tell us, Mr. Hill, are all your statements as true as this?

"Where was the back room and who was present? I give my solemn word that I wasn't there, not even invited. Tell us all about it, Mr. Hill.

"My whole life lived right here is a refutation of the calumnies of Mr. Hill. My fifteen years at the bar in general practice is a denial of the charges.

Recognizes No Boss.

"Those who know me, either personally or by reputation, believe me when I say that I recognize no boss and no man's dictation, that I am free to do my whole duty as District Attorney. No one has asked a pledge from me, no one dare do so; my life, my character, my reputation is there for a refutation of such charges.

"Mr. Hill knows! Well, they are not all in the Democratic party. They say there is safety in numbers and I guess that's so. If Hill, the Republican party has bosses and confessedly not always in closed companies—boss Hill is rather the proud than the party of Brother Hill, who has one car boss, Senator Lodge, pilot of the steam roller, and a myriad of nickel-and-dime rulers serving as overseers in all the fat jobs of the State and Federal Governments, and Hill, the boss, does not rather than one car, one cold-blooded henchman.

"Mr. Hill, recoil to the people the names of the prominent Republican subbosses who controlled the convention that nominated you.

Crush Out Czar Rule.

"The people of Boston are to-day the victims of the most outrageous assault upon their intelligence and very citizenship ever perpetrated in the history of the State. Mr. Hill, the boss hired hand of Senator Hill's party, has decided the people the right to pass upon the amended city charter. He thought to fool them by submitting two plans, both of which are frauds and dishonest. They are not framed to give the people a referendum, they were most carefully drawn to fool the people by the boss and his henchmen, who think that the people are fools.

"I say to you, recent boss rule, recent Lodge rule, resent the fraud on your rights and intelligence forced upon you by Lodge and the Republican party. Vote for home rule. Vote for honest government. Vote for the people's right to control their own affairs. Vote for home rule. Vote for self-government. Vote for the people's right and end one-man domination of this State.

"I want to say that I shall not ignore the grand jury. If a body of reputable citizens presents to me a matter of grave importance to the community investing infractions of the law, I propose not to delay, not to defy them, but to give them a chance to lay their evidence before the grand jury without delay. The grand jury is the people. Its rights are fundamental; its existence is necessary to safeguard the people's rights.

"Home rule I say for the people of Boston, home rule for the people of the county, home rule for the people against everlasting protest against the tyranny and domination of a judge and the republican machine, everlasting defiance to their insult to our people in a county of free governments. The people's rule and government by the majority is the safeguard of rights, and showed shall surely be ours."

Ex-Mayor Donovan said that the old political fallacies have again made their appearance in this campaign, the first of these is that we should not be influenced by national issues in a State campaign. The second is that parties or elements of a political party should vote independently in a municipal election like that of district attorney is concerned.

Tariff Reform Republican.

"We do not have State parties in this country, nothing but national questions of State government; we have national parties, organized as such in each State. The Republican party of Massachusetts is an integral part of the Republican party of the nation. It has always stood for every election for the support of those who favored high tariff and opposed low tariff party. It is only when it feels itself weak upon national issues that it tries to lay the other weight upon the administration of State affairs.

"We all know that if Massachusetts goes Republican by a large majority that will be interpreted after election, if not before, in the country at large as well as here at home, as a substantial endorsement of the Payne-Aldrich tariff measure. It is also clear that if the usual Republican majority is largely reduced—still more if the Democratic State ticket should be elected—it will afford great encouragement to the friends of measures for it.

HILL FOR SUPERIOR BENCH IF DEFEATED

Arthur Dehon Hill has been picked to succeed the late Judge Robert Roberts Bishop on the Superior Court bench to fill the term of his defeat for election as District Attorney, according to a story circulated last night in high Republican circles.

With this there was passed among the Republicans a request to stand ready to accept Governor Draper with politeness Hill's appointment to the Superior bench in the morning of November 3 in case the fates of November 2 are against him.

The politicians will be a surprise to Governor Draper, if they come. In fact, he is declared to be the prime instigator of the move to put Hill on the bench.

Governor Draper has a week or till his sixty-one after the election of Hill is elected as one of his unlucky contests for re-election. Hill, by his estimable, saved the Republican defeat when John D. Morris ran for Governor in 1906. Hill has also done other things to help out the G. O. P. machine in Massachusetts. His appointment to fill a part of Moran's unexpired term was a favorite move of Draper cohorts.

The Hill lump for Superior Court judge is not desired by the men behind it to be filled from Suffolk county. There is somewhat less than a million candidates for the Hill seat in the other parts of the Commonwealth. Although from them is not desired by Governor Draper to be filled from Suffolk election day. There are plenty of men in Suffolk county who would like to go to the Superior bench, but their chances are considered small.

ASCATCO THE SUREST ASTHMA TREATMENT

Acts Rapidly and Permanently, Cures Even the Worst Cases.

A complete revolution in the treatment of asthma, mild, acute and chronic, was caused with the introduction into this country of ascatco, a constitutional remedy, several years ago. Ascatco differed in theory from treatments then in vogue and its continuous and extended use since that time has proven its absolute correctness. Nearly one million chronic asthmatics have been restored to health through its use and positive beneficial results are secured in nearly every case. Taken in small seven-drop doses, twice daily, without stomach derangement, treatment is simplified and readily accomplished without change of climate.

Residents of Boston may now obtain ascatco at all of the Riker-Jaynes drug stores and Houghton & Dutton's drug dept. in two sizes—fifty cents worth for mild cases and the $2 size sufficient for one month's treatment, and which will cure chronic cases with a rapidity that will simply astonish the patient.

The Austrian Laboratory, 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York City, will send free an experimental treatment of ascatco to all those who write for it.

DONOVAN HATCHET MAN, SAYS LUNDY

An audience of hardly more than fifty in Panenil Hall, last night, heard Joseph Lundy, well known as a lawyer, make some highly-spiced comments on the rival candidates for District Attorney.

Lundy, who once was a Democrat, has himself told his reasons to Chairman Donovan of the Democratic City Committee, whom, he said, "Democracy is the toilchet men of the On Leong Tong" and that they had made it with their money. Counsels of the "Hep Sing Fitzgerald element." He said Pelletier is naught but the candidate of these factions, whose re-election will be a surprise to decent brewer, if they come. In fact, he is declared to be the prime instigator of the move to put Hill on the bench.

Governor Draper has a week or till his sixty-one after the election of Hill is elected as one of his unlucky contests for re-election. Hill, by his estimable, saved the Republican defeat when John D. WEEKS A GOVERNOR IN 1911, G. O. P. BOSSES' PLAN

To Run Next Year for Second Place, Frothingham Making Contest for Congress.

JOHN W. WEEKS of Newton, Congressman from the Twelfth Massachusetts District, will be the Republican nominee for Governor in 1911 if his plans and the plans of the men who control the G. O. P. machine are successful.

Lieutenant Governor Frothingham is to be sidetracked, for a time at least, according to the plans of the leaders. A plan now under consideration by them provides for Frothingham's retirement from the Lieutenant Governorship next year, his candidacy for Congress from the Eleventh District next Fall, the renomination of Weeks for Congress, the nomination of Weeks for Governor in 1911 and his re-election by the usual Republican majority of 40,000 votes.

These plans were unfolded to the Sun by a Republican, one of whom is something more than an ordinary lieutenant in the running of the Republican machine. They provide, according to the latest plan's informant, for the straightening out of some of the knots in the tangle over which the machine leaders ever have been faced.

Problem for Leaders.

Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, under the unwritten Republican law of succession, is entitled to the nomination for Governor in 1911. Augustus P. Gardner of Hamilton, Eben S. Draper of Hopedale, Adams and John W. Weeks of Newton, members of Congress and one-time leaders in the State, all think that Frothingham is too young to become Governor; that the law of succession by reason of Frothingham's youth ought to be smashed, and that the year 1911 is the proper time to smash it. Each of the Congressmen thinks that he is the man to break the law of succession and succeed Curtis Guild, Jr., as Governor.

A solution of this would mean about the nearest thing to a real contest that the leaders of the G. O. P. have ever been able to have. Lawrence would have about ten out of 100 chances of getting the support of Senator Lodge. Gardner probably would have the backing of Senator Lodge, his father-in-law, but would get little else. The test, his intimates say, whether he had his support or not. Weeks would muster nearly all of the financial interest to his support, and Draper, backed by tradition and numerous personal admirers would also run.

The G. O. P. machine smashed. A Springfield convention held by Republicans, and heaven alone knows what else.

How It Works Out.

And so.— Well, here's the plan in detail:

The Eleventh Congressional District mapped out by the Republican machine to be a Republican district, will be represented by Democratic candidates, must be by Democrats. Draper, Governor Frothingham are the men to do it.

Draper calls you. And Mr. Frothingham will run.

Ha, ha! A vacancy in the Lieutenant Governorship. Who will take it? Who else but John W. Weeks, just rounding out his third term in Congress.

Gardner and Lawrence have repeatedly stated that Frothingham's name fine for second place. Neither would Weeks—for three years. But Gardner and Lawrence watch him.

Messrs. Gardner and Lawrence will be persuaded that their party needs them in Congress for another term. They will be left, separately, that they have the Governorship next time, and that they shouldn't be "selfish" and bother John Weeks, who is patriotic enough to waste his time for the Lieutenant-Governor's chair for a whole year.

BOSSES IN PANIC OVER ESSEX COUNTY REVOLT; BARREL OPENED WIDE

ESSEX COUNTY, listed from time immemorial as Republican State headquarters as a safe-and-sound, gold-bonded, forty per cent dividend G. O. P. security, has become a wide-open, split-up back, smashed-to-pieces wreck—from the view point of Augustus P. Gardner, Congressman from the Sixth Massachusetts district, son-in-law of United States Senator Lodge and active boss of Essex county.

That just the exact wording of the talk that Mr. Gardner is handing out to postmasters and other under-the-whip folks in Essex County, for a time at least, according to the plans of the leaders. A plan now under consideration by them provides for Frothingham's retirement from the Lieutenant Governorship next year, his candidacy for Congress from the Eleventh District next Fall, the renomination of Weeks for Congress, the nomination of Weeks for Governor in 1911 and his re-election by the usual Republican majority of 40,000 votes.

Barrel Opened Wide.

A week ago they were using the old reliable campaign salve and the party whip to smooth the configuration. But that method failed, and yesterday the lungs of the chiefs of the party were opened up and the barrel was given to "go out and get 'em." Gardner emissaries tried to stop the Democratic talk yesterday.

After the Gardner messengers had gone to their next stopping place the anti-Draper talk was resumed. Essex county has a long-standing reputation for not doing what is paid for in advance.

Congressman Gardner is not leaving all of the work to personal emissaries. He is on the Federal and State payrolls, and is himself putting himself in every minute of the time. He is making flying trips through Essex county, stopping here and there just long enough to let the neighbors see him make a current pipe, halting his automobile on street corners long enough to ask the sweltering loafing individual for the "loan of a plug of tobacco, as my dudeen has gone out," and repeating about chin music on the local boards of health have notified him are sick—ring old campaign cane and doing other things to let the voters know how good a chap a real millionaire can be during election time.

Gardner is Alarmed.

Gardner is scared out of his confidence that Essex County can be persuaded, called or frightened into doing what his Father-in-law Lodge and Corporation Lobbyist Ward Hill want done. He has a mistaken notion that Essex County is going to be carried by James H. Vahey, Eugene N. Foss, Frank C. Richardson, Alexander Bell, Arthur L. Nason and other enemies of Boss Rule. And he knows that Essex County itself has got the sweltering feeling about it.

Down in the ballwick of John N. Cole there is a feeling that the former Congressman's representatives, with all of their faults, was too good for the Boss to his faults, was too good for the Boss to lose. Cole is going to help but little.

Down in the ballwick of Congressman Gardner's own home town Swampscott, the Democratic candidate for Senator, Frank C. Richardson, is a popular man. Richardson is a native of Gloucester. He was the reason for the opposition to Shaw, for Gus Hubbard's influence with the machine, for the opposition to Arthur Nason—and incidentally for Nason's victory—and for the side-tripping of Ex-Representative Edwin C. McIntire.

McIntire, in the Spring of 1908, was a certain of appointment to the Fish and Game Commission as Sub-Treasurer Curtis Guild appointment as Collector of the Port. But Edwin was inconsiderate enough to make a fight in the House of Representatives for a Direct Nominations bill and the job went to Ex-Senator George Gaskell of Brockton, one of the faithful.

Throughout all the bushels in Essex County there runs a vein of questions as to just how far the influence of Boss Ward Hays Hammond as a resident is going to save on the future politics of the district. Mr. Hammond has received a great deal from men identified with the Gardner machine, particularly in the matter of his aspiration for the Vice-Presidency, and he hasn't forgotten them. Just now he is keeping quiet. But the popular impression is that if Hill has a very few more evidences of the decline of the Gardner machine's power to bring him into the midst of the Essex County political fray.

FERNALD JOINS TAFT.

AUGUSTA, Oct. 23.—Governor Fernald has left to join President Taft's river trip from St. Louis to New Orleans, in which he will participate, together with other Governors and Congressmen, under the auspices of the Business Men's League and the Lake-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterway Association, and will return to Maine about the 10th of November.

VAHEY DARES GLIDDEN TO DENY 'BOUGHT' TALK; 'WILL PROVE IT TRUE'

THE Democratic candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor, Vahey and Foss, aroused great enthusiasm at a series of rallies in Taunton, Middleboro, Attleboro and North Attleboro last evening, and were supplemented by Congressman A. J. Peters and ex-mayor J. F. Fitzgerald of Boston. Vahey and Foss spoke at all the meetings, while Congressman Peters and Fitzgerald spoke at Middleboro and Fred W. Mansfield, Peters and ex-Mayor Fitzgerald and Lyndon Lyon speakers added to the interest at each rally.

Mr. Vahey centered his remarks [illegible] Governor Glidden's speech [illegible] Tariff, and as able and willing to prove [illegible] of his statements. He also made a plea for home rule in Massachusetts cities.

Mr. Foss gave considerable attention to the tariff situation, showing how beat it the Payne-Aldrich bill leaves upon the necessaries of life. He pointed out that a vote for the Democratic ticket will be a vote for a strong protest against such a state of affairs.

Congressman Peters declared that Congressman Weeks voted to deceive himself when he voted for a protective tariff on its tariff bill and that he is now claiming to be for one that he was powerless to vote against them.

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald called attention to the recent primaries in Framingham and Lowell to further prove the sentiment of the people of the State and the safeguarding of the interests in the cities and towns. "We know how glorious things there are in this State," he said.

Dares Glidden to Deny

Mr. Vahey spoke as follows:

"Governor Draper this afternoon took it upon himself to defend Senator S. Gilbert Clitherall, a member of his council, and Senator Brayton, and said that I have on both accused Mr. Clitherall of using the influence of his high position to secure for the other right that they were going to get for him a contract for building the new Draper road. If they had to bought, I do not understand that Mr. Clitherall made any public denial of what he said I charged, certainly has not come to my attention.

"It has been suggested by Governor Draper that what he did say was that he would be ELECTED to the governorship so as to be in a position to assist in saving to the people of this State the millions of dollars which the Democratic legislature, elected by the votes of the Democratic members of the Boston delegation, was going to squander in the erection of the Boston Elevated railroad. But if Governor Draper is bragging that to do so he is only boasting of the [illegible] and says rather a forced way of avoiding doing them.

"If I have taken the trouble to offer any explanation of the question, I assure you it was simply because I knew that Mr. Glidden's party would seize upon what the newspaper reported I was saying, and what I have not denied and am not prepared to deny. For the same reason I have written a letter to the Boston newspapers that he make such a statement.

Attacks G. O. P. Machine.

He is a rather vigorous, forceful type of [illegible] has succeeded in [illegible] himself that he can say anything [illegible] matter what the [illegible] Massachusetts [illegible] the people will [illegible] the [illegible] Republican [illegible] Republican [illegible] Republican

A Boston Wholesaler's Surplus Stock of

French Underwear at ⅓ Off

A Boston Underwear manufacturer visited the French market during the past Summer and experimented with underwear of French manufacture. About 90 per cent. he sold to the regular trade, the entire balance of about 10 per cent. he closed out to the Tunnel Bargain Basement at one-third less than regular.

A profitable transaction for him, because he sold 90 per cent of the underwear at a profit, and a profitable transaction for you if you get some of these Undermuslins Monday.

Remember all are French made and hand embroidered—the best wearing garments—and in this instance for the price of the ORDINARY kinds.

WHY POPE DELAYS GIVING AMERICA CARDINALS

Pontiff Is in No Hurry to Add to Sacred College, Vatican Believes.

HAND CANNOT BE FORCED.

When the Time Comes, Archbishops O'Connell, Farley and Ireland May Be Honored.

(From the Boston American's special Correspondent at Rome.)

ROME, Oct. 10—Those who more in the most exclusive circles of this city, both in society and at the Vatican world give much, at this moment, for a glimpse of the inner mind of Pope Pius X. Two questions are agitating them, or rather two phases of the same question first, when will the Pope hold the next consistory, and second if, will the Pontiff name the consistory when he does call it? I pass without filling the 24 ancient which exist in the College of Cardinals?

It is safe to say there is not a man living, in or out of Rome, who can attempt to answer either question. If the present Pope is not a Gregory the Great, a Pius IX, or a Leo in the displayed possession of the high qualities of statesmanship which distinguished those illustrious predecessors of his in the chair of Peter, he more than makes up the absence of their brilliant qualities by his marvellous faculty of knowing his own mind and keeping his own counsel. The power he has shown in this way is positively superb. From the moment the throw was first placed upon his brow down to the present hour the "Good Father," as his people of Venice loved to call him, has acted with such confident reticence in dealing with the affairs of his world-wide church as to impress all around him, even the closest in his councils with the feeling that this X knows but one master in and feels but one Seder in his life as the supreme pontiff of the church and that he is not shrinking with the counsel he receives, his inspiration and this leadership is his own conscience.

Cannot Force Pope's Hand.

All offer suggestion, advice, argument or pressure, whether it be mild or strong, may be witnessed and be heard and held at its proper value according to the source from which it emanates, but its gone in the mind of the Pope, so far as it may affect his policy, is purely extraneous and wholly subordinate. Pius X, in guiding the ship of the church which all thought he has was called to preside as if every act were to be his last on earth.

Therefore, it may be written down in letters not to be erased that Pius X will appoint new cardinals or he will not appoint any exactly in accordance with what he thinks best for the church, and for no other reason whatsoever.

This is not being cruel, it should not be difficult to see that so far as can be judged by the Pope himself, the passing with it of all the status and the progress [illegible] to-day. Pius X will pass on to the next Pontiff, who may add or not to the membership of the Sacred College.

Many Vacancies Exist.

It is true there are many vacancies in the [illegible] but [illegible] in its [illegible] year. But the affairs of the church are being carried along with consummate smoothness and success under the present regime and no one at present itself, on any side, that the church's interests are suffering in the slightest degree, or will suffer in the world, because of the hesitancy of the Pope to call new prelates to the ranks of the papal princedom.

While the church in the countries of Europe, in France, in Spain, in Italy, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, Ireland, and Belgium is very deeply concerned, as is the heart of Pius, he is impressed by the fact, as he put it before me, so long ago as Leo XIII was impressed, that in the virile growth of Catholicity in the United States, which until his time was almost a sealed book at the Vatican, so far as knowledge of American affairs is concerned, that it is destined to be the nearest of [illegible] to say that if he were to act in the direction of appointing new cardinals, he would undoubtedly confer red hats on three of the prelates of the United States.

No Shadow of Politics.

He will do so, I am the more confidently and conscientiously, because the appointments, or elevations, he would make for the United States would not carry in their train a shadow of political complexion, such as like appointments have forcibly, before now, thrown upon him, of high or of low degree, are his children.

And so with such a man no motive of expediency can dwell for a moment. If his conscience and his mind be made up that has been rightly earned by the individual in question.

If he takes a prelate and invests him with the purple of the princes of the church it is solely and entirely because its future work deserves the honor and is worthy of the responsibility of the highest dignity the church affords, next to the papal throne itself.

Judging men by such high standards Pius has long since seen the splendid claims of the church of the United States for such a dignity, and [illegible] the cardinalate college, and if he should choose to [illegible] undoubtedly name three American prelates as worthy of the highest honor in his power to bestow. Those three are John Ireland, archbishop of St. Paul; Thomas Murphy Farley, archbishop of New York, and William Henry O'Connell, archbishop of Boston. Those three names have been mentioned so often by responsible and sometimes irresponsible chroniclers of events at the Vatican that to mention them again seems but the retailment of the basest rumor.

The Y. M. C. A.

Eighth of a Series of Articles That Will Tell You Why You Should Help Raise That $500,000

THE BOY WHOM THE FATHERS FORGOT—NO. 8

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

THE Y. M. C. A. is not a civic institution in the sense that it is supported by municipal or national taxation. But it is a civic body in that it is accomplishing a civic duty and fulfilling a civic need.

It is as necessary in its field of endeavor as the public school and the State university, because its mission is identical with theirs—the betterment of American citizenship.

It is educating boys to be strong in brain, strong in body and strong in soul. It is giving them culture in its EDUCATIONAL classes—thew, sinew and good red blood in its GYMNASIUM, morality in its ETHICAL COURSES. It is helping them not only to be brighter men, but also to be better men and mightier men.

It has grown to be a powerful factor in city life, because the reason for its existence is powerful—because, however wisely the fathers of the Nation planned the welfare of those who could spend their boyhood in school and at play, they made no provision for the Title [illegible] lows whose poverty and misfortunes burden their childhood with the harness of commerce.

As our cities grow, the growth of the Y. M. C. A. must be commensurate. It has already outgrown its resources in Boston. It calls for support and deserves it. It makes its appeal with the same right and in the same spirit that the STATE makes its demand upon every just citizen to contribute his share toward the maintenance of every function which insures the highest type of American citizenship.

This is the eighth article in the Y. M. C. A. series by Mr. Kaufman. The first article was published in last Sunday's American and one has appeared each day in the Evening American since. Copies of the American containing this series may still be obtained at American office.

BOSTON PRIEST TO UNITE O'SULLIVANS

Discovery of Old Spanish Painting Leads to National Organization.

Father Maguire, the scholarly Jesuit priest of Boston College has a most interesting and original proposition on foot to put up to every man and woman in America whose name is O'Sullivan.

A. P. Weidlitz, a well-known Roxbury sculptor, recently wrote to Fr. Maguire telling him of a rare artistic "find" he had made while traveling in Spain last Summer. Out of this Nardini discovery springs the proposal which the Boston priest is about to make to the great army of O'Sullivans.

While walking one day through the classic halls of the famous Irish College of Salamanca the trained eye of Mr. Nardini was arrested by a remarkable picture. As he studied the masterpiece he learned a story of Irish history. The recital of how that portrait came to be in Salamanca impressed him so that he made a copy of the painting and brought it home to show to his wife. He had also the order of a marble statue of O'Sullivan, Prince of Bere, and present it to Boston College for its Irish Hall of Fame.

Many Leaders of Name.

In his letter to Fr. Maguire Mr. Nardini says: "This offer carries just one condition, that you will organize a national society of Sullivans, including persons of his name, to raise a sum sufficient to fit up a room for the monument."

In accepting the offer Fr. Maguire refers to many noted persons bearing the name, and suggesting that pictures of these men with historical articles could be placed in the proposed O'Sullivan hall.

The story of O'Sullivan, Prince of Bere, is full of interest and pathos. He had taken part in the "fifteen years' war waged by many of the Irish chiefs against Elizabeth's government. Hugh O'Neill, Earl of Tyrone, had been the leader selected to guide the revolt. Success was almost in the grasp of the Irish army when assistance came from Spain, under Don Juan d'Aquila, secured strategic points directed, and what was seen to be a force of 5,000 British soldiers caused the hard earned results of fifteen years to be turned into defeat.

Victim of Assassin.

O'Sullivan retreated to the north, but O'Sullivan still held out in command of the Munster forces.

In one of his sorties, with but 143 men under the command of Richard Geoghegan, a force of 5,000 British soldiers was held at bay. But the odds were too great. The English took the castle at Dunboy and its brave defenders were put to slaughter.

O'Sullivan's retreat is one of the most heroic events of history. He finally escaped to Spain, where he was received in the most select and distinguished society, but was later assassinated by an English secret service man.

PASTOR DEFENDS "HOSS" RACING

No Harm in Billiards, Either, Declares the Rev. Mr. Cook in North Attleboro.

NORTH ATTLEBORO, Oct. 24. A second reply to the criticism made so recently by parishioners of the First Universalist Church concerning the playing of cards, pool and billiards has been made by the Rev. F. W. Cook, who organized a club which has rooms in the parish house equipped with pool and billiard tables. His latest sermon had for a subject "The Church and the Game."

"How to deal with amusements in their various forms is by no means a new problem to the Christian Church," said Mr. Cook in his defense of the game, "but the attitude which the Christian church is beginning to take is new.

"The principal fund I find with the attitude of the church of yesterday toward the game is that it was wholly intolerant. Because the game is not serious in its purpose, it is to be utterly condemned, and those who spend leisure hours in it are frivolous and sometimes wicked.

The Truth About Cards.

"The game of cards has been condemned wherever it has been played with a common deck. And yet the kindred game of 'authors,' from which good church men have never dared to play entirely escaped criticism. Pool and billiards have for generations been perched against. And yet 'bagatelle' and 'marbles' and 'tenals' and other games played with spherical objects have been kindly tolerated.

"Horse racing, than which no more exciting amusement has been provided, has been blacklisted, while boat racing, athletic meets, automobile and bicycle racing, have long looked upon without fear and trembling.

"For some time people with reason and not limited by prejudice or narrowness have been sufficiently trying to make the world see that all games are evil only when they are put to evil use and that no game is essentially evil unless it has an evil object in its purpose.

No Harm in Contests.

Personally I believe that an evening of bridge playing for a prize is no more sinful than a yacht race for a silver cup; that simply a contest in which chance and skill combine to win. It is not gambling.

"RELIGION AND DRAMA."

Episcopal Rector Is to Speak on That Subject.

Massachusetts Clerical Association, composed of all the Episcopal ministers of Boston and vicinity, will hold its first regular monthly meeting for the Fall in St. Paul's Parish rooms Tremont street, Monday, November 1, at 4 o'clock.

The speaker will be the Rev. George J. Prescott of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Cortes street, who will take for his subject "Religion and the Drama." Discussion will follow the address.

Bishop Lawrence will preside at the meeting to be held in the same place Monday, Nov. 15, at 10:30 A. M. Henry P. Cope of Chicago will read a paper upon the topic: "The Enlarging Field of Religious Education."

WOMEN NEEDED TO RAISE FUNDS FOR Y. M. C. A.

SUM IS NOW $361,998

Plan to Get Necessary $500,000 by System of Small Pledges, Payable Yearly.

As appeal to the women of Boston to add their share of work [illegible] toward the completion of the $500,000 fund needed by the Y. M. C. A. for its new building is made to-day by Executive Secretary George W. Mehaffey of the Association.

With half the distance gone and our work more in which to complete the fund, the association has received $361,998. About $250,000 more is needed before the [illegible] can, without which the association can not do its present work, call it complete a reality.

"Though the women helped much last week, it has been principally men's work thus far," said Mr. Mehaffey yesterday. "Now the women ought to get to work for us. It is a men's association but there is no better woman's work.

Some Work for Mothers.

The future welfare of the men and boys of this city affects the mothers and all those women even more strongly than it does the men. Of course, women have their own charities to look out for, but this is everybody's work. Boys are not primarily the care of men.

The campaign thus far has been highly gratifying in the fact that we have been able to enlist a splendid volunteer force of business men who have enrolled their names, money in the interests of real [illegible] No consultation are being [illegible] and for soliciting for it on the results of this volunteer work are [illegible]

What we need most in the closing and best week of the campaign is from ten to fifteen thousand small pledges of from five to ten dollars each, payable within a year, being one pay-ment or four.

"Such a response, while not bearing [illegible] on our one group of individuals, would bring the raising of the fund out would show that the work of the Association was appreciated by those it touched most intimately and would make for an even more definite bond between the Christian Association and all the people.

BUNKO MEN IN CHICOPEE.

Good Business in Sawdust at Ten Cents a Package.

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 23—Two men from this city have been doing a lively business in Chicopee, selling three small packages of sawdust for 10 cents a teaspoonful of sawdust, for 10 cents, until the police spoiled their little game.

They guaranteed that they were selling a new kind of disinfectant until Patrolman Gelina brought them before City Marshal Bourke and a pocketful of the brown sawdust like that made by lead pencil sharpeners was found on each man. Their entire stock in trade consisted of the sawdust and the little envelopes. Marshal Bourke gave the men five minutes to get out of town.

RUSSIAN DUMA RESUMES.

Impatience Expressed at the Slow Progress of Reform Work.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 23.—The duma convened to-day, after having been in recess since June 15.

The October-ist congress, which has closed its sessions, expressed disapproval of the slow pace with which reforms are being introduced in the empire, and instructed its representatives in parliament to press the adoption of bills providing for the inviolability of the person, the outlining the conditions under which martial law may be proclaimed, the accountability of public officials, the reorganization of the senate and for the establishment of the functions of the supreme Court.

Woman Who Presided Over Home Asks Place as Maid

Family broken up by heart trouble. Mrs. Bishop a child-maid up for the children's sake.

MRS. CHAS. S. BISHOP
WANTED—Position as housekeeper by a woman with a little girl 5 years old; no objection to going out of town. MRS. D. L. B.
ANDREA
CHAS. S. BISHOP

"If my husband should come to me and say, 'Dollie, let's patch up our trouble for the children's sake,' I'd do it. For as he used to say, 'A woman can only have one husband.'"

This is the pathetic appeal of Mrs. De Lana Bishop, who once presided over a beautiful home at No. 1670 Massachusetts avenue, now seeking employment as a maid in a home such as used to be her own. With her by her humble lodgings is her beautiful daughter, Andrea, five years old. Over a cobbler's shop at No. 3008A Beacon street they live and grieve for a return of what was and what might be again.

She was the happy wife of a prosperous business man. The divorce court was sought by one and then the other. No decree has yet been made. It may be that the domestic storm was still despite and sunshine breeds fair for this little but tragic family. The wife breathes this hope.

Close Guard for Girl.

Just now Andrea is ill hurt while looking for employment. Mrs. Bishop was about to take a position in the family of a physician in Natick when she received inquiries of an elevated train accident which she says has since prevented her from working.

Mrs. Bishop left her home last March since that time her life has been that of a waif or without a real home.

At first she went to the home of Mrs. Robert H. Stark, who lived opposite to her old residence in Massachusetts avenue. From there as soon as she could get control and money, she went to the lodging house for the largest school for girls in Shepherd street. Seeking a place that would be more homelike for her little daughter, she again removed to Mrs. Mary Silva's house, No. 3 Front street.

Lastly, feeling that her thousand dollar lodgings and feeling he would attempt to gain possession of her little Andrea, which she says he has tried to do four times, she moved to her present place. The little girl is always with her and tries to make up for the loss of her two brothers, Mrs. Bishop's other children, by playing with a child which the landlady, Mrs. Petrequin, is keeping.

Finds Solace in Verse.

To pass the dreary hours Mrs. Bishop puts in her time writing. She is at work on a play. She has composed verse in her melancholy moments. This poem, "Cast Aside," may reflect some of her unhappy past:

CAST ASIDE.

I care not for your riches,
Or to live in your mansion grand,
For misery and I are partners,
Heart to heart, hand to hand.

Recall the day you cursed me!
My God, what a bitter blow!
And from the house that sheltered me
I was turned into the snow.

For hours I walked in darkness,
Not knowing where to turn;
And then I reached the station
Where shuddy green lights burn

"Why are you here?" asked the Captain.
His kind eyes opened wide,
"I and no child are outcasts,"
I said; "We've been cast aside!"

Another poem, called "The Dying Son," is purely imaginative. Tale is the poem:

THE DYING SON.

Come close to my cot, mother darlin'
For a secret I to tell you to-day.
I heard a sweet girl in the meadow,
Like Maud Muller, raking the hay.

But, mother dear, please will you listen—
Why will you sob so and cry?
For I must tell you right away,
Before I say good by, and die

Elaine was the name of my sweetheart,
So gentle, so meek and so mild
While I was the wild, wicked trampie
To wedded the innocent child

Forgive me my sins mother darlin',
Promise you will that I pray
As I stand on the lone, lowly journey
And your sweet words will lighten my way

"I am gradually dying of grief," said Mrs. Bishop. "I hope that the darkness in which I am living may pass and the sun once more be born into my life. That may be somewhat poetic, but it is plain and present fact that confronts me.

"Look at me! When I left my home I weighed 176 pounds. I have failed like a flower and to-day I weigh only 124 pounds. I am actually fading away.

"I have pawned everything but my wedding ring and I have gone without food and proper raiment. I have gone to bed hungry, to arise to my ordeal.

"I am barely able to exist. I have not received the $100 week allowance which my husband was ordered to pay by Judge Red-rison of East Boston, since July 22. At 1 have left is $5, which remains of an assignment which his court ordered him to pay.

"There was an assignment of property worth $5000 a so, but the man who owned the property died last June, and to-day he tells me I will have to wait until next year before I will be able to get any thing. In the meantime I will have to get work.

Willing to Forgive All.

"My heart goes out to my husband in my suffering. I need to worship him. If he should come forward, even now, and say, 'Dollie, let's patch it up for the children's sake,' I'd do it. For, as he used to say, 'A woman can only have one husband.'

My husband has filed a cross libel, but I shall have no trouble in proving that I have been a model wife.

"I have been willing to take up my time and keep from going mad. I have written a five-act drama called "Cast Aside." It is the story of my life, depicting all my sorrow and suffering into it. I have poured all the anguish that has torn my heart asunder and is killing me by inches. If it is ever produced the world will behold the bared life of a broken hearted woman.

"Yes, I have written other things. I have written a poem on the same subject into this, also. I have dropped the tears of grief and mingled the sobs of a suffering woman.

"Once, when I was feeling happy, I wrote, 'Hippo, the Big Black Coon,' a funny negro song, intended for ragtime. "Sweet Angeline" is another of my songs. It is a sensational ballad. Critics speak well of it."

TO CARRY FIGHT FOR DECENCY DIRECT TO GOVERNOR

Roxbury Citizens Unable After Months of Effort to Force O'Meara to End Shocking Conditions in District's Parks.

Commissioner Says: "Application to Captains More Effective Than Writing Me;" Law-Breaking Still Goes On.

Beautiful Tracts Given Over to Various Vices, Women and Children Unable to Make Use of the Recreation Grounds.

"STATION houses and division commanders are established and appointed for the protection and convenience of particular localities, and DIRECT APPLICATION to them is usually MUCH MORE EFFECTIVE THAN A CORRESPONDENCE WITH THE POLICE COMMISSIONER."

This is the position taken by Commissioner O'Meara in reply to the protest of the 300 leading citizens of Roxbury from the Roxbury Improvement Association, who have found conditions in that district fast growing so evil that they are intolerable.

If a police captain insults the taxpayers who pay his salary, ignores the demands of decency and neglects to have [illegible] properly policed to stop crap shooting and other gambling, prize fighting and even downright unpunishable immorality, don't go to Pemberton square June 24, ask the captain and let him insult [illegible] more. That is Mr. O'Meara's final [illegible] in fewer words.

The letter from which the quotation was taken was one of several which passed between Commissioner O'Meara and Ernest C. Marshall, former member of the school committee, and who, as penal institutions commissioner for four years under Mayor Quincy administration, knows a few things about the way the police work.

Will See Governor.

In his capacity as chairman of the committee on parks of the Roxbury Improvement Association Mr. Marshall took the scandalous conditions which have made the prettiest parks of Roxbury a menace to public morals, and all but impossible for the mothers and children as a place of recreation, to Pemberton square.

At the recent meeting of the Roxbury Improvement Association Mr. Marshall read his report, and men like the Rev. Clarence A. Vincent, D. D., pastor of the Walnut Avenue Congregational Church, joined with him in denunciation of the demoralization of the youth of that section and the refusal of the police to interest themselves.

Finding O'Meara impervious to the requests and his subordinates less inclined to move and blocking his plans, the Roxbury citizens will ignore the Commissioner and from now on see what Governor Draper means to do about it.

The following extract from Mr. Marshall's report as chairman of the committee on parks explains itself:

Law Grossly Violated.

"We regret to say that the police cars of the parks is very far from what it should be. Gambling and horse play, profanity and even indecency may be heard and seen in most of our parks every evening, and particularly have these things been observed by members of the committee on Sundays and on holidays.

"The committee reluctantly feel obliged to report to the society that, although the attention of the Police Commissioner has been repeatedly called to these gross violations of the law, no marked improvement has been observed in the police surveillance of these grounds. THE COMMITTEE WOULD RESPECTFULLY SUGGEST THAT, UNLESS A BETTER OBSERVANCE OF THE LAWS IS ENFORCED IN OUR PARKS BY THE POLICE AUTHORITIES, BY WHICH THEY MAY BECOME AGREEABLE AND SAFE RESORTS FOR THE WOMEN AND CHILDREN OF THE DISTRICT, THAT THE ATTENTION OF THE GOVERNOR OF THE STATE BE CALLED TO THE LAX ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAWS RELATING TO PUBLIC ORDER IN THIS DISTRICT.

Dr. Vincent was emphatic in his criticism of the police administration.

"I have nothing to say about the, men

CONVENT CHAPEL ROBBED.

Thieves Take Gems From Image Of the Virgin.

CZENSTOCHONAW, Russia, Oct. 23.—Several million dollars worth of gems were looted from the chapel of the Pauline convent here by robbers last night.

The image of the Virgin of the Rosary was despoiled of its jewels, notably the crown and votive offerings of jewels.

70 Miles An Hour.

GARDEN CITY, Oct. 23.—The fastest time ever made over the circuit on which the Vanderbilt cup race is to be decided next Saturday was recorded in practice to-day by Jack Aiken. He finished four laps of the 12.64-mile course in 11:13, 11:24, 11:22 and 11:33, or close to seventy miles an hour average speed.

The Newest Creation in Lamps

VENETIAN ART LAMP

The shade is produced from exclusive design-patented moulds, is elaborately decorated with an embossed floral design of coral red poppies, surrounded by a green foliage, having a deep red background.

The decorations are raised on the surface and are covered with satin glazing.

When illuminated, the effect is most exquisite, bringing out the poppies in their natural colors, with the subdued and harmonizing relief of green and deep red.

The Pedestal is antique in construction and finish, model being reproduced from an old Venetian design, with the latest treatment of Pompeian green.

Each lamp is finished perfectly, is guaranteed to be safe and the result of the most modern ideas in lamp building.

The Venetian lamp is 20 inches high; Shade is 10 inches in diameter; the Pedestal 8 inches in diameter.

LIVE 10,000 YEARS WITH PROF. KNOX; HE'S GOING TO Mental Scientist In Boston Says He May Depart at End of That Time, if Tired.

TEN thousand years will elapse before President M. F. Knox of the Mental Science College of Bryn Mawr, Penn., intends to depart this life, according to present plans. He will not die then unless he is tired of life. Furthermore, Prof. Knox claims to be able to show others how to join him in immortality.

"There is no future life," declares the professor. "Nothing ends now, and the nations around make the most of it."

Professor Knox has come here with his wife and wife president of the college, Melvina Hanson, and they have joined the fifty-seven varieties of religion and faith that occupy Huntington Chambers by taking possession of the lecture hall with a brand new cult.

"Mental science," declares President Knox, "is not a religion. We have no religion. I am not an atheist, neither am I an agnostic. What we teach is not in conflict with religion. Religion is not to be taught in the business room of the office nor in the streets. Let us let that element do not require it."

Invented Mental Science.

"Do not confound mental science with Christian science. Christian science is an old Hindoo religion. I invented mental science and my college has been established fifteen years."

President Knox looks as though he were capable of inventing a science. He is venerable of appearance and has a long iron gray beard which wags when he talks. He lectures upon "How to Acquire Wealth," "How to Educate the Child to Success," and "How to Overcome Death and Live Forever."

"In a search for health fifty years ago I discovered the principles of mental science," said the professor. "I discovered how to build up the body and the mind. I know how to live forever."

"You are only fifty-six years now and your hair is gray. How do you know you will not live twenty years hence and grow bald?" asked the reporter.

The professor looked at him reproachfully. "My hair turned gray when I was very young and before I had discovered the immortal principles. I shall never change from now on. Death is unnecessary and the result of ignorance."

Free from Superstition.

The professor now produced a pamphlet which deals with this subject more fully. After his name upon the title page were the initials "Ph. D. and L. L. D."

"From what college did you get your degrees?"

"From my own college," said the professor proudly. "I conferred them myself."

"We take a rational view of everything," he declared. "We have freed ourselves from the superstitions of the Bible. We do not believe that the world was ever created. It has existed from the beginning, but there was no beginning. Man has been here from the beginning and always will be."

"Everybody thinks different now, but after a thousand years, or few thousand years I know that all thinking people will have adopted my views."

The graduating class of Mental Science College this year numbered fifty-six," he added, "and all of them are equipped to cope with the world.

"Will they all live forever?" asked the reporter.

"They will," replied the professor firmly, "if they observe the rules laid down for immortality."

BOSTON SALESGIRLS PAINT? HORRORS! NO SUCH THING!

ARTLESSLY DEMURE HERE

"No Flash In the Hub," Say Employes. "Rats!" Cries Windy City.

DO Boston salesgirls need a dress censor?

"Well, I should say not," declare the Boston store owners.

Do Boston salesgirls need to be reprimanded for wearing puffs, rats and pads?

Not at all. They are what might be called "strictly first class."

From now on Chicago salesgirls are to be inspected every morning by a severe official censor. Needless to say, Chicago salesgirls are crying their eyes out, for Chicago girls always were more or less artificial—at least that's what girls from other villages say. Anyway, their friends will scarcely recognize them bereft of pads and hair puffs, and rats and rouge and powder and all the little helps with which Chicagoans were wont to enhance themselves.

Boston department stores are not to copy the system just installed in Chicago.

Boston Girls Are "Real."

"Boston girls are conservative and dress in good taste," said one big department store head. "Although we require that they shall wear black or white waists and shall never enter the store flashily dressed, we have never needed to do anything further.

"There is a vast difference between Boston salesgirls and Chicago or New York girls. Our Boston girls prefer to dress neatly and modestly. They dress their hair becomingly and never flash jewelry around. We have no need to complain.

"If the new rules just installed in Chicago are necessary, the Chicago salesgirl must have been a wonderful collection of artificiality. But from now on she must go on her face varnish, without a saving dab of powder to make a gauze in the mirror suitable. The sober bandeau Swiss cheese, otherwise neck-a-boo waists, low collars, short sleeves, jewelry other than a simple locket and one ring. "We can't wear nothing," as the forlorn and wan little salesgirl plaintively laments.

But Boston girls don't do that sort of thing—oh, no! Their employers declare they are all they appear to be, that their eyes are un-enhanced with the belladonna of the eyebrow pencil, that the blush on their cheeks is no more than nature gave them and that their figures are absolutely "all their own."

Art or Artlessness?

Chicago employers declare they will remain firm in spite of threatened strikes and insurrections among the girls, and every employe who fails to come up to the critical standard is to be sent home for repairs or dismantling. If she refuses or chooses she will have to look for another position.

"Ha, ha, ha, you'll get a fine, good little cringe!" say the Boston girls.

"If the truth were known, you're probably no better than we are," retorts the Chicago, "only the Bostonese can't see through your arts in Boston the way the Chicagoans can!"

Yet, you know, it's barely possible the art of deceptive adornment may have reached a stage of perfection in Chicago that renders it able safely to defy detection from all those who did not have it in the manufacture.

But Boston salesgirls are happy, while their Chicago sisters are miserable.

CHURCH TO CELEBRATE.

Eliot Congregational Observes 75th Anniversary All Week.

The Eliot Congregational Church, on Kenilworth street, Roxbury, will observe its 75th anniversary with a week's service, beginning this morning. The various societies of the church have united with Rev. Winfrid C. Rhoades, the pastor, and Clarence T. Moore, the chairman of the committee, in making the program a success. Some form of service will be held every afternoon or evening. Today at 10:30 there will be a historical sermon by the Rev. Benjamin F. Hamilton, D.D., pastor emeritus. To-morrow there will be a Christian Endeavor anniversary, with reunion of old members and social hour, with refreshments.

LAST CALL FOR OPERA.

Subscription Lists for Season Seats Close To-morrow.

The subscription department of the Boston Opera Company calls attention of music lovers to the last opportunity to subscribe to season tickets for the $60, $90 and $120 seats. The lists close to-morrow evening. Assistant Secretary Edwin Westley, in charge of the subscription department, will move Tuesday morning from No. 252 Huntington avenue to the new opera house. There are several hundred seats in the boxes, but there are still some available. Prices for these are $1,440 and $1,080. By pooling their subscriptions, subscribers may reduce the individual expense. Two persons, for instance, subscribing to one box, gets it at one-fourth the total expense individually.

COUPLE ACCUSED OF FRAUD.

Haynes, Porter & Co., a Boston concern which sells Rogers silverware by mail orders, have prosecuted Joseph Millman and his wife Rose of Passaic, N. J., the charge of obtaining goods under false pretences. Indictments have been found against the couple. The Millmans filed one order from the woman and four others they believe she is to receive for, during receiving payment, had detectives investigate. It is claimed that the couple pawned the silverware. A member of the Boston house said, "We prosecuted this couple because that was in accordance with our strict custom not to allow the least any attempt at fraud. But we find that the implicit confidence in the public we show by shipping goods as we do seldom meets with any such response."

FISHERMEN GET PRIZES.

The prizes to the fishermen catching the largest fish on the steamer Nay Philip during the season just closed have been awarded as follows: First prize, $150, to William Medeiros, No. 300 Wellington street, Brighton, for a twenty-nine pound cod, second and third prizes, $100 and $75, to J. W. Murray, No. 20 Frost street, Charlestown, twenty-five and three-fourths and twenty-four pound cods; fourth prize, $50 to Richard Fabis, No. 243 Meridian street, East Boston; fifth prize to F. W. Jacobois, Ipswich. Over 30,000 persons enjoyed the sport on this boat during the Summer.

Man Sues Wife for $150,000 Alimony

Also Names Correspondent In Petition for Divorce From Rich Woman.

WINTHROP, Ia., Oct. 23.—Action for divorce against his wife, Lydia Moo Alexander, has been filed in district court here by S. D. Alexander, a prominent business man of this city. Mr. Alexander asks alimony in the sum of $150,000.

In his bill Mr. Alexander charges are statutory, naming W. L. Smalley, at one time a Winthrop real estate man. Mr. Smalley is a married man with three children. The allegations are of a general nature.

Mrs. Alexander is the daughter of Dr. C. D. Bevington, formerly a well known banker and farmer of Madison County, and the builder of the Rock Island branch line from Somerset to Winthrop, who died a few years ago worth a million. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander were married in 1894. They have been separated for the last two or three years. There are no children.

At the death of her father Mrs. Alexander inherited a considerable sum of money, variously estimated as being in the neighborhood of $500,000.

BRIDGE ACCIDENT HOLDS UP WEDDING

MANCHESTER, Oct. 23.—A broken draw on the Boston & Maine Railroad bridge over the Saugus River at Lynn delayed for nearly an hour to-day the wedding of Miss Emily Faithful Ames, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Miner T. Ames of Chicago, and Gerald A. Bramwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Bramwell of New York City.

Bride, bridegroom, attendants and clergyman were forced to wait until the train from Boston, carrying 100 guests from New York, reached Manchester before proceeding with the ceremony.

The wedding was one of the prettiest events of the season and was attended by many smart-set people from Boston, New York, Chicago and the North Shore.

Emanuel Episcopal Church, in Masconomo street, was beautifully decorated for the wedding with roses, smilax and autumn foliage. The Rev. Hugh Birckhead, rector of St. George's Church, Stuyvesant square, New York, was the officiating clergyman. He was assisted by the Rev. E. J. Hudgins of Beverly.

Edward A. Taft of Boston was best man, and Mrs. Glenn Hall of Chicago matron of honor. The bride was given away by her brother, Miner T. Ames of Chicago.

FIGHTS BEQUEST TO CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

BROCKTON, Oct. 23. Relatives of the late Mrs. Clara Hunt Snow, who left $95,000 to the Christian Science Church in this city, are contesting the will. It is charged that Mrs. Snow, shortly before her death, intended to change her will, made five years before, and to leave the Christian Science Church but a small bequest. It is also claimed that she made several funds of these contemplated changes, but that for some reason not yet divulged she did not carry out her plans.

Mrs. Edith G. Martin, a friend, who lived with Mrs. Snow during the last few months of her life, is determined to try and break the will. She was left $7,000 by her aunt.

"I know my aunt intended to change her will," said Mrs. Martin today. "I know because I saw a memoranda of changes which she contemplated. Any made her will about five years ago. At that time she was head over heels in Christian faith. I think my aunt would have given her relatives a great deal more money than she did had she lived to carry out her plans."

Mrs. Snow was the widow of George G. Snow, a million ire manufacturer. She lived on Center street. She left over $100,000. Among the larger bequests was $75,000 to the city to be used for free outings for children.

BIG ARMY GUARDS THE CZAR IN ITALY

RACCONIGI, Italy, Oct. 23.—Czar Nicholas of Russia arrived here to-day to the booming of guns and a military display seldom equalled in modern times on similar occasions. An army was drawn up to salute him and for hours the royal train passed between unbroken lines of troops. Fifty thousand men guarded the ruler of the Russias.

The meeting of the Czar and Italy's King is one of the most important events of its kind in years. Its object is to plan to curb Austria in the Balkans.

Although there was a touch of simplicity about the actual greeting between the Czar and King Victor Emanuel, the two monarchs were surrounded by their courts, and the extraordinary military remained the scene before a battle so thick were the troops.

Little chance was left for a demonstration against the Czar. All the suspects who might be used as manifestation had been arrested and every possible precaution was taken to prevent either a show of disapproval or a more serious attempt. Nevertheless it could not be denied that there was danger

HERE IS WHERE THE HIGH TARIFF HITS YOU MR. VOTER

Almost Famine Prices Increase Cost of Living

What topic do men and women discuss these days with more anxiety than the increased and increasing cost of living? In thousands of homes in this old Commonwealth it excludes all else.

Colored reports from statistical bureaus in Washington may tell you "wages" have increased equal to the cost of living. You know better, Mr. Day Laborer and Mr. Bricklayer and Mr. Machinist and Mr. Carpenter, don't you?

And how about you, Mr. Clerk? How about the "salary" which you get? Has it doubled in a decade? Does the fifty-dollar man now get $100? Ask him.

Ten years ago every Republican orator in the land raged against a fifty-cent dollar. Remember? Well, ask them how about the dollar of to-day. Doesn't it take pretty near a dollar to buy you in food, clothing and other needs what fifty cents would purchase then? Now, on the level, doesn't it?

A careful inquiry made of the buyers in the leading stores which cater to all classes, the man with the pick and shovel and the man with the coupon scissors, reveals a startling condition. Compared with ten years ago, even five years ago, famine prices now prevail.

Behind the tariff walls the trust and tariff barons are exploiting you as they never dared before and would attempt in no land save this.

Then you could go into the grocery and buy a barrel of flour for $5.80. Now it costs only $7.25.

But Senator Lodge says "The Payne Tariff Bill is all right."

In 1899 beans cost you seven cents the quart. Now they are fifteen. Ask Senator Lodge.

Cornmeal to-day is three cents. It cost as much then. Some consolation there. But are you ready, Mr. Voter, for the diet of the plantation hand down South, Corn Pone, and the horrible disease of Pellagra which some think go with it? If so, eat cornmeal. It is all you have left.

Roast beef cost you then fourteen and two-thirds cents. How now, Mr. Voter? Just twenty-eight cents. You got the best rump cut then for twenty-five cents. Try it now. Nothing doing. Thirty-five cents, please.

And Senator Lodge says give us tariff walls.

Corned beef for the man whose "piece de resistance" was corned beef and cabbage has almost doubled from nine to sixteen cents. Veal forequarters cost you in "the good old days" just eight cents, now it's just DOUBLE that.

How about it, Senator? Explain it please, Your Excellency, Governor Draper.

Veal hindquarters were thirteen, now they are twenty-two cents; cutlets then twenty-two can now be had for thirty-eight cents, the price of venison a decade since.

Fresh pork has jumped from ten to sixteen; salt pork from nine to sixteen; smoked hams from thirteen to twenty; corned shoulder hams from nine to fourteen; sausages from eleven to fifteen; lard from eight to eighteen. Truly, cake is for the classes.

And we must have tariff for protection, says Senator Lodge. Butter was twenty-four. Try and buy it now. Somewhere around forty cents. Milk was five and six, now it's seven, eight and nine.

Coal is up, wood is up, gas as fuel and light holds its own, and there you are. In the clothing line things are even worse.

Shirting used to be thought dear at eight cents, and now you call it a good trade at fifteen cents the yard. Brown sheeting was eight cents, now it's three times that and three besides, or twenty-seven cents; bleached sheeting was nine, now it's thirty; ticking was eleven, now it's sixteen.

Just a few prices. One might fill a newspaper with the vest. Shoes are from twenty-five to fifty cents higher a pair, or if for trade reasons the price holds the same, the quality has deteriorated. You know that by this time, don't you, Mr. Voter?

Everything in woolens and worsteds will be increased from five to ten per cent. on November 1st, and compared with ten years ago this is an enormous advance.

Yet Senator Lodge says let the tariff alone. Let the barons and burglars who rob you behind its protecting walls wax fat on your suffering. It is a concrete thing, a stubborn fact.

Do you weary of it, Mr. Voter, of whatever class?

$300,000 FORGERY TO CLEAR UP CONSPIRACY

Former Treasurer Lombard of Framingham Promises Aid in Straightening Tangle.

WILL LEAVE ROOM SOON

Cummings, Boston Note Broker, Still in Cell, but Expects Bail To-morrow.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Oct. 23—Former Treasurer John H. Lombard, [illegible] town notes which it is believed will total more than $300,000, is improving in health and strength, according to Dr. Lewis Palmer, his family physician, and it is believed that he will be able to leave his home in a few days.

Lombard has told the town officials that as soon as he is able he will go to work in his power to straighten out the tangled affairs of the town, and it is believed that through his aid the financial situation may be materially improved.

The officials are the central part plenty in learning who benefited by the issue of the forged notes, as well. It is thought that Lombard will be able to put the investigators on the right track in this regard.

Banker Expects Bail.

Charles F. Cummings, the Boston note broker, who is in prison in default of $20,000 bail in connection with the forgeries, expects to find bondsmen by Monday. When he is released he has promised to make a statement giving his side of the story Lombard has charged that Cummings was the cause of his downfall, even to bringing that the broker to ruin.

The town debt has increased in the town was nearly $60,000 in [illegible] the public, so it was said, to have been paid to-day but they received no money. The reason the teachers were not paid was not because of the failure of the bonds through the forgeries, however. It was owing to the fact that the new treasurer, Arthur Fitts, has not yet [illegible] his bond, and until he does so he cannot sign the checks to pay the teachers and others.

The towners who have been word [illegible] the case are indignant that any one [illegible] should be in possession of inside information than some of the town officers have gone into the Mexican Mining Company and transactions in that stock in which Lombard and [illegible] had a hand.

The selectmen received word to-day from Lombards lawyer, Sunday in Fall Court that they did not consider that they were at all responsible for the loss the town suffered through the former treasurer.

ELECTRIC CURRENT CONSUMPTION CURE

New York Specialist Declares He Will Revolutionize Treatment in New Clinic

NEW YORK, Oct. 23—A cure for the cure of tuberculosis by electric currents of high potential and "high frequency" is to be opened within a few days at the Bread and Lung Hospital, 1st East 174th street, Dr. Frederick de Kraft, who will be in charge of the hospital, announced yesterday. The treatment for tuberculosis by the use of high potential electricity was discovered by Dr. de Kraft during his researches in Paris. Dr. de Kraft declared to a reporter for the American tonight that he had perfected a method of using the current for the treatment of consumption.

"I have no hesitation in saying," said Dr. de Kraft, "that consumption can be cured. I have discovered how to apply the electric current so as to kill the germs of tuberculosis, which is the cause of consumption, and with others I have proved that consumptives, even when in the advanced stages of the disease, can be cured by electricity.

"There are possibilities in the use of the electric current for the cure of consumption that may startle the world. Just what these possibilities are I do not care to announce at present, but will say that I have discovered a new ethic, which will revolutionize the present method of treating the disease. I have applied this method in the case of [illegible] and in every case [illegible] the disease. ARTIFICIAL TEETH NO LONGER NECESSARY

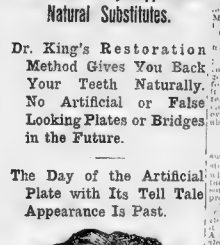
Modern Dentistry Supplies the Natural Substitutes.

Dr. King's Restoration Method Gives You Back Your Teeth Naturally. No Artificial or False Looking Plates or Bridges in the Future.

The Day of the Artificial Plate with Its Tell Tale Appearance Is Past.



THOMAS JEFFERSON KING, D. D. S.

Inventor of Dr. King's Restoration Method of treating teeth, [illegible] of the National Association of Dentists. All rights reserved.

Dr. King's Restoration Method of naturally and painlessly replacing your lost teeth is absolutely perfect; from a professional study of your remaining teeth Dr. King can restore the lost ones and have them perfect in color, size and shape without making you a false set or an artificial looking partial set of crowns or bridges. The naturalness of Dr. King's Restoration Method is what recommends it to the public and to the medical and dental profession. When you have your missing teeth restored by Dr. King's Restoration Method you may rest assured that your mouth will have a perfectly natural look, and not the glaringly unnatural appearance given by the usual set of teeth and bridge work. And with your teeth restored by Dr. King's Restoration Method you need never fear the dropping of a false plate or loosening of an artificial crown or bridge. Your restored teeth seem to grow out of your gums, just as do your natural teeth. The restored teeth are the most perfect artificial substitute teeth that dental science has produced. Every tooth is absolutely lifelike. They are produced by Dr. King's Method, which makes the teeth translucent; that is, the light rays upon them as it acts upon the natural teeth. The ordinary artificial teeth are opaque; that is why, when the light strikes them in the open mouth, they look unnatural and false.

Dr. King does the work at a consistently low price, and can show you endorsements from dozens of pleased patients.

Other Departments of Dentistry: Full set of teeth with the "Natural Gums" $5, solid crowns $5, bridge work $5, painless, gold filling $1 up, other fillings 50c, painless extracting free; plates neatly repaired. All work guaranteed.

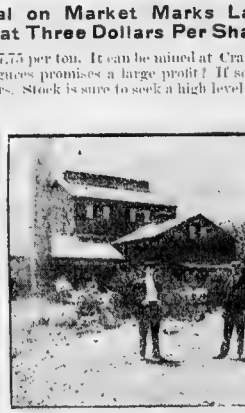
COAL CRUSHING TO BEGIN AT CRANSTON MINES

"Providence Coal" Stock Advances November Third

Advent of Cranston Coal on Market Marks Last Opportunity to Buy Stock at Three Dollars Per Share

Anthracite coal is retailing in Boston today at $7.75 per ton. It can be mined at Cranston for Fifty cents per ton. Do you believe the difference between these figures promises a large profit? If so do not fail to invest now at three dollars, instead of later at five to ten dollars. Stock is sure to seek a high level under the demonstration of the production now beginning.



Providence Coal Mining Co.

CONSISTING OF

Authorized Capital $3,000,000

600,000 shares of par value five dollars each

Hancock & Co. (Inc.) are authorized as exclusive fiscal agents to sell 200,000 shares. A small remaining part of the Three Dollar allotment is offered this week. After November Third it will be held for a higher figure. Stock offered is Treasury stock, full paid and non-assessable, and proceeds will be used for machinery and working capital. A payment of 20% will secure stock at present price before the advance.

CRANSTON COAL

Cranston Coal, the product of [illegible] mined in the company's valley, [illegible] free-burning anthracite coal. It contains a high percentage of carbon, and in burning shows greater number of British Thermal units than Pennsylvania Anthracite. It is a trifle heavier and burns a little longer. Combustion is complete, leaving a clean and slinkerless ash

LOCATION OF PROPERTY

The Company controls four hundred and three acres of mining rights in the town of Cranston, R. I., about four and a half miles from the City Hall of Providence, and is about Fifty Two miles from the city of Boston. It is on through the centre is Reservoir Avenue, one of the best paved thoroughfares of the city of Providence

SHIPPING FACILITIES

The N. Y. New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad [illegible] within about one-eighth of a mile of the property. Right of way has already been secured for the building of side tracks to the mines, and construction will begin as soon as materials arrive. Another steam and two electric lines pass very near

HISTORY OF PROPERTY

This mine is located on what is well known in Rhode Island as the Bodaing farm. It was under lease for many years and operated for the graphite which formed the roof of the present coal vein. By the death of the lessee it came into the market and was acquired by people knowing the value of the coal beneath

PRESENT DEVELOPMENT

Consists of two [illegible] and two shafts. One of these tunnels [illegible] in the coal above is now being stripped, and the coal will be quarried out of the open cut like rock. All that appears in the body [illegible] of the tunnel is solid coal. The vein [illegible] 40 feet wide, and has a dip of 40 degrees. At this point the coal vein [illegible] ahead eight feet of the surface. At the upper tunnel six thousand feet or a little more than a mile, the vein is thirty-eight feet wide and begins about forty feet below the surface.

The upper tunnel is near the building, which is shown above, which is the property of the company, and for which important plans will be later announced. This tunnel runs about one hundred feet in cost, and between these points the vein lies at about the same average depth from the surface. Below the lower tunnel are two shafts showing the same vein and conditions

MACHINERY AND EQUIPMENT

The new machinery now on the ground consists of derricks, [illegible] such as are generally used in quarries, and usual coal crusher and revolving screen with necessary power plant. During the present week drilling and crushing of coal should begin, and but a few days later the screen should also be in position to begin the process of screening and sizing. As the first output is already promised for delivery at the mines, it will not be necessary to wait the completion of railroad sidings before beginning to market coal. The present plant has a capacity of 200 tons for an eight hour day, for 500 tons for a day of three shifts

PLANS FOR DEVELOPMENT MINING ECONOMIES

The development plans of the company involve the installation of nine other units similar to the one now being erected, which will give the company a capacity of five thousand tons per day.

The shallowness of the vein, making possible the cheapest known method of mining, (quarrying), will make the mine cost of Cranston Coal the lowest of any hard coal mine in the country. As the vein is followed down the cost of mining will increase slightly, but with a vein 40 feet wide and more than a mile in length, it will be many years before deep mining conditions are faced. The cost of mining during this time should not exceed fifty cents per ton. There is now no necessity of expensive pumping machinery; for artificial lighting, for artificial ventilation, or for timbering.

NEARNESS TO MARKET

This company should supply almost all of the coal consumption of Providence, for which deliveries wagons can be loaded at the mine within a one dollar per ton freight rate cards, which includes Boston, there is a three million people, and a market for more than five thousand tons per day.

DIVIDENDS

These conditions, together with good management, should insure large dividends upon this company's stock. A net earning of two and a half to three dollars per ton upon the present unit of 500 tons per day, or upon the future capacity of 5,000 tons per day, should be approximated

SUBSCRIPTION, PAYMENTS, ETC.

A small amount of the three dollar allotment still remaining to be sold, and subscription may be made at or mailed to the office of the fiscal agents, for which a blank is printed below. The full amount of cash may be enclosed or 20 per cent. may be paid at the time of application, 20 per cent. on November 10th, 20 per cent. on December 10th, 20 per cent. on January 10th, 1910, and 20 per cent on February 10th, 1910. Only those subscriptions mailed and bearing postmarks of not later than midnight of November Third will be accepted, and we reserve the right to reject any applications mailed earlier in case our allotment at this price is oversold.

Send all remittances by bank draft, check, postoffice or express money order or registered, payable to Hancock & Co., Inc., 92 State St. Additional information will be furnished on request. See blank below.

See for Yourself

At No. 5 Doane St., Boston, fire has been kept constantly burning for many days, and can be seen at any time from 8 A. M to 6 P. M. Here, Bostonians may with loss of but a few minutes from the business day satisfy themselves that Cranston Coal is free burning and has no disqualifying characteristics.

Steam is up the boilers have been tested, and within a few days a [illegible] derricks of the first unit will begin to swing at Cranston in the only producing coal property of New England. Hundreds have visited Cranston, have burned the coal at the mines and in their homes and are equally enthusiastic. All agree that it will be a great dividend earner. Nothing could be fairer than this company's proposition. If you buy eighty-five or more shares, either for cash or by making a cash payment of 20 per cent, you will be taken to the mines free of expense and money refunded if not found to be just as represented (See coupon below.) Certainly such a proposition justifies your confidence in everything we say about it. It is well to bear in mind that worthless properties, frauds, fakes and get-rich-quick schemes are always located far away, where the expense in time and money to see them is prohibitive, and that they never make such proposals as this. Distance from the investors' home is their security. Upon the other hand "Providence Coal" stock is being offered right here in New England and not elsewhere. It is the desire of the management that the very people who are to buy the coal shall be part owners. A year from today all New Englanders who can get it will be buying Cranston Coal and paying money into the pockets of those who buy this stock now, and a share then will command several times the present price. Do not hesitate. It is not a matter for delay. By remitting 20 per cent. now you can save the amount of the coming advance. Invest now and then investigate at your expense. If you cannot spare a day to go yourself, send someone else in your stead. If you desire to buy less than eighty-five shares get some of your neighbors to join you, in order to get a chance to investigate without expense.

As is the policy of this company, subscriptions for any number of shares, from one share up, will be accepted. If this advertisement does not fully answer any question which arises in your mind, do not hesitate to come to our office to have them answered, or, if you cannot come, write us. You will be sure to get a satisfactory answer. We may be able to refer you to some one in your own town who has already visited the mines.

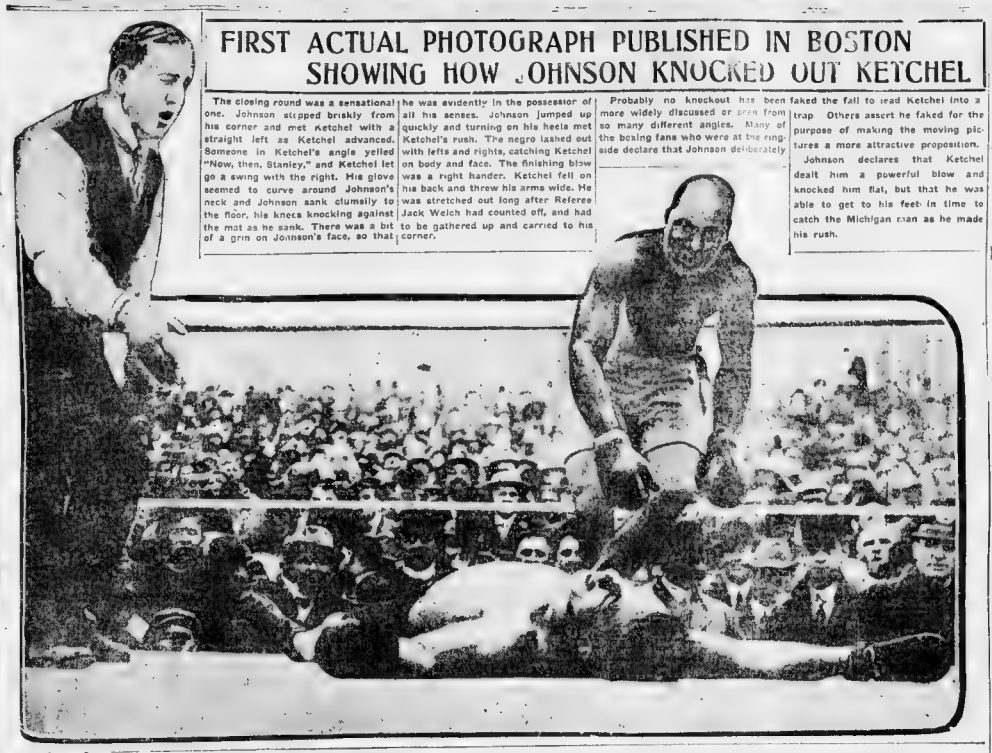
FIRST ACTUAL PHOTOGRAPH PUBLISHED IN BOSTON SHOWING HOW JOHNSON KNOCKED OUT KETCHEL

The closing round was a sensational one. Johnson stepped briskly from his corner and met Ketchel with a straight left as Ketchel advanced. Someone in Ketchel's angle yelled "Now, then, Stanley," and Ketchel let go a swing with the right. His glove seemed to curve around Johnson's neck and Johnson sank clumsily to the floor, his knees knocking against the mat as he sank. There was a bit of a grin on Johnson's face, so that he was evidently in the possession of all his senses. Johnson jumped up quickly and turning on his heels met Ketchel's rush. The negro lashed out with left and rights, catching Ketchel on body and face. The finishing blow was a right hander. Ketchel fell on his back and threw his arms wide. He was stretched out long after Referee Jack Welch had counted off, and had to be gathered up and carried to his corner.

Probably no knockout has been faked the fall to lead Ketchel into a more widely discussed or seen from so many different angles. Many of the boxing fans who were at the ringside declare that Johnson deliberately faked the fall to lead Ketchel into a trap. Others assert he faked for the purpose of making the moving pictures a more attractive proposition.

Johnson declares that Ketchel dealt him a powerful blow and knocked him flat, but that he was able to get to his feet in time to catch the Michigan man as he made his rush.



HARVARD HURLS BACK BROWN AT GOAL; WINS THRILLING GAME 11-0

Twenty Thousand Spectators in Stadium Cheer Themselves Hoarse as Gridiron Warriors Battle Desperately for Fraction of Inch of Ground—Crimson Scores Are Due to Brown's Misplays.

Providence Boys Get Pigskin Within Four Yards of Harvard's Goal, Only to Be Beaten Away After Fiercest of Struggles—Onside Kicks and Forward Passes Handled Like Magic, With Few Fumbles

By L. R. Murdoch.

ONE of the most thrilling defences ever seen on any football field was witnessed at the Stadium yesterday afternoon, when for three downs the Harvard bold Brown under the Crimson goal posts and the ball was moved less than two feet in all three downs. Harvard won, 11 to 0, but only after a wonderful battle that kept 20,000 people at a high pitch of excitement every moment until the last whistle blew.

In that struggle between the goal posts, the ball was moved a foot at the first clash and after the second rush it lay on that one end was a fraction of an inch from the coveted Crimson line. After the third and final collision it had not moved the slightest part of an inch either forward or backward. All of the 20,000 spectators were on their feet and such a tumult of cheering has scarcely been heard as was kept up during the three onslaughts of Brown, while all twenty-two players were massed into a human pile under the crossbar.

Brown Dangerously Near Goal.

Once before, in the first half, Brown had the ball within four yards of Harvard's line, only to be hurled back with desperate resistance. Both times a pass from Bill seemed easy, but Brown preferred to take a force at straight four ball.

Twice Brown hit like a stone wall in side of its own 5 yard line and forced Harvard back again, after being driven back from dangerous territory, and scored touchdowns, from one of which a goal was kicked.

It was one of those games that it seldom falls to the lot of man and woman to witness. Every inch of ground was fought over. There were few fumbles. Tremendous mass plays were stopped with as tremendous resistance. Onside kicks and forward passes were handled like magic by both Brown and Harvard and altogether it was a game to grow enthusiastic over.

Scores Due to Misplays.

Both of Harvard's scores and both of Brown's near scores are directly traceable to misplays. Harvard fumbled a long punt in the first half that was followed up by Bacon to within three yards of a touchdown; Harvard fumbled a pass in the second half that compelled the same player to punt at the goal that was the occasion of the game.

Brown had a long punt in the first half which got the ball out of Harvard's own territory but that led through rushes, to the first Harvard touchdown. Brown fumbled a long punt after the crisis of the second half which advantage, followed up doggedly by the Crimson, led to the second touchdown. It was the remarkable recovery and defence that made the game the most thrilling, from a spectator's point of view, this year.

The crowd grew enthusiastic at the very start and kept up its enthusiasm to the finish. Brown had sent up a thousand rooters, headed by a band from Providence, and they turned out en masse. And the unattached public nearly swamped the rallyups and the entrance gates.

Japanese Envoys There.

The Japanese envoys were there, to see their first football game, and the stolid Oriental business men finally lost their self-control and their reserve was swept away by the excitement of it all. It did not take Brown long to get something remarkable in American football was happening.

The visitors from Providence were flanked by several thousand generous ... of Wellesley girls, who rejoiced in the Brown colors. On the other ... the Cambridge colors looked like a ... day crowd. Both sides of the great ... were almost packed.

When the Harvard squad, led by Fish, ran onto the gridiron, a mighty shout went up from the Crimson side, but it was almost drowned by the yell that greeted the Brown men when they appeared a moment later. The men from Providence looked big and burly and a murmur of admiration went up from the Harvard stand, when they threw aside their sweaters and began a lively warming up practice.

Autos Choke Roads.

The roads leading to the Stadium were almost choked by automobiles, which were unloading gaily dressed young women and far-sighted men even after the teams had gone on to the field.

Before they had played five minutes Brown, getting the ball on its 28 yard line, rushed it for short stages through the Crimson line into Harvard's territory and the opposition made a stand for a long, wild roar. The answering cheer however, was effective, and for several moments, by means of short rushes, Harvard worked the ball was kept back on the Brown side. Then Harvard fumbled a 35 yard punt by McKay, the big Brown half back, and it looked as if the fortune of the game had turned to Brown.

McKay kicked the ball straight and high, but when it bumped first on one Harvard man and then on another and Regnier, the lightning Brown captain, fell on it, a groan went up from the Harvard side. The thousand youths from Brown danced up and down and threw their hats into the air in a frenzy of delight.

The visitors were disappointed by the pay and the shouts and started out with a rush to win the game then and there. Five times the Brown backs plunged through the Harvard line, then Higa, the full back, shot

ROUGH-HOUSE GAME AT HOLY CROSS

Bowdoin Wins, 5 to 0, but Five Players Canned for Slugging; One Arrest.

WORCESTER, Oct. 23.—Five players were put out of the Holy Cross-Bowdoin game by rulings of the referee after a battle a mob made a rush at Referee Moses of Dartmouth, who might have been roughly handled but for the protection of the police. Bowdoin won the game 5 to 0, but the contest was a disgrace to the great college sport.

From the start of the game till the whistle blew the foul blast there was fric- tion. Referee Moses had trouble right from the start, and Holy Cross players were put up on the fouls. The Holy Cross boys weakened their chances to win by having the best men ousted for roughing.

The game will ever remain fresh in the minds of the thousand or more who saw the contest. The players fought in the open and on numerous occasions, and at no time the officials tried to end the battles by imposing penalties, but they missed the target. Then came the ruling off of players for scraps. These players for Bowdoin were dismissed: Pratt and Hastings; for Holy Cross, Sibel, Flinn and Maloney.

Bowdoin Scored In First Half.

Bowdoin scored in the first half soon after Flinn dropped from the game. His sub was banged till there was a hole big as a driveway in the Holy Cross line. It was easy for Smith and Capen to slide through the opening, and the latter got a touchdown with two minutes to play. The goal was missed from an easy angle by Smith.

The half ended with the ball in middle in the home team's possession. Soon after Smith had carried the ball the length of the field between them in old-style play through Flinn's forsaken stand, using delayed passes and straight line bucks that worked. These two players were the life of the visitors' team.

It seems fairly that athletic relations between the two colleges will be drawn into a shell as a result of the game, if, indeed, they are not ruined. The visitors were not treated in the way the game is played here and followed Referee Moses and Umpire Carr.

Referee Needed Protection.

Patrolman John McDermott, after forming a bodyguard for Mr. Moses with Graduate Manager Thomas J. Fennessy of Holy Cross, nabbed James Hanlon, a young man of about twenty years, who says he lives at No. 8 South Worcester, and who according to Manager Faherty, Hanlon was working overtime to "start something" and have Referee Moses for centre of the cyclone. It is probable he will be summoned into court for the stunt, say the police.

In the second half Holy Cross played with Malloy back of tackle for Maloney, making fine passes and easy gains at opportune times for the Bowdoin to recover, aiding Manager Jones to outside tackle plays and alerting the end. Holy Cross brought the ball on successive plays to Bowdoin's 20-yard line, but Tobin and Hastings her- ing and Tobin and Hastings her- ing and Tobin and Hastings her- ing and

NEW YEAR'S SHOW A DAZZLING AFFAIR

The interior of the Grand Central Palace has been transformed into a stage for a series of electrical effects for the tenth International Automobile Show, which opens in New York on next Saturday evening. As work on the details progresses the show committee of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association is impressed with the magnitude of the decorative scheme being perfected by the Hudson-Fulton celebration committee.

While the decorations at the Palace last year were superb and pronounced by the public as second to none ever seen in this country, it is evident the committee has been [illegible] of the [illegible] and [illegible] fashion gained considerable headway [illegible] changes were to be found in the [illegible] of the cars, but a careful examination reveals a score of changes of one nature or another in nearly all of them.

Although the general public hears comparatively little of commercial motor vehicles, the branch of the automobile industry the development of motor trucks and pleasure wagons has been going on steadily and interest in truck and wagon construction is greater than ever before.

When one considers the business men and farmers who are concerned about the motor truck it would seem that the interest in them must [illegible] be even more extensive than in the pleasure cars. PARIS TURNS TO US NOW FOR ALL HER DAILY GAYETY

De Castellane Declares That the City's Whole Amusement Scheme Is American.

WE EVEN STEAL ITS ART

Frenchmen, He Says, Who Desire to Study the Masters Must Sail Over Seas.

BY MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.

Special Correspondent of the American
Special Cable to the Americans.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—Never in the history of amusements has Paris been so dominated by America as this season.

Go to our National Academy of Music and you will find Americans holding sway in grand opera. Mary Garden, of course. She reigns in "Hamlet" and "Thais." And Clarence Whitehall has captured Paris in "Wag o' the Reel."

Go down to the Opera Comique. An American, Miss Courtney, will charm you by her singing "Lakme."

Children and schoolmaids flock to the Nouveau Cirque to watch a horse dance your American cakewalk.

Up at the Hippodrome on the heights of Montmartre sixty thousand Parisians have been to sight in three days the American pastime of roller skating.

The chief attractions of the successful season at the Marigny were three Americans and La Belle Otero.

The star at the smart Theatre Michel is an American girl, Miss May Watson.

Your births Americans have captured even the resorts supposed to be essentially Parisian. The sensation of Maxim's is the pukking of Berry Wall and Miss Tyson of Baltimore, and Colonel John P. Grant and Diane de Poway doing the Double Boston.

It is an interesting Paris we live in now, but very American.

France Bereft of Its Art.

So, too, the Frenchman of to-day who wants to study Raphael, Titian, Leonardo de Vinci or Hobbema must make up his mind to cross the Atlantic. And so far as a Rembrandt, a Rubens or a Van Dyck is concerned France has mighty few left. Slowly but surely all the great masterpieces are going to your country.

Here in France we have no law, as they have in Spain and Italy, which prohibits the exportation of valuable, historic pictures. Now that the tariff has been removed from works of art France will be searched from end to end for its remaining treasures and robbed of them all.

I must say this, that in the train of valuable paintings that go over many a gardien "old master" and young one will find a place. Already hundreds of imitations, bad or good, with forged signatures have been unloaded upon unwary American customers.

Not far from the Moulin Rouge there is a factory well known for turning out "genuine" copies of the Barbizon school by the honored Here Lecots, Mallet-Doubigneux, Rousseaus are made almost while you wait. They are nearly all manufactured for the American trade.

Henri Rochefort, one of our best connoisseurs, told me of an American who asked his opinion of a particularly fetching Corot, and it he had bought. Rochefort, gave the visitor a line of introduction to the painter, who, like the great journalist, is an octogenerian. Harpignies sent this reply: "If we were both younger it would send you my seconds for having thought me capable of painting such a daub."

A Philadelphian Lectures.

The Marquise de Ganay, formerly Miss Rodgers of Philadelphia, recently elected president of the society known as "The Friends of Fontainbleau," has already distinguished herself in that capacity. The object of the society is to preserve the monuments of famed Fontainbleau and make known their history.

The Marquise de Ganay has shown her originality by establishing what are called "Promenade Lectures."

The participants first visit the palace and absorb local color—Impressions of the Empress Josephine and her divorce; of Napoleon signing his abdication, and of the Pope's imprisonment, and all that. Then, still under the direction of Madame de Ganay, they go to the Golf Club house for luncheon. A drive in the famous forest follows, with a visit to the old Church of Moret. Here and there conversational lectures are given. So that when the day ends the visitor has seen all there is to be seen and has heard all there is to be heard.

I had the honor of being a member of one such pleasant party. We fared marvellously well, for Miss Dorothy Stumpke of San Francisco presided on all at the studio of Rosa Bonheur at By.

When a nobleman sells his costly first edition he may be sure he is driven to it. Certainly a French gentleman dislikes parting with the treasures of his library like the Arab hates to sell his horse. Today I examined the most beautiful edition of Horace known to exist. The copy I speak of was once the property of the Vicomte Ublerois. From him it passed into the possession of a noble French family and the vicissitudes of fortune brought it today upon the market. It is one of the 500 editions published in London in 1737. The text and plates are engraved.

Nat Goodwin's Mines Win Paris Financiers

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—Nat Goodwin has been playing the role of J. Pierpont Morgan in Paris if the report of William S. Gage a mining expert who has been sent out by the Bank of France to examine the properties, be satisfactory and bears out what Goodwin claims it will be but a few months before at least two of the Goodwin mines are featured prominently on the Bourse. This will be doing more than Morgan could do.

Goodwin's enthusiastic talk of "those in the ground" out West seemed to win the French bankers at once and William S. Gage, whose experience in Alaska, South Africa and Montana fields has given him national reputation, and who has reported on properties before for the same bank was engaged to investigate and report. Gage sailed with Goodwin on the America. Friday. Speaking of his plans Good win said:

"I will only remain in America two months, when I will return and take a house in London, where I open in a Sea musical comedy in the Spring. I have heard so many croakers say 'Well Good win is going broke' when I have tried to progress by producing real plays that I got tired of it and resolved to go back just as far as I could to the very beginning. I have got all the money I need and am going to amuse myself and try to amuse the public by acting the role just as much as I want."

Mrs. Goodwin, formerly Edna Goodrich has surprised even the blase "seen-it-all" by the liveliness of her gowns and the wonderful and varied jewels she wears when she enters restaurants. There is always an ominous hush as if something awful were going to happen. Then Nat fumes.

Pretty Orphan Won by Turk's Soft Eyes

Miss Fellows of Cooperstown, N. Y., Finds Her Oriental Fate During Visit to Rome.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—Here is a story of an orphan girl and a terrible Turk. Miss Carey Fellows, nineteen years old and a beautiful orphan, left Cooperstown, N. Y., where her guardians reside, on a visit to her aunt, Miss Jean Forbes, who has an apartment in Rome. There she met Ibrahan Bey, Secretary of the Turkish Legation and son of Zir Pacha, formerly Turkish Minister to Berlin. He was quickly taken by the American beauty, promptly proposed and was accepted.

When her guardian over the sea learned that a Turk had won the heart of their fair young ward, they had a vision of a horrible Turk with a locked harem, veiled wives and gigantic blacks armed with scimitars. They wildly cabled her to return at once. Miss Fellows answered: "Will return in order to end this suspense, but not without my Turk. I will stop in America when I return. In that time I will marry him." Together they sailed for La Brogne last week, and now the war of the stern guardians and the lovestruck orphan is transferred to Cooperstown.

Miss Fellows says she was fascinated by the soft oriental eyes of the terrible Turk. Ibrahim Bey is not only terrible. He is indeed a new Turk, with all the modern improvements, and a great social favorite in Roman society.

Blind Oregon Pianist Finds Fame in Paris

Francis Richter Gives Recital In Which He Proves Himself Both Artist and Composer.

Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—Francis Richter, a citizen of Portland, Ore., discovered that he had a musical genius in Francis Richter, a blind boy of fourteen and he sent a local musician, Boyd raised a fund and sent him abroad to study under the best European masters.

As the blind lad was unable to travel alone, Mrs. Alma Rogers of that city consented to accompany him in his travels and was so departed by the citizens of Portland to look after their protege. She came abroad and has ever since devoted her life to the blind genius. For two years Richter has studied with Leschitsky in Vienna, where he made marvelous progress. He recently came to Paris, where he is now studying the higher branches of piano playing with Professor Henry Eames, the American virtuoso. Richter gave the other day a recital in Eames' studio, playing a varied program from Scarlatti, Bach, Chopin, as well as a number of his own works, for one already has been admitted work as a composer, though only twenty-one years of age. Richter has a beautiful touch, playing with wonderful precision and though blind has a great sense of color. Musicians are unanimous in predicting a brilliant future for the young man, who has his own the possibility of making his career to the generosity of music lovers of Portland. Richter gives a recital in Queen's Hall, London, November 9.

Unique Photographs.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Besides the pictorial photographs, there is a large and very interesting collection of scientific photographs, many of them unique, at the fifty-fourth annual exhibition of the Royal Photographic Society. The attitude and expression of terror in a mouse, with which a cat is "playing" previously to killing it, are shown in a wonderfully clever photograph by Miss Kathe Hecht, and a series of photographs depicts a desperate fight between a fly and a sand wasp.

LADY GRANARD IS SUBDUED

Drops Her Hauteur in Order to Win Friends In Fight for Viceregine of Ireland

BY CHARLES P. NORCROSS

Special Correspondent of Boston American
Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Duchess of Marlborough met with a severe rebuff in an endeavor to mix up with actors and actresses. She took a select party to "The Dollar Princess" at Daly's Theatre, where she learned George Edwardes had arranged to give the entire company, including the chorus, a private supper and ball at the Carlton Hotel. The Duchess determined to be present and sent a pathetic note to Edwardes' manager, asking to be invited, but Edwardes got angry and flatly refused. The Duchess refused to give up the idea and went to the Carlton, where she engaged a table for supper and endeavored to break in on the party. She was unsuccessful and was fearfully chagrined to learn that even a Duchess is obliged to respect the private parties of theatrical folks.

The edict has gone forth that dark gowns, particularly black, shall be the Winter's fashion, the smartest people appearing at theatres and suppers either in black or sapphire velvet gowns. Even at the New Market races the Kings set appeared in dark velvet, including Mrs. Cornwallis West, Lady Cheylesmore, Countess Grafand and Mrs. John Ward.

Politics is declared to be the reason for this funeral fashion, for the King, while anxious to encourage trade, is equally desirous that there shall be as little ostentation as possible this Winter. In view of the terrible increase of the number of unemployed the royal word has gone around privately that gowns must not be showy This does not prevent them from being expensive.

The Countess of Granard, taking a tip from some latinate friends, has dropped her aggressive manner of hauteur, which gained her many enemies. She is now agreeable and is fast becoming powerful, realizing that enemies might bar her way to the coveted position of Vicereine of Ireland.

Heroine of Miracle at Lourdes Shrine

Jeanne Toulasne Visits the Place Where Wonderful Cure Was Effected.

LOURDES, France, Oct. 23.—The heroine of the famous book, "A Miracle of To-day Scientifically Discussed," has arrived here and over five thousand pilgrims are staring at her and as many of them as can possibly do so interview her on her remarkable cure.

Her name is Jeanne Toulasne and her home is in Tours. Eleven years ago she arrived in Lourdes suffering from an acute case of tuberculosis of the spine. Her illness manifested itself when she was fifteen years old and after two of her brothers had died of consumption. She had for some time under the care of local physicians, then, when her case seemed hopeless, some one advised her to try Lourdes as a last resort. She arrived here on a stretcher, and seemed to be more dead than alive, as attested by hundreds of pilgrims as well as a number of physicians.

The Archbishop of Tours had taken much interest in the poor girl and he attended her at the various ceremonies. She left Lourdes a convalescent, and it seems from her appearance today that the disease, if not cured, is permanently arrested.

Above all she regained the use of her limbs and walks with a natural swing.

This is a banner year for Lourdes, not only on account of the number of pilgrims, but on account of the distinguished character of many. The presence of the bishops attests the popularity of the place. Lourdes has only 9,000 inhabitants and only two hotels capable of sanitary improvements. The majority of the pilgrims, therefore, are herded together and only high prestes obtain good accommodations.

Brings Gifts of Kings for Miss Susan Henning

Marquis de Charette Has Shipload of Heirlooms

Gem-Studded Sword with Golden Hilt, Piles of Flanders Lace and Heaps of Diamonds—All for the Bride Who Is to Be Wed at St. Patrick's, New York, November 10

SUSAN HENNING

BY VANCE THOMPSON.

Special Correspondent of the Boston American.

SPECIAL CABLE TO THE BOSTON AMERICAN.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—Never has a bridegroom crossed the ocean with such royal presents and historic heirlooms as the Marquis De Charette bears to his bride, Miss Susan D. Henning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Henning of Kentucky and New York.

The gifts from royal and princely personages come because General De Charette is the head of the French Royalists in Brittany, where his ancestor, the Vendee chief, was shot by Republicans in 1797.

Among the royal presents are gifts from the Queen of Portugal, the Due De Orleans, the Due De Chartres, the Countess De Paris, the Comte De Caserte and innumerable presents from the Old Nobility, such as the Due De Rohan, the Due De Lorge, the Duc De Cases. A third set of presents is from American and other society friends of the Baroness De Charette, the bridegroom's mother, who formerly was Miss Polk of Nashville, Tenn. Among them being the Baroness Alphonse De Rothschild Freddie Gebhardt, Madame Henri De Rey and Mrs. Hughes Hallet of Dinnard.

Perhaps the most interesting gift is a gorgeously jeweled sword which the Political Zouaves, General De Charette's former companions in arms, have sent. The long hilt of this formidable weapon is of heavy gold, studded with diamonds and rubies.

Among the heirlooms the Marquis takes to his bride are a dinner service which Charles X, brother of Louis XIV and Louis XVIII, gave General De Charette, also a set of amethysts given the General by the Duchess of Palmy, sister of Count De Chambord, a gold service given to the General's grandmother by the Duchess De Bordeaux, jewels and laces which come to the Charettes from the Duchess of Henri, a silver statue of Saint Louis given the Vendian chief by Marie Antoinette; a bejeweled bust of King Charles X, presented by that monarch.

The Baroness De Charette gives her future daughter-in-law historic diamond pendants, diamond flowers, diamond fans and old Flanders lace.

The richest of all the presents is a diadem of diamonds and laurel leaves given by Henrietta De Charette, the bride groom's aunt.

Young De Charette, whose title of Marquis comes from the elder branch of the family, sailed for New York on the America. The Baron and Baroness sail a week later to be present at the marriage which takes place at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, November 10.

Artistic vs. Social Ambitions.

Paris society is delighted at this international match which is purely one of love. Indeed it was love at first sight When the young Marquis met Susan at the home of her parents at Tuxedo Park, the Hennings bitterly opposed a match with a foreigner. The young lovers took matters in their own hands and accompanied by a chaperon, Miss Hamilton, they eloped to Paris, concealing their happiness in a cheap hotel in Rue de Turin. There they were found by the anxious parents of the Marquis. His mother rushed to town in a motor car and took her son and the runaway American girl to their chateau in Brittany.

The Henning's consent was won by cable. The Baroness De Charette heaved a great sigh of relief when she was able to publish the announcement of the forthcoming wedding in the American and Paris papers. The Baroness became very fond of Susan during her stay at the Chateau, Prenchibrel her name into Fontaine and now loaded her all the family jewels.

The Clews' separation marks the final contest between the artistic and social ambitions in one family. Henry Clews, Jr., who is striving for highest art, heralded the fact that his wife was always attempting to drag him into the social world. On the other hand Mrs. Clews, who has a brilliant wit, made his art work the subject of endless quips and sarcasm so that a visit to the Clews house was like going to an exhibition of fireworks.

Henry had a studio, Rue de LaPompe, where he spent all his time, only occasionally appearing at the dinner table smeared with sculptors' clay and painters' colors, to the horror of his wife and her guests. After dinner he would return to the studio where he remained until early dawn accompanied by his long haired, artistic and literary Bohemia of friends. Henry not only painted, he also wrote verses as fast as any of them in French and English.

Mrs. Clews brought these strange guests into his wife's drawing room among her New York society friends They mixed like oil and water Henry, who saw the humor of the situation emphasized his Bohemian ways as a joke on his wife. Sometimes, when she gave dinner parties he dressed up as a waiter and waited on his guests. On such occasions the guests tasted of the supposed absent husband and the wife said things for his good. Then latein the evening Henry would appear to his guests in painter's smock and explain that he was sorry he had been detained in the studio

Last June Mrs. Clews went to New York leaving his wife and two children For seven months she did not hear a word from him, then was notified that there was a registered letter at the postoffice. She rushed there, anxious to get the letter from "Dear Henry" and found her semi-annual check, with his visiting card and nothing else. Mrs. Clews, who is young, charming and witty says: "A French husband may be bad, but Heavens save me from a Frenchified-American husband."

Henry has lost all his American ways and becomes a typical French artist in dress and manner He is thought an admirable painter but in daintily refuses to show his work in Paris and was only persuaded with difficulty to exhibit recently in New York.

The Millionaire and the Model.

The romance of a millionaire and a model, after opening up the authorities of two republics has ended in dingy trial before the Paris criminal courts. The girl got eighteen months and the millionaire got twenty cents damages. Jacques Mallet is the young millionaire banker, who left New York precipitately to return to France with Eugenie Mathrot because she was not allowed to disembark from La Provence. A rapture speedily followed their rearrival in Paris.

Mallet met Eugenie at Maxim's in 1907. She was well known in the studios, also the restaurants of midnight Paris as Nelly Roxell To end the liaison his family sent him to New York. When she endeavored to rejoin him his family persuaded the French government to notify the American authorities she was an undesirable alien, hence she was prohibited from landing. The couple returned aboard the same boat and avoided interviewers by remaining two days at Havre. The Mallet family continued their efforts, ultimately convincing him that his love for Nelly Roxell was injurious to his best interests.

Then, according to the prosecution Nelly began pestering him and his family with typewritten letters alleging he had caused her a grave illness. On June 14 she wrote his mother stating she was in "profound moral and physical distress." Receiving no reply she continued her epistolary campaign with the first grews," referring to her resemblance to the models that artists loved to portray.

Although sentenced to eighteen months imprisonment Miss Roxell was given the benefit of the first offender's act and was released on probation. Mallet's lawyers claimed that the model had cost him $16,000, and so demanded damages, but the court decided that he should get twenty cents and he got it.

QUOTES BRYCE TO PROVE IT

English Ambassador, Wrote 17 Years Ago That "Lords Would Soon Disappear."

BY WILLIAM T. STEAD.

Special Correspondent to Boston American.
Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The proposal to settle the dispute between the Lords and Commons by a plebiscite of the whole electorate voting "Yes" or "No" on the budget finds little support in the Commons. By a theory of the constitution the Commons represents the people of England, and it shows no disposition to abdicate its right to speak in their behalf

Mr. Balfour is known to be an ardent partisan of the referendum, because he believe it will be another clog on the wheels of the car of progress. The Right Honorable J. A. Pease, the Liberal whip, has spoken in favor of this mode of settling disputes between the chambers, but no other Liberal of note favors it. It has been passionately attacked by Dr. Roberts of Nicol at the British Weekly, and until it was put forward with a great parade of authority by the Times none took it seriously.

For the referendum as a substitute for the Lords there is something to be said, but to give the Lords the right to demand the referendum on financial bills would be absolutely intolerable. If the referendum is conceded, the country immediately would be plunged in all the turmoil and expense of a general election, without any security that its decision would be final. If, for instance, the referendum went against the budget, the ministers would be compelled to resign, and their successors would immediately dissolve Parliament. We should then have what would be practically two general elections instead of one.

The Opinions of Ambassador Bryce.

The British ambassador at Washington, James Bryce, wrote in 1892 a paper on the referendum, from which the following extracts may be read with interest

"The referendum as a method of procedure to be applied under general rules at present is inapplicable to the conditions of English politics. It ought, however, conceivable that it may be applicable and useful in certain cases, did any exist, to which the people could entrust the function of applying it, or even to define distinctly established between the statutes affecting the fundamental features of our government and the rest of the law."

"The Lords' assent in any event soon disappear, and it would be possible to confer upon a representative Second Chamber important powers for preserving the people against the haste or party passions of their representatives, but no Second Chamber is worth having, and certainly to none could the referendum be allowed in which any trace of the hereditary principle remains or to which wealth would be a passport."

This was written seventeen years ago, and the Ambassador probably has forgotten all about it. The Lords have not yet disappeared, but the instinct which refuses to a hereditary assembly the right to demand plebiscite is sound

Strange Record of Lansdowne.

The approach of the decisive moment when the Peers must decide whether they will eat the leek or challenge a revolution leads men to scrutinize narrowly the record of the Marquis of Lansdowne, leader of the Unionist majority in the Upper Chamber. It is not reassuring; for Lansdowne, although a highly gifted man who has served his country in Canada and India, who has been War Secretary and Foreign Secretary, has shown from first to last an inveterate and incorrigible tendency to underestimate the forces opposing him He began by butting his head against the land legislation of Mr. Gladstone and under pressure from the Irish Land Act of 1881 resigned office, but the Irish Land Act was passed

When Governor General of Canada he underestimated the strength of Riels rebellion in the Northwest and a series of mortifying defeats was incurred before he sent up adequate forces to crush the rebellion

When Viceroy of India he tried year after year to coerce the Ameer of Afghanistan into receiving a British subsidy

When Foreign Minister he ignored the existence of Russia in the Pamirs and tabled the treaty with France about Morocco, and had in consequence to eat humble pie to avoid a general war

When the Russian fleet fired mistakenly upon some British fishermen in the North Sea he fired off peremptory demands to St. Petersburg which he almost immediately found it prudent to withdraw Peer's Political Blindness.

But the most appalling illustration of his blindness to the forces of his opponents was afforded by the administration of his office during the South African War. He was warned that he would have to fight not one republic but two republics; He refused to believe it. He was warned that the war would be long and costly; he calculated it would cost only $50,000,000, and he over it six times. It lasted three years and cost $0,250,000,000

With this record behind him it is not surprising that we feel no confidence in his capacity to see the strength of force against which the Lords would have to fight if they rejected the budget Fortunately it does not rest altogether with him. There is the King to be reckoned with, also Balfour.

Above all, there is the instinct of self-preservation on the part of the Peers themselves.

IRELAND BLOCKS THE WAY

Dissolution of Parliament Is Expected Now by the Middle of January.

Special Correspondence of the Boston Sunday American.

DUBLIN, Oct. 16.—Men who seem to know what they are talking about confidently predict that the month [illegible]

[illegible]

In view of the impending election it may be interesting to review of the American [illegible] strength stands to-day [illegible]

[illegible] lines of the parties are as follows: [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] suggested that a compromise [illegible] which would enable the [illegible] to accept the budget [illegible] country's business without the interruption of a general election. But such a compromise does not seem at all possible, as both the ministry and the opposition are too strongly committed to their respective policies to leave any loophole for even temporary withdrawal.

[illegible] fact is that the government is [illegible] as hard by the ugly temper of [illegible] satisfied masses of Great Britain as they are by any of the great issues of the hour, be it the Irish question, the veto power of the lords or even the slumbering but by no means dead, German war scare.

Something must be done by the government to appease the rapidly rising tide of popular discontent that is now surging through every corner of England. The newspapers are not printing the news about the distress in London and every [illegible] centre of population. For reasons of patriotism and out of regard also for the peace and order of the country, the press of England is keeping under cover the awful fact that starvation is prevailing among the poorer class to an extent not known since the repeal of the corn laws.

Hundreds of thousands of men, women and children have, day by day, to face the question of the place to sleep and the wherewithal to eat. And they have neither work nor wages.

This is the spectre that rises up before the statesmen of England. It is with them by night and by day, and what to do with it is beyond their ken.

This is why public opinion has grown so ripe in England for the settlement of the Irish question, which now blocks the wheels of Parliament. As [illegible] put it, with graphic power, "Ireland [illegible] the way."

Though he was nearly eighty years old when he made his great plea for justice to Ireland, the sage of Hawarden was not too old nor were his eyes too dim to see clearly what this unsettled Irish question would mean in the future to the whole British empire. He pleaded with Parliament and the country [illegible] his policy of undoing the past [illegible] long estranged peoples [illegible] one [illegible] the heart out of [illegible]

The advice of [illegible] of Peel and of Morley [illegible] result the Irish [illegible] social and political [illegible] are mixed [illegible] the wits of England's statesmen [illegible] the utmost to undo.

REAL POLITICAL NEWS of All the Parties by A MAN WHO KNOWS

By A. POLITICAL SHARPE.

NINE days more. November 2 is getting closer and closer and the State campaign of 1909 is nearing an end. It has been a remarkable campaign. There has been nothing just like it in the memory of the oldest hangers-on at the political headquarters. James H. Vahey, a young man, is running for Governor in the face of a good deal of scoffing from opponents who are his elders in years and political experience. But this scoffing at him [illegible] of the quiet sort. The people on the street haven't heard it.

[illegible] Foss on the other hand is [illegible] the chief public target for the Republican arrows. Just why the Republicans are paying more attention to Foss than Vahey is a matter of wonderment with [illegible] politicians [illegible]. Is it because Foss is better known, is it because he stands for more [illegible] Vahey does, or because he has more money?

Never Sign Your Name. Send A Man, Or 'Phone.

IT'S NO unkindness to say that the Republican spellbinders have had a good deal of fun with Mr. Foss in the last few days. That much advertised and much used Foss signature to the veto petition for the Eight Hour bill doesn't amount to [illegible] the North Pole. Foss signed something. Of course he did. But his knowledge of what he signed doesn't come from remembrance.

So far as his memory serves him, Mr. Foss doesn't know whether he signed a petition or a [illegible] letter or a personal letter or whether the paper signed concerned the Eight Hour veto or the pardoning of Warry Charles. All he knows from his own [illegible] is that certain big people put it up to him to sign a paper. But the [illegible] to be signed requested a veto by Governor Draper, or [illegible] that the signature secured [illegible] was told that the thing to be vetoed was a general eight hour law applying to [illegible] as well as to the State and that he was given to understand that [illegible] would get a kick in the tariff if he didn't sign [illegible]

[illegible] And now we have the motto: "Throw away your fountain pen, Mr. F[illegible] and the next time send a man or use the telephone."

A Boost for Draper—The Man.

THIS newspaper doesn't believe in everything that Governor Draper has done. [illegible] believes that the Republican platform [illegible] with Mr. Draper is traveling [illegible] the finest combination of hot air [illegible] and falsehood that Henry Cabot [illegible] Winthrop Murray Crane, [illegible] Bates or anybody else ever turned out. [illegible] to admit that [illegible] Draper is one of the most likeable [illegible] speaking as a Democrat [illegible] he is losing [illegible] campaign [illegible] see anything in the Vahey [illegible] his sleeve and slow [illegible] just what he [illegible] has a wide open [illegible] you seldom meet.

A few were more of training under Boss Lodge, Pussyfoot Crane and Augustus Put [illegible] Gardner who make Eben Draper the general of them all [illegible] the political characters [illegible] of them.

Christy Sore on Guild But There's a Reason.

THAT certainly was a beautiful bit of [illegible] works that friend Christy turned loose on Neighbor Guild a few days ago. It [illegible] be interesting to know that the [illegible] coolness or hotness towards Guild did not begin [illegible] Governor [illegible] pistol at the Payne-Aldrich [illegible] Mr. Christy's dislike for Mr. [illegible] back to the time when Guild [illegible] to the Supreme Court [illegible]

Guild was helped to make up his mind [illegible] by the then members of the Supreme bench. To make a long story short, a young man from Worcester is now Supreme Court Justice Rugg. The appointment of a young man over his friend [illegible] didn't make Mr. Christy's customary grin any broader.

The Republican campaign managers are scratching their heads now to figure out if the Christy attack [illegible] going to cost Draper and Frothingham some votes in Worcester. Guild has a lot of friends in Worcester, especially among the Harvard alumni and they are [illegible] Guild is going to blight the ambition of a [illegible] Christy to [illegible] the Republican boss of Worcester county.

Coolness Has Gone—Almost.

DIFFERENCES up at Democratic headquarters on Beacon street have been straightened out pretty well. Nevertheless, you don't see any card in the window notifying the ice man that his wares are needed. The coolness that got its [illegible] the memorable [illegible] two years ago is a long time dying.

Fred Ma[illegible] is not one of the [illegible] Neither is he one of the headquarters men who [illegible] though he were afraid that someone's getting more out of this than I am."

Turn on the steam, you Democrats, and forget Springfield. Take a trip over to the enemy's camp in the Kimball building and learn a lesson in harmony. It pays.

Watch Malden This Week. Riley Is Campaigning.

KEEP your eye on Malden this week. Representative Thomas F. Riley is to hold rallies every night in his campaign for re-election. Riley has served two terms in the House and is now after a third. He's the first Democrat that Malden has sent to Beacon Hill in many years. And it's not stretching facts one one-hundredth of [illegible] to say that he's the ablest and most honest legislator that Malden has sent there in a long while.

Malden is a wide-awake community. If you don't believe it go out and look at the way they [illegible] grade crossings. But she has had a habit lately of sending men to the Legislature who were either honest jokes or easily tempted [illegible]. Representative Riley has been a pleasant change. On Beacon Hill they say of him: "He comes from Malden, but you'd never know it."

Everett, Too, Is On The Map.

EVERETT, too, is furnishing her bit of campaign excitement. Some folks who forget that the A. P. A. movement was given a life sentence at the bottom of the sea a few years ago have pointed out the presence of an Irish name on both the Democratic and Republican tickets and are urging friends to split the ticket and vote for two of "our kind." Pretty small potatoes. A word to Messrs. [illegible] Republican, and O'Connor, Democrat: Don't do anything to stop work of this sort. It will help you, though it's aimed to hurt.

Plan One The Bosses' Plan. So The Plan Two Folks Say.

JOHN F. FITZGERALD, Martin M. Lomasney, Joseph Quincy, James M. Curley, James F. Timilty, Laurence Minot, Nathan Matthews, John A. Sullivan. They're all in favor of Plan Two. And some folks have the nerve to call Plan One the "politicians' plan." Of course you could name a batch just as long who are in favor of Plan One. But that wouldn't do any more than even matters.

It's going to be worth while to go to the recounts in Faneuil Hall next month and see the number of ballots which have "Bosh," "Trash," "Rot," and other sweet words written across the corner where the [illegible] are put to the voters for a choice. [illegible] the two plans, Mr. Voter. Make up your own mind.

Don't let any practical political boss or any highbrow political reformer tell you what to do. Pass up every one of them as a man with a personal motive or a man with the interests of some mayoralty candidate in his heart and you won't make more than one mistake in a hundred chances.

Concerning Pemberton Square.

WHY did you recommend promotion for Berry? "Because bwudixmifkyjru [illegible]" Will it never end? The Berry issue is a good one. Sure. But aren't [illegible] others in this campaign for District Attorney? Let's have a little light on what the candidates are going to do [illegible] better Suffolk county. Let's have some pledges that mean something. Hill points to his record as a reason for his election. Pelletier points to Hill's record as a reason for Hill's defeat.

Do You Like a Potpourri? See What the Staff Brought In.

BUSY day yesterday. This column was an eleventh hour job. But the society editor again came to the rescue with these paragraphs:

I met a stocky, smooth-shaven, quick talking little man at twelve dances last week. He told me confidently that John F. Fitzgerald is going to be the next Mayor of Boston. [illegible] somebody [illegible] Fitzgerald [illegible] I wonder what he meant. [illegible] more parties [illegible] Ward [illegible] until after November [illegible] young folks [illegible] girls alike, are taking it up for Roswell Hall's candidacy for Representative.

And the telegraph editor chipped in this:

"Despatches from Essex county say that the automobile tour of Representative William H. O'Brien of Ward 16, Boston, has made gains for the Vahey-Foss ticket up there. O'Brien has been distributing [illegible] through the [illegible] and [illegible] rallies [illegible]

The real estate editor [illegible] desk:

Moving people shows [illegible] early [illegible] the flats formerly used for campaign [illegible] Real estate dealers say that candidates for office will soon have to book their rallies a year in advance.

The police reporter insisted on sending this in by telephone:

"Members of the Boston Police Department are with Plan Two [illegible] that is, the six that I have interviewed. They say that the [illegible] possible [illegible] Plan Two is a bluff and that there will [illegible] election only once in four years for Mayor. That will mean [illegible] it will also work for them on Election Day."

Guess that'll be about all. The janitor is trying to pound out something on the next typewriter, with one finger.

MULREADY SHOWS AMAZING WAVE OF DRUNKENNESS

60 Per Cent. of Arrests in the State Are for That Cause, Says Probation Officer.

ONE of the leading workers in the cause of temperance in Massachusetts is Edwin Mulready of Rockland, State Probation Commissioner.

Mr. Mulready has labored with the utmost zeal and self-sacrifice in the spread of the gospel of temperance, believing conscientiously that in drunkenness lies the root of most of the social misery, which so pitifully abounds in our larger centres of population.

Before the conference of the Massachusetts State Board of Charities, held in Ford Hall the past week, Mr. Mulready delivered a notable address on "Drunkenness and Probation." His remarks created so deep an impression that the Sunday American publishes them to-day. They are worthy of the close reading and attention of all who are interested in the temperance cause in Boston and throughout the State.

IT was a wise arrangement by the committee in charge of this conference which gives at least one-third of the time to the study of the problem of drunkenness.

Take away drunkenness from the community and a large proportion of the charity work could be turned into other channels. Consider, if you will, the topics assigned to a charity conference and see how many are the evils for which a remedy is desired and you will find that a very large per cent. are directly or indirectly caused by drunkenness.

We are to-day considering the evil of intemperance from several different points of view. Let us not forget in our discussion that the drunkard, whose case we are called upon to diagnose, is primarily the one who is responsible for the trouble that is caused by his excesses.

Creature of Steady Growth.

My subject implies that I shall advocate lenient measures, and still I am anxious that my position may not be misunderstood at the beginning.

Drunkenness is not a disease or an evil which comes upon us suddenly or unexpectedly, but is a creature of steady growth, the result of constant and more or less vicious habit. The second attack is often the result of the first and third of the second, and so on to the end, but the responsibility of the first as well as the last rests on the individual affected.

While we may adopt many measures for the cure of the evil we must insist that the Commonwealth is the injured party and at best the victim has given way through weakness. Milton says:

"Weakness is the excuse.
And I believe it, weakness to resist
[illegible] weakness may excuse
What murderer, what [illegible] parricide,
[illegible] sacrilege [illegible] may plead it?
All wickedness is weakness: That plea, therefore,
With God or man will gain thee no remission,
[illegible] shame with [illegible]
Or by reasons thy crime uncovered here."

While the condemnation of the poet seems a trifle harsh, I believe that we should not in the contemplation of this subject lose sight of the responsibility of the individual himself when considering the duty of the community toward him.

Menace to Society.

The cost to the country of the great army of drunkards—the cost to the drunkard's family—the great waste occasioned by the presence of the drunkard—all these should be an impetus to quicken action, but more than these, the constant menace to society and to government by the drunkard.

Multiply a few times the drunkards of the community and you would have a majority of irresponsible citizens unable to govern themselves when essaying to govern others, perhaps deciding the future of the country. A few years ago it was said that upon the vote of the City of New York would be decided the [illegible] of the government of the United States for at least four years.

In Massachusetts, where we have statistics upon most subjects, we have none that will tell us the number of drunkards. We have to be sure, figures showing the arrests for drunkenness, but must we not admit that there are many cases of drunkenness where the guilty party avoids the meshes of the law?

Let us consider for a moment the figures of arrests for drunkenness in our own State in a single year: 70,791 men arrested in 1908, and the pity of it all, 6,574 women. In Boston alone, 37,780 men and 2,987 women. Sixty per cent. of all the arrests in Massachusetts were for drunkenness, sixty-five per cent. of all commitments to the jails and houses of correction were for drunkenness.

Listen: 20,779 persons were committed by the courts in the year 1908 for drunkenness. Assuming that the average term of commitment was three months (and some were sent to the Reformatory and some to the Women's Prison) the actual time taken out of the lives of the citizens of this State because of the presence of drunkenness was 62,337 months, or 5,195 years. Or, put it in other words, taking [illegible] most useful life where a man [illegible] sixty-five years to useful, honorable and worthy endeavor [illegible]

Community Must Pay.

Deprive the community of the lives of eighty such men and you will not have a period of time equal to the time spent in the houses of correction by the drunkards of the Commonwealth, and in this connection kindly remember that "Jones does not pay the freight." The expense falls upon the community.

We have in this Commonwealth a body composed of more than 100 men and women working under the direction of as many justices of the courts, and just at present under certain rules of [illegible] which have been adopted as necessary by a Commission on Probation, composed of five men selected for that work by the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Massachusetts. They work for all those who offend against the law, but like the [illegible] workers, their occupation would be very light if not burdened by the drunk problem.

To these persons is given the right of selection, the power of discrimination, the duty of classifying the offenders, and later to protect, direct and become a "Big Brother" to those committed to his [illegible] under the probation system.

When a man is arrested for drunkenness and is at the time of arrest drunk, he is [illegible] the station house or lockup, and [illegible] sufficiently sober the officer in charge is obliged to tell him of his right under the law to make a statement giving his name and address, family dependent upon him, and also whether he has been arrested during the preceding twelve months.

Sorting Out Cases.

If the statement is found to be true, after an investigation by the probation officer, such a man is released. Seventy-eight thousand six hundred and forty-two statements were transmitted to the probation officers during the past year: 67,[illegible] were found to be true, and 31,314 were released under the law. This is the first "sorting" of the scrap heap.

Those held for action by the court are carefully investigated by the probation officer. The condition of the family, the probability of securing employment for the individual under consideration and many other details are the subject of inquiry. It is possible that his investigation will show that the best interests of the man require that he be sent away; perhaps we have a dipsomaniac and he should be sent to the Foxboro State Hospital. In any event the suggestion made by the probation officer to the court, it is a pleasure to say, in most cases is adopted.

Later, if the probation officer finds that the person has changed in his attitude, that his circumstances are different; that his family stand in great need of his assistance—in other words, that there is a [illegible] of reformation, then the probation officer, with the consent of the justice, recommends his release, and in most cases [illegible] that is necessary. A large [illegible] of cases are thus released.

[illegible] persons will appear [illegible] a sentence, and so a [illegible] is imposed. Here again the probation officer is heard from, and he suggests that [illegible] be given time in which to pay the fine. He shows the man in the dock that no matter what others say, he has confidence in him.

Chances for Reform.

The report of the commission on probation will, I think, show that there has been paid to the different courts of the Commonwealth under this system nearly [illegible] in the past year. The work thus far described is good work, but after all it is not real probation work.

The probation officer has reached the [illegible] that certain men or women should be given an opportunity to reform without punishment. In the words of one who has given this subject attention, "He thinks it best to try methods of reforming [illegible] by punishment before [illegible] leaving it to the officer to decide whether he will earn exemption from punishment by future good conduct or earn [illegible] punishment by continuing [illegible] and a recommendation for probation follows, the judge consents and the man walks out of the dock to become a probationer under the laws of the Commonwealth.

Nearly 15,000 people were placed on probation in Massachusetts during the past year. Forty-five per cent. of the persons arrested for drunkenness in Boston are released without arraignment, 28 per cent. are sentenced and 8½ per cent. are placed upon probation.

When a man is placed upon probation the probation officer immediately set in and it is always an open question as to which shall prove the strongest. If the probation officer is a strong character he will prove a great help to his weaker brother and aid him on the shore of good citizenship.

Work of Probation Officer.

In many great manufacturing establishments the proprietors, without claiming any credit as philanthropists, have recently introduced the "superintendent of welfare," or the "welfare workers," the one man who is always on the watch to see what can be introduced for the benefit of the employes. Libraries, reading rooms, hospital service, lecture and concert auditoriums and many other attractive features have been introduced by this means. This is done, I am assured, simply as a business proposition to increase the efficiency of the workmen.

It is not too much to expect that the probation service shall become the great welfare force of this community, for it is already true that to this department the welfare of thousands has been entrusted by the courts and that while these thousands must be protected the welfare of the community must at the same time be safely guarded. Eight and one-half per cent. of those arrested in this community are placed on probation. Is this figure too low? For instance, what is the crying need of the drunkard? Is it not plenty of work, pleasant home environment, good company and social enjoyment?

If our welfare workers exert themselves, could not some of these things be provided, not as acts of charity or benevolence, but rather as a business proposition on the part of the community?

Our probation officers are restricted in their work to those who have been arrested. Is it not possible that some outside agency might be introduced to attend to their welfare before they reach the court as a sort of preventive work.

It must mean a great deal to this community to have 100 men and women devoted to high ideals, working among the poor, the downcast and the unfortunate. If this is not denied then how much additional benefit from the active co-operation of many hundreds?

We do not indulge the dream that the time will come when drunkenness will be banished. We do believe that the time will come in the near future when we shall have a more intelligent, rational treatment of the whole subject of inebriety.

We must not forget that some, at least, of those for whom we labor are not in the list described by Milton in the quotation that has been used. I prefer to think that many of them are not so very different than would be the best of us if placed under similar conditions. Those with the reproachful words of a woman addressed to the unmerciful:

"How can we tell when souls are near to God
Or who is vile who righteous ways hath trod?
We cannot tell the wrongs he may have borne
Or how his soul was crucified and torn,
Before he fell. Had we perchance been driven through the hell
Of his temptation, lashed and scourged. Ah, well!
We had perhaps been [illegible] this, he
So let us show our brothers charity."

PRELATE AND HONORS CONFERRED UPON HIM BY PORTUGUESE RULER

DECORATIONS CONFERRED ON BISHOP FEEHAN BY MANUEL II, KING OF PORTUGAL

FALL RIVER, Oct. 23.—The King of Portugal has conferred upon the Rt. Rev. Daniel F. Feehan, D. D., bishop of the Fall River diocese, the honor of commander of the Royal Military Order of Our Lady of the Conception of Villa Vicosa, raising the Fall River prelate to the dignity of the Grand Cross.

Two beautiful emblems accompany this distinction, and they have been presented to Bishop Feehan by Rev. F. S. Mesquita, pastor of the Church of Santo Christo of this city, and Rev. A. G. S. Neves, pastor of St. John's Church in New Bedford. These clergymen were especially appointed by the King to act as his ambassadors in conferring this honor.

Upon the crimson silk plush casket in which the emblems were encased is the following inscription in Portuguese, which, translated, reads:

"To His Lordship, Rt. Rev. Daniel F. Feehan, bishop of the diocese of Fall River in the United States of North America, King Manuel II. presents these decorations as proof of his great respect and lofty consideration for the Portuguese clergy of his diocese."

When Bishop Feehan was placed in charge of the Fall River diocese he took a great interest in the Portuguese, of whom there are large numbers in New Bedford and Fall River and other parts of the diocese. He set apart new parishes for them in this city and in New Bedford and in many ways contributed to their welfare. The bishop's work came to the notice of King Manuel II. through many channels, particularly from talks with priests of that nationality who visited Portugal.

The designs of the two emblems of the order are the same. Each is a nine-pointed gold star surrounded by nine smaller stars, and is surrounded with precious jewels, rubies and emeralds. Attached to the emblem which goes with the commandership of the Order of Our Lady of the Conception is a rosette of blue and white watered silk ribbon and a collar of the same material. Upon each emblem is inscribed the words, "Padroeira Do Reino."

5,000 RAILROAD MEN TO DEMAND HIGHER PAY

Freight Handlers, Trackmen and Others Declare They Cannot Live on Present Wages.

FIVE thousand freight handlers, clerks, trackmen, round house and fuel department employes of the Boston & Maine, the Boston & Albany and the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroads, the entire force working in and around the freight terminals of Greater Boston, are still pressing their demands for increased wages and the situation is becoming more critical every day.

These men all are members of the Knights of Labor assemblies. Six different [illegible] organizations are concerned. Their wages average $1.65 a day in the round house and [illegible] departments, $1.80 for trackmen, [illegible] $2 for freight handlers, with $2.25 for freight clerks. An increase of 25 cents a day is demanded. The men all work on a ten hour day basis, and in the greater number of cases haven't been given a raise in pay for twenty years.

As proof of the justice of their demand the officers of the unions declare that while their wages have been stationary, the cost of living has increased fully 50 per cent. during this twenty-year period. They also state that with the present cost of living, it is impossible to feed, clothe and educate their families properly, even when working every day, and that when illness and death come to the average worker's home the prospect of charity is his only hope of escaping a pauper's grave.

They point to the fact that common laborers working for private contractors in the building trades of Boston on an eight hour basis to-day receive $2.40 a day. Plasterers' tenders with an eight hour day get $3, and have an agreement with their employers whereby they are to receive $3.20 after January 1. Teamsters and teamsters' helpers are paid from $12.50 to $15 a week, and all other classes of labor outside of the railroad men in the so-called unskilled departments have been given substantial increases.

No actual threats of a general strike have been made yet. The officers of the unions however are a unit in declaring that while they purpose to exhaust every peaceful resource in an endeavor to secure the desired increase before going to extremes they will not back down.

Repeated meetings with the heads of the different departments have been held without results. The general managers of the railroads also have discussed the question with the men's committees. Now as a last resort the unions have decided to take the question up with the presidents of the roads. It is expected these meetings will take place within a month, at the latest.

With election day only nine days off and no definite political policy determined beyond a general statement of opposition to Governor Draper and others who opposed labor legislation during the last session of the Legislature, the results of to-day's meeting of the Boston Central Labor Union political activity committee is being awaited with unusual interest. Some of the individual unions already have gone on record as favoring the election of Vahey and Foss. The possibility of similar action being taken by the central political committee of organized labor in this city adds to the interest taken in to-day's meeting.

With their demand for an increase in wages from $3.50 to $4 a day set for November 1 and no settlement with their employers yet effected, the members of Marble Cutters' and Setters' Union No. 19 are waiting for their national president, Walter H. Price, to come to Boston before proceeding farther. President Price is expected to arrive in this city early this week, being summoned from New York to confer with the local union, at which time a definite statement of the union's position is looked for.

A. H. Gill and J. N. Clynes, labor members of the British Parliament and fraternal members to the American Federation of Labor convention from the British Trades Congress, are to be given an official welcome to the shores of the United States by the leading trade unionists of Boston upon the arrival of the Saxonia Tuesday. A committee headed by the officers of the Boston Central Labor Union is planning to meet the boat down the harbor, after which their distinguished colleagues from Great Britain will be escorted to the points of historic interest in Boston and its vicinity. It is not thought that there will be time in which to arrange for a public meeting, but the visitors from over the sea may address the trade unionists at some of the labor meetings while in Boston, although even that has not been decided on by the reception committee as yet.

Under "Label Agreements between the manufacturers and the union of that craft in the [illegible] industry [illegible] is provided for [illegible] in establishments [illegible] each year [illegible] furnishing of payment to active members of the Garment Workers' Union. The larger number of workers belonging to the union are women, and the employers also have a sort of union, too, called the Union Label Clothing Manufacturers' Association.

The first man of his calling to be accorded the honor and winning out in a hotly contested election, Michael A. Murphy of the Garage and Stablemen's Union is the recipient of widespread congratulations from friends the State over on his recent promotion to the presidency of Boston Central Labor Union, the highest honor within the power of the trade unionists of this city to confer on any union man. The vote cast in this election was the second largest ever recorded at a C. L. U. meeting. Mr. Murphy's vote was larger than that of his two opponents, both of whom have large followings and are well liked, which makes the honor the greater.

Wage scale returns from the committee appointed to confer with the job printing offices of Boston regarding an increase of wages form the principal portion of the business to be acted on at to-day's Faneuil Hall meeting of Typographical Union No. 13. It is said that the committee is having fairly good success in dealing with the individual job printing shop proprietors.

Massachusetts State Council of Carpenters has sent out a call for its State convention at Holyoke, beginning Monday, January 17, which is expected to be one of the most important and most largely attended of any like gathering of carpenters in this State for many years.

As a result of their active agitation for the inauguration of a general eight hour day in the near future, the union machinists of Greater Boston report a substantial increase in membership for their local unions, which are stated to be stronger to-day than at any time since the recent panic started. General Organizer J. J. Collins of Chicago, who has been assisting the Boston locals of that craft to carry on an organizing campaign, is to remain in New England for several weeks, the international organization having determined to spare no expense in an endeavor to unionize every machine shop in this district.

To determine whether they shall demand an increase in the present minimum wage of forty-two cents an hour a mass meeting of the 200 shop and bench hands employed in Greater Boston has been called for next Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the rooms of the Carpenters' District Council, No. 30 Hanover street. The call for the meeting is signed by Arthur M. Watson, secretary of the council, in circular form and after urging the men to attend the coming meeting it closes by stating: "Remember this is your business, and no one can attend to it so well as yourself."

Local No. 3 of the Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen has perfected all arrangements for its twelfth annual ball, to be held in Paine Memorial Hall on the evening of Monday, November 1.

Samuel Gompers and John Mitchell, president and vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, are expected to visit Boston and to speak here after the Toronto convention of that organization closes next month.

IRISH SINGERS ARE TO GIVE CONCERT

Cumann Canutan, the Irish Choral Society of Boston, is busy rehearsing several Irish choruses which will be a feature of the anniversary party to be held next Friday evening, in Catholic Union Hall.

The regular rehearsals are in Room 410, Huntington Chambers, on Monday evenings. The conductor is Charles I. Forrester.

This is the only society in Boston exclusively devoted to the interests of Irish music. Its objects are to perpetuate the folk songs and traditional music of Ireland; to popularize compositions of Irish composers; to promote an interest in Irish musical works by foreign composers; the musical education of the members and the development of vocal talent within the society; to encourage co-operation everywhere among choral societies and individuals who are working for the advancement of Irish music; and to provide a musical library for the use of the members.

Following the concert will be a "feis rince" or dance, for which all the musical numbers will be Irish. The proceeds will be devoted to the support of the hall.

The committee of arrangements: Jeremiah Carroll, chairman; Miss Mary T. Keohane, treasurer, and Miss Katherine H. Cassidy, secretary; Patrick H. Connell, William J. Cassidy, Humphrey J. Sullivan, Jeremiah Donahue, Miss Mollie Bevin, Miss Julia T. Keohane, Miss Mary A. Dempsey, Miss Katharine Shine, Miss Eleanor M. M. Sweeney, Miss Margaret Keohane, Miss Katherine M. [illegible], Miss Delia O'[illegible], Miss Mary T. Dowling, Miss Nellie Healy, John J. Bates, Jeremiah S. O'Connors, Charles Ver Kamser, Miss Mary Leahy, Miss Hannah Taylor, Miss May E. Toner, Miss Margaret Shine, Miss May Leahy, Miss Julia O'Leary, Edward Tasguey, Humphrey J. Anderson.

SUFFOLK BRANCH MEETS.

Proposed Change in Constitution to Be Taken Up To-day.

This afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the executive board of the Suffolk county branch of the American Federation of Catholic Societies will meet in the rectory of the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, at which proposed matters pertaining to changes in the constitution will be considered. Hereafter the conventions of the branch will be held on the third Sunday of March, June, September and December. Election of officers will take place in December instead of April.

Reweds Convict Husband.

HARRISBURG, Ill., Oct. 23.—Hardened after serving ten years of his twenty-five years' sentence for killing Cecil Williford, John W. Neill was remarried here by his former wife, who had obtained a divorce after his conviction and married Augustus Gaylord. Gaylord died two years ago, leaving her free.

Worms

"Cascarets are certainly fine. I gave a friend one when the doctor was treating him for cancer of the stomach. The next morning he passed four pieces of a tape worm. He then got a box and in three days he passed a tape-worm 45 feet long. It was Mr. Matt Freck of Millersburg, Dauphin Co., Pa. I am quite a worker for Cascarets. I use them myself and find them beneficial for most any disease caused by impure blood."

500,000 IRISH CALLED ON TO JOIN 'HOME-GOING' OF 1910

Plea Made at Fellowship Club Banquet for Repopulation of Emerald Isle.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—A call for a peaceful invasion of Ireland next summer by half a million sons and daughters of Erin, residents in the United States, was voiced at the weekly luncheon of the Irish Fellowship Club in Hotel La Salle. J. Francis Fahey of Marshfield, Mass., Mr. McSweeny's predecessor as president of the Irish Home Rule Association and he made a fervent plea for the reopulation of the Emerald Isle.

"The troubles Ireland today," he said, "is that her people have not sufficient means of employment. They need more factories and industrial institutions where they can be employed, and thus stem the tide of emigration. Ireland is spending $70,000,000 for imported flour and $15,000,000 for imported meat, and it is going to be for Ireland's interest to lay out $50,000,000 for the erection of the needed numbers of the School Committee.

He was also vice president of the Catholic Club of the university. He received the degree in medicine at Harvard Medical School in 1900, after which he was appointed surgical interne at the Boston City Hospital.

"In 1901 he was appointed a house officer at the Boston Lying-In Hospital, and in 1902 he was made a visiting physician to the Boston City Hospital. He has delivered addresses under the auspices of the Catholic Summer School of Science at Cambridge, and has been a lecturer in the Catholic Summer School at Plattsburg, N. Y.

Excelling Underselling.

TIMOTHY SMITH CO.

Quality Tells Price Sells.

ONE MINUTE FROM DUDLEY STREET ELEVATED STATION. 2249-2281 WASHINGTON STREET, 7-11 VERNON STREET, BOSTON, MASS.—ROXBURY.

The big store—now at its best—swings into a week of phenomenal underselling—with floor space almost equal to any of the down-town stores of its kind—with an organization keen to meet the demands of all classes of trade, and a stock of cash-bought merchandise second to none in style, quality, price-economy and assortments—THE TIMOTHY SMITH CO. demonstrates at all times (as you'll note by the wonderful values on this page) how readily such a store can and does undersell those of the high rent, down-town districts. Price comparisons by shrewd buyers are what crowd these aisles! There's no mystery about the some fifty successful years' growth of this company. It's just plain up-to-the-minute cash merchandising. In other words, you do not pay for some one else's bad debts when you buy at this cash-selling store. Neither do you contribute to the demands of the high-rental district landlord, and the many other "extra" expenses of the down-town merchant.

A Five-Cent Fare

On either elevated or surface cars will take you from any part of Greater Boston to the Timothy Smith Co. Store—just a minute's walk from Dudley St. Station.

Satisfaction

We insist that you be satisfied with your every transaction here. There's a manager to take up any and all claims. Money back for the asking at all times.

MANY SMART FUNCTIONS TO CROWD THE SOCIAL SEASON

Roller Skating Has Come to Be Quite the Ruling Fad in Boston

Glad Whirl of Fashion Begins and Plans for Winter Are Maturing.

Early Coming of Lent Lends Impetus to Festivities of Autumnal Weeks.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT

"I AM alive and that is beautiful," sums up the sentiments of the fashionable ones who, after raptures of rest in remote country homes, have been flocking back to town for the early season festivities, which include the launching of the brides and debutantes.

The season has opened auspiciously, and to the end promises to be one gay ripple of social enjoyment. Owing to the fact that Lent begins so much earlier than usual the weeks for social enjoyment are few, and so many smart functions will necessarily be crowded into the short pace of time that, while the younger ones are looking forward to the endless whirl with keen and happy anticipation, the older members who know so well what a pace like that will mean, are expressing their dread of what lies before them.

Then, too, the beautiful Autumn days, following each other in gay, sunlit succession, have served to revive completely the glories of the out-of-door sports which are at present being indulged in by the smart set as never before, and society in search of the life more abundant is finding it in the woods and the hills. Golf, tennis and polo enthusiasts are lending life and charm to the landscape, and appropriating all out of doors for their playground.

Ingeniously fitted motor-cars, too, add action, for is not build the world of society on wheels? With no deeper reason than "it sounds nice and is distant" a jolly party spins off for a week or two of enchantment, with the world all theirs. Wardrobes are provided for the pretty gowns in order that the travelers may present themselves at any of the smart mountain hotels and join in the dance, the dinner or whatever form of amusement may be in progress. The casual hotel is depended upon for neither food nor lodging, however, as the hostess virtually carries her own hostelry with her. There are attachments for cooking and ample room for storage of food in her motor palace, so, all in all, she may be several days at a time in the wilderness nor ever miss the comforts of home.

But at the fashion-haunted resorts where the other half of society still lingers, while the younger element, radiant after a summer of unprecedented gayety, goes in for the free and open life of the great out-of-doors, the more mature like to amuse themselves lunching and dining out, playing bridge, driving and, above all, watching the passing show of youth and health and beauty, always on the alert, and quite able and willing to keep the ball rolling both on land and water

In the Berkshires just now life is being lived at its best, and the hosts and hostesses of that most delightful region are entertaining in true English fashion. Hunt runs, hunt breakfasts, horse shows and golf are the chief forms of amusement during the daytime, as is roller skating, which is becoming such a fad there now that should your answer to the question: "Do you roller skate?" be "No," you would at once be measured as not of the smart-set world, for the greater portion of the fashionables are just now whirling and whirling their time away in this fashion. Newport for the past two weeks has been devoted to this special form of amusement, and now Lenox has fallen into line, the cottagers having just organized a series of roller skating parties, the first of which was held last week in the Town Hall. It was an unprecedented success, and all the young people for miles around appeared on rollers, while the remaining portion of the population was in evidence as spectators.

There are to be four afternoon sessions of the class, meeting Tuesdays, and four Saturday evening parties. One of the evening meetings will take the form of a fancy dress ball, and plans are underway to make of it the jolliest affair of the season. There are over forty members in the class and among the organizers are Miss Rosamond Dixey, daughter of the Richard C. Dixeys of Beacon street and Lenox, Mrs. David Leydig, Mrs. Frank H. Shurgis, Miss Helen Alexandre, Miss Constance Folsom and Miss Isabel Shotter. The fad, too, is spreading in town, and the homes with ball rooms have been given over to the younger members of the families and their friends for the sport.

But with all the motor touring, the out-of-door life, the roller skating parties, the balls, the weddings and the debutante affairs, the matron and maid of fashion must find time for getting an extensive wardrobe in readiness for the season ahead—for with the advent of grand opera into the already well-filled calendar it will take gowns innumerable to carry her triumphantly through the season. Never before has the Boston woman been so busy with matters sartorial, and never before has she more willingly taken up the trying task of selecting and trying on gowns than this year—for now she has a fitting place to wear her creations, for the new opera house will afford the best possible showplace where gayly attired femininity may second be seen, admire and be admired.

BUDGET OF THE SOCIAL WEEK

Though October has been a notable month for weddings, November, which is constantly growing in popularity as a bridal month, promises to surpass it. Ushering in the month are at least half a dozen fashionable brides, and the past is to be pretty well kept up throughout the month. Among nuptial events of importance the past week was the wedding (details in Germantown Pa., of Miss Judith Steel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Steel of that city, to Robert Beauchamp Ashby of New Bedford. Many elaborations went down for the occasion, among them being Mrs. James S. Russell of Milton, a sister of the bride; her niece, Miss Augustus Elizabeth, James H. Perkins and Lester E. Pierce of Boston. The ceremony took place at 12:30 o'clock, the bride entering with the Rev. James de Wolf Perry, D. D., rector emeritus of the Church of the Ascension, at St. Paul's Church in New Bedford, officiating. A breakfast followed at the residence of the bride's parents, which was presided over by her mistress of honor, her sister, Mrs. Ernest Bradley of Philadelphia, and Mrs. James S. Russell of Milton. Miss Hattie Sleeper Tyson of New Bedford was Lord Russell and Miss Mary Sellers Fehlner and Miss Ruth Holden of Boston. Mr. Swift's brother, Thornley Swift of New Bedford was best man, and his group of ushers included James H. Perkins and Chester A. Pierce, both of Milton; Charles Wyndham Bradley, of Boston, Ralph Pomeroy Keith of Buffalo, N. Y.; John Flint, Jr., of John Parker Perry, New York City; Charles Newell Bradley and Wilfred Ashby, both of Philadelphia.

The wedding Wednesday at Longwood of Winsome Nancy Thompson Eustis and Dean Fraser Campbell was also a notably fashionable one. The ceremony, which took place in the Church of Our Saviour at noon, was performed by the Rev. Reginald Heber Howe.

Miss Eustis, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Emery Eustis of Brookline, was attired in a handsome robe of white satin and was given in marriage by her father. The bridal attendants were the Misses Helen Morse, district and Constance Cunningham, Wash also a cousin of the bride Stevens and Elsie Rapallo, all of Boston, with the exception of Miss Rapallo, whose home is in New York. The bridegroom, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Evan J. Fraser-Campbell of Scotland, and some resident of Boston, had his brother, Arnold Fraser-Campbell, as best man, and for his ushers, Francis Brewer, William Fraser-Campbell, John Tyler, Richard Hunting, Benjamin Morse and George Stephenson. There was a reception and breakfast at the Eustis residence after the ceremony. They will make their home in El Oro, Mexico.

Nearly All October Fiancees Go to Altar

THERE are few remaining weddings of importance this month, the marriage of Miss Marie Pountney and Harold Lorne Dalton of New York will take place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Appleton, on Harvard street, Brookline. The ceremony will take place in the evening and it will be followed by a reception. The first evening wedding of Miss Edith Hamilton and Arthur J. Mitton will take place at the home of the bride's mother in Brookline. Mrs. G. Norman Gardiner, also of New York, sister of the bridegroom, will be among the most interesting matrons present. Mrs. Gardiner, who was married shortly after her debut, was formerly Alice Mitton.

The fourth of November is surely a favored day with brides for weddings almost innumerable have been set for that date, and as most of the brides are exceedingly well placed socially, are members of the leading families, the affairs will be a very small and very quiet affair, the invitations being limited to the members of the families and a few close friends.

The last wedding of social interest for October will be the one, when Miss Dorothy Dexter, only daughter of Miss Jane Ward Dexter, weds David W. Osborne, Harvard '05. Miss Dexter, who is a daughter of Mrs. Vincent Clyde, is a daughter of Mrs. Charles W. Dexter of Beacon street. The marriage will take place in Dover at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Edward W. Gray. The young couple will reside in New York.

An exceedingly quiet wedding will be that on November 1 of Miss Edith Waterhouse Ralph A. Richmond, which is to take place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. William B. Waterman, in Providence, R. I. Mr. Richmond is a graduate from Harvard in 1907, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Richmond of Beacon street.

Comings and Goings of Society's Favored Ones

MRS. J. Montgomery Sears and Miss Helen Sears are expected at their town house on Arlington street the first of the month. A few weeks later they are sailing for Europe. About the middle of November Mrs. Sears will return to Cupied the Sears place last Winter, will spend the Winter in it again this season. Mrs. Sears and Miss Sears have been in the West traveling considerably this summer, and have been at their country home in Southboro but a short time.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Merrick Gay, who had a delightful house party at their River Farm over week-end, are to make their home in Newton, it is said, during the coming winter. Mrs. Gay is a daughter of Mr. Gay's mother. Mr. Gay is a connection of the Boston family by the same name and is well known here. Mr. and Mrs. Gay, Exeter and this city are particular friends of the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Bigelow have recently been entertaining El Rogal Tyler of this city, who has returned from a month's cruise among a number of years residence abroad. They gave a dinner at the Myopia Hunt Club Cove Summer house early in the week in honor of Mr. Tyler. The Bigelows are not to return to their town house before the first of next month.

Mrs. Irvah Lester Winter of Cambridge is planning to be entertaining in the latter part of the month to visit her sister, the Mrs. Philip Gardner and Mrs. Albert L. Nickerson, who all have married into Boston families. Mrs. Rice was one of the Atkinson daughters at Baltimore.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Rice and their son have returned from a Summer at York Harbor and are now at their home on Beacon street. Mrs. Rice is a sister of Mrs. Philip Gardner and Mrs. Albert L. Nickerson, who all have married into Boston families. Mrs. Rice was one of the Atkinson daughters at Baltimore.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Perry have taken a house on Marlboro street for the Winter. They have recently returned from Paris where they have been spending the past two months. Their weekly salons will be resumed in the fall and one of the most interesting features of the Winter season among Americans residing there and they are also as well attended.

The Misses Bartlett have recently left Manchester-in-the-Sea, where they have been spending the Summer and will be installed in their home in Boston. Their brother, Nelson S. Bartlett, is to spend the Winter at Manchester and will move to his own cottage on Smith's Point, to the left of his sister's while improvements are being made on his own.

Many Debutantes to Gladden the Season.

DEBUTANTES are still worried and flurried over their prospective festivities, and as occupied are they with the preparations for the various affairs to be given for them, and especially with the gowns to be worn at these smart functions, that they have little time to attend to anything save their adjusting and modifying. So busy is each bud with the preparing and planning of gowns and hats that little is seen or heard in the general affairs where her smart world congregates, and no place is she met on these days save on shopping row. Miss Constance Gerrain is the only member of the bud set who on for hears the dissolution of having fully announced forth Her debut was made a week ago at a reception given for her by her mother at their beautiful estate in Milton, and since then she has been looked upon by those "out yet out" as the dictator of all things pertaining to smartest dodges.

Another debutante of greatest interest centres is naturally the Governor's daughter Dorothy Draper, who has just returned from abroad with her trunks filled to overflowing with the daintiest and smartest of gowns and headgear. Her formal coming out will be the ball which her parents are giving for her at the Somerset in December, but naturally a girl so widely known and so popular will have no end of smaller affairs given in her honor before that time. She of all the bud set will be the most sought after, and if the whirlwind of festivities destined to swoop about her don't finally take her off her feet, it will be the wonder of wonders. Cornelia Wolcott was the last daughter of a Governor to be presented, and if Miss Draper's first season is anywhere near as gay as that of Miss Wolcott's she will be dancing and socially busy all the winter.

Another debutante of much interest is Margaret Draper, daughter of General and Mrs. William F. Draper of Milton. She is to give the first of the balls and her season in Washington will no doubt be quite as gay as her cousin's here. Miss Dorothy Draper will be the first of the larger affairs given at the capital for her cousin, and her cousin in turn will be present at a number of her affairs.

The Draper residence in Washington is one of the most palatial there and Mrs. Draper's hospitality has long been looked upon as the most important in the Winter's social affairs. Mrs. Draper is to give a series of entertainments building several revealing balls and musicales, for it is this her only daughter, who aside from her wealth and social position has the added charms of a pretty face and piquant personality, in fact the charm of her whole appearance.

When the Drapers were in Rome, during the time when General Draper served as Ambassador to Italy, Miss Dorothy Draper was a most prominent figure in the social life there.

Miss Hilda Foster daughter of the Charles H. W. Fosters of the Back Bay Village, will not be presented this Winter, as at first planned, but will wait until next year, when her sister, Miss Edith Foster, will also be presented. While in Europe with her sister Miss Foster is spending her time, however, as she has planned to study in Paris at one of the most of the fashionable girls' schools in Continental capitals. Miss Foster and her daughter have only recently arrived from Europe, where they spent the Summer.

Smart Affairs to Mark November

ONE of the larger debutante affairs to be given by this year's girls are looking forward with keenest anticipation is the ball which Mrs. Edward Brandegee is to give in honor of her daughter, Miss Constance Zerrahn at her beautiful Brookline home, Faulkner Farm, sometime in January.

One of the November affairs is that on the 11th, which Mrs. William H. Richardson is giving to introduce her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Richardson Mrs. Richardson's hospitality will take the form of a reception and tea, to which she will give at her home in Cambridge.

An interesting New York bud will be Miss Beatrice Fincz, daughter of Mrs. John Turner Atterbury, who has just concluded her stay at the Touraine and returned to her New York home.

November 29 Mr. and Mrs. James B. Ayer are to give a small dance at their home on Beacon street to introduce their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Ayer.

Mrs. Charles Lowell of Whitinsville, who introduced her older daughter just two Winters ago is to bring her other daughter out this season and in order that one may be on hand for all the debutante affairs, is closing her beautiful English-like country place at Whitinsville and has taken the Charles E. Mason house on Commonwealth avenue. Mrs. Lowell will present her daughter at a large tea on Saturday afternoon, December 4 and will later give several dinners in her honor. Miss Lowell has been studying in Paris the last year, where she went to live abroad with Miss Sachs, a cousin of Mrs. Lowell's, and has taken the finishing touches to her education there.

Mrs. Charles P. Perkins of Commonwealth avenue, Brookline, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Mary Perkins, who has been spending the Summer traveling through Europe with a jolly party of friends and who will have been for some weeks at their country place in Barker Cove, Me., expected to return to their Brookline home after the wedding week, which they will spend with their daughter, Mrs. Beacon street for the latter Mrs. Perkins' two married daughters are Mrs. William Cooper and Mrs. Edward Cunningham.

Charles Head who is at his beautiful estate in Canton, is planning to remain there until January when he will open his house in Boston. He and his sister Mrs. William A. Russell and Mrs. Philip Stocking will spend part of the time with Mr. Head up in his return. Our lady Endeavor Mr. and Mrs. Head of Brooks of New York occupied the Head place while they were in Boston and Mrs. Russell spent the Summer at House in the Woods" at Beverly Farms.

FROM SHAKESPEARE TO MUSICAL COMEDY. THIS WEEK'S GAMUT OF SHOWS

"Hamlet" Is First Production of Its Kind Essayed by Castle Square Company—Harry Lauder at American Music Hall a Feature.

By Morton Birge.

EXTREMES meet on the local stage this week—"Hamlet" and Harry Lauder.

The presentation of "Hamlet" by Mr. Craig's players at the Castle Square Theatre will be one of the most ambitious efforts so far of that stock company. It is the first Shakespearian production since Mr. Craig assumed direction of that theatre. At the beginning of this season Mr. Craig promised his patrons he would provide varied entertainment for them. He certainly is doing this in springing between Saturday and Monday from the melodramatic frolics of "The Circus Girl" to the tragedy of the debatable Dane. It is a severe test of dramatic agility. Mary Young is to turn from Lucile to Ophelia, and other members of the company have equally drastic shifts. Mr. Craig and his associates have spent much time and thought on "Hamlet." The production is awaited with interest.

And now comes Harry Lauder for a fortnight at the American Music Hall. Donald and Malcolm and Colin and Angus and their guid wives and their lassies will be there in force to extend him a braw and bonnie welcome. (That will be about all for Scotch dialect.) The rest of us, not so fortunate as to be Mr. Lauder's compatriots at this kilted occasion, will nevertheless enjoy his songs and stories, and will let him play upon our sympathies as he did last year.

Lauder and Those Good Old Songs.

In New York Mr. Lauder has been singing songs old and new. One of the latter is a pathetic little ballad, "I've Loved Her Ever Since She was a Baby." The air is said to linger long in the memory. But the new songs have not supplanted the old ones, like "I Love a Lassie" and "Stop Your Ticklin', Jock," which Mr. Lauder will surely sing for us again.

The Scotch singer comes much advertised, as usual. No vaudeville artist in all New York the past month has been so written up. No dramatic critique has been so meagre as not to have its Lauder interview or anecdote. The very quality of thriftiness or penuriousness—or what you will, which has been attributed to Mr. Lauder, has been exploited to the publicity limit. Here's a "thrifty" anecdote.

Mr. Lauder is in a Pullman smoker. A brother Scot asks for a match. Lauder hands him one match. The other searches his pockets, ostentatiously for his tobacco pouch, then says: "Why, man, I've lost my tobacco."

Then you'll no be wanting the match," replies Lauder cannily. And back goes the match into the Lauder match-safe.

And so it is said Mr. Lauder stays himself.

I am asked a great deal about the Scotch trait of thriftiness, and the supposed fact that Scotchmen are the closest people on earth with their money. I must admit that the Scotch are a sharp, shrewd and economic people, but to find a discreditable characteristic? Far from it, I am thinking.

And Lauder was Tempted, Too.

"The Thrift of the Scot can be traced back to historical circumstances. For centuries the Highlanders had to maintain themselves as best they could among barren rocks. A penny to them was larges than a pound to most Englishmen. Naturally the Scotch became thrifty. They have been a thrifty people ever since. Here, however, I am told that Scotsmen become liberal spenders and careless money tossers. It is the climate, the environment. Sometimes I, myself, am almost tempted to buy a drink. So far, however, I have held fast, but I may lose my grip at any moment.

And don't forget, too, that Harry Lauder donates 5 per cent. of his prin[illegible] salary to private and unostentatious charities.

On the heels of the new policy at the Globe Theatre of grading up to regular $1.50 attractions and taking Shubert bookings comes the return of the Grand Opera House to-morrow to its former policy of playing both musical and dramatic attractions. For the past five years the Grand Opera House has been a seething temple of "mellerdrammer." The shrieks of the heroine and the curses of the villain have torn the popular breast.

To Combine on Good Shows.

The Globe and the Grand Opera House have natural directorate interests. Messrs. Stair, Wilbur and Magee are proprietors of the Grand Opera House. The two former are managing directors of the Globe, together with George H. Nicolai. The Grand Opera House will now play many attractions which have hitherto played at the Globe, such as Ward & Vokes, Cole & Johnson, the Rays and other musical shows. The Globe price for these was a dollar for best seats. The Grand Opera House will play them at its regular prices of seventy-five cents the best. But at that the bookings will not lose financially, because the Grand Opera House, seating 2,600 people, can play at seventy-five cents and get a satisfactory balance sheet for both house and show, attendance being as it should.

Out of the melodramatic bookings which have been taken at the Grand Opera House hitherto, only the best will be selected now to fill the time not occupied by the musical and kindred shows. So Grand Opera House patrons will still have their melodramatic favorites and the musical and other better class attractions to boot.

The initial attraction under the new policy at the Grand Opera House will be "Arizona," Augustus Thomas's famous Western drama, which comes there to-morrow.

It's Final Week for Annette.

There is a double reason for going to Keith's this week. Not only will Von Biene, the celebrated 'cellist, be heard in his new sketch, in which he introduces 'cello solos, but this is the final week in Boston for Annette Kellermann. It is reported that the fair Annette has a new vaudeville turn in preparation, so this may be the last chance for Bostonians to see her as a diver.

This is also the final week for four attractions which have been keeping theatre-goers busy at a corresponding number of first-class houses. They are Anna Held, in "Miss Innocence" at the Colonial; "The Candy Shop" at the Tremont, William Collier in "The Patriot" at the Hollis Street and James T. Powers in "Havana" at the Majestic. "A Gentleman from Mississippi" begins its sixth big week at the Park.

"The Blue Mouse," having easily evaded any censorship trap in Puritan Boston, will continue to make audiences joyful at the Globe. "Three Twins," with Clifton Crawford's comedy, Bessie McCoy's "Yama Yama" song, and other high lights of fun, continues at the Boston Theatre.

"Wine, Women and Song" comes to the Howard Athenaeum in its original burlesque form. The two other burlesque attractions for the week are the Fay Foster Troupe at the Columbia and the Queens of the Jardin de Paris at the Gaiety.

"The Cotton King" comes to the Bowdoin Square. Austin & Stone's Museum offers curios and vaudeville novelties. There will be a new "continuous" bill at the New Palace.

We had a little censorship flurry in Boston over "Miss Innocence" and "The Blue Mouse." But look at Des Moines, Ia. Four current attractions there recently were "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," "Three Weeks," "The Girl from Rector's" and "The Follies of 1909." Des Moines folk speak of that time regretfully as the "Week of the Big Joy."

If you are directing mail to the new Boston Opera House be sure to direct it exactly so, and not to the Grand Opera House, else your letters will land at the latter playhouse in the South End, instead of at our new temple of opera in the Back Bay. Manager Magee of the Grand Opera House is regularly re-directing mis-sent mail nowadays, which comes to his place instead of to the Boston Opera House. Foreign mail gives trouble particularly. Home correspondents of the European soloists and choristers think "Grand Opera House, Boston," is correct, but it is not when the Back Bay institution is meant.

In past seasons, when the Metropolitan Opera Company has played its brief annual engagements at the Boston Theatre, misguided opera patrons from our foreign population have journeyed out to the Grand Opera House to hear their beloved Caruso or other favorite only to find themselves confronted with "Herbs, the Sewing Machine Girl" or similar melodramatic triumph.

"His granda da op'," the mistaken ones would say vehemently and then the ticket seller would send them back down town again.

Now that the new Boston Opera House is established, confusion of names is arising again. It has been asked: "Why doesn't the Grand Opera House shorten up its name to The Grand and stop the tangle?" But Manager Magee and his associates at the Grand Opera House object strenuously, saying that the three word name has always been connected with their enterprise that it is a splendid advertising medium, and that they are entitled to the full benefits of old association and trade name.

Talk about impudence. Did you notice the Globe Theatre orchestra at the opening of the third act of "The Blue Mouse" playing "Baby Dear, listen here, I'm afraid to go home in the dark."?

The Boston Elevated's rule requiring conductors to call the names of streets rendered for fare methods strangers within our gates. Mary Marlowe of "Three Twins" company hopped a trolley in front of the Hotel Langham and asked the conductor if perfectly good quarter, and asked:

"Does this car pass the Boston Theatre?"

"Yes, Marm—twenty five cents."

"Here, give me that quarter back, I'll walk. I can ride ten miles in New York for a nickel."

In the Olga Nethersole company contract there is a clause stating that no member may speak disparagingly of the star or of any other member of the troupe. Imagine that rule sprung on the dressing room scene in "The Chorus Lady" in this connection, recall the tough luck of Playwright Pierce in London, when he placed one of the masculine actors in "Mid Channel" with another whose natural appearance was better suited to the dramatic brutality of the role. The new man was the real brutality goods. He took exception to Mr. Pierce's criticism of his reading and slugged the playwright into a daze.

The "Miss Hobbs" company, which went on the rocks at Port Huron, Mich., on the 11, after four stiffened days, can hypnotize its name now and be even more correct.

Charles Frohman says that the report of his retirement is absurd in the first place, and that he is not rich enough to retire in the next.

"In fact," says he, "all I possess is the little money I have added to the $40 I started with when Brousson Howard let me have "Shenandoah." And in a month you have to be a millionaire before you can retire."

According to that, Mr. Frohman's assets rattle around somewhere in the neighborhood of a little money," which he had in the first place, and the million which he has still to get.

Florence Ziegfeld, Jr., Anna Held's husband, ran over to Boston from Philadelphia last Monday night, saw "Miss Innocence," called a rehearsal for the benefit of a song or two the next morning, and took the noon train to New York to connect with the Metropolitan opening of "Springtime," in which he is interested.

Those who have seen Paula Marr as Viola, the colored servant in "The Patriot," may not be aware of the compliment that lies beneath the elocutionary blackeyed of that engaging actress. Look at Paula's own features in the picture group on this page.

Sarah Bernhardt spends her Summers at Belle Ile, France, where she sets the Lady Bountiful. Recently she gave that gentleman a lifeboat with the request that it be named for her. The pious fathers of the commune accepted the lifeboat, but declined to call it the Bernhardt. They explained apologetically to the tragedienne that putting out to sea in a craft of that professional name would be tempting Providence.

Jane Noria, the soprano who will sing in Metropolitan and Boston opera this season, arrived in New York from Paris last week with her husband (Count Centanini) and twenty-nine pieces of baggage. She brought no lapdog or other pet. But she just missed bringing over a crocodile. A friend in New Orleans sent a young "croc" to her in care of her Paris banker. The banker thought it was a box of jewelry and put it in his vaults. When Noria finally got around to taking the box out the unfortunate crocodile had gone to his ancestors.

Speaking of pets and publicity and so forth there is a story circulated of Nellie, the prize winning Persian tabby owned by Miss Channing Pollock, the New York playwright. Nellie was bred at the Wilsord cattery in Newtonville and had a most successful career. Followers of Boston opera events will note that the opera box of Governor Eben S. Draper is No. 21. The box is in the lower tier, the lower floor boxes start with No. 1, on the extreme right hand end of the horseshoe, and number around to box 25 on the left. No. 21, the gubernatorial box, is fifth from the proscenium arch on the left end.

Summer park sensations are not worked out yet by any means. Here is Frederick Melville, just back from Europe, with a new scheme for Coney Island which he is submitting to Fred Thompson of Luna Park enterprise. This latest London contraption is a mythological dragon so constructed as to be able to swallow a whole carful of passengers, who go through the body of the "critter" and emerge at the tail.

The latest nickname on Broadway is "Sweetie," which is Sam Bernard's pet epithet for Miss Kitty Gordon, the London comedienne of Amazon proportions associated with him in "The Girl and the Wizard." It is Mr. Bernard's tribute to the unfailing good nature of Miss Gordon.

JOHN DREW TELLS HOW TO KEEP YOUNG

"Simply Pick the Right Sort of Ancestors," Says the Actor in Seriousness.

DON'T LIVE IN THE PAST

Comed an Adheres to This Precept Never Even Speaking of His Booth Days.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—John Drew has the real secret of keeping young. Accordlng to Mr. Drew, he picked his ancestors carefully; that's all.

If you really want to know John Drew, see him first in "Inconstant George," then accept his invitation, drop in at the Players' Club, sink deeply into one of its huge lounging chairs, and stretch your legs with him at your ease and at his conversationally finest. He is quite another man than the high-heeled "swabber" whose endless irresponsibility delighted you earlier in the evening.

He will cross you a score of times in a general talk, give you an opposite argument, pungent, swift and dogmatic, but it will be the prettiest exercise you ever saw that the snappy, vigorous "John" should "put a bit like it" and similar exclamations that break in on you are somewhat purer than the "Oh, my heaven" exercises to nail a fallacy of art under a trunk—however mere device—or arguing for victory

Woes of Drew's Friend George.

"A recipe for keeping young? All right. There can be no such recipe; each man is the case: I have a friend, now a great bulk of a being, who was once well set up—fair, large high chins, nice eyes and now. He sits around and sits around their high ball, another high ball, another cigar; gets up, walks to another seat—fair, large high chins, nice eyes and now. Comes to me one day crying out, 'Why, here, you have got to get down and your high ball, why don't you look like me—fat as a pig, no energy, no breath, no life! Well, I tell him, 'George (everybody's name in George in Mr. Drew's stories), it is written, that's all—the thing is written.'

And then you clear your throat, wondering whether the ensuing pause is up to you or whether you are to be told what it is written. But soon the next hurdle looms up.

"Yes, all that sort of thing is written. My people were born with a full head of hair all right, thinner pretty well preserved past the allotted time, and nothing has—for the sake of keeping young—but cut off a share for record purposes with that—picked my ancestors carefully; that's all."

There is a finality and snap to the end of each of these passages that admits of as little doubt that the speaker means what he says as that he expects any contradiction.

Never Plays John Drew.

A chat with Mr. Drew records the fact that George Bulin, Jack Straw or what ever other character Charles Frohman has brought him to or from across the water is never John Drew

"Too much luck" is Mr. Drew's saying. "It wish it would happen that way. It would, so simplify matters. And they cannot picture myself, as making wonderful dramatic or comic points in the part, a character whose personality was not dissimilar to my own, and whose eccentricities or aberrations I did not have to suppress myself to. That's the annihilation of my own character and principles for the time being I've enjoyed playing Bulin in 'Inconstant George' to the perfect extent that my measure of his very wrong is first they irritate you, then they exasperate you, but then you get to you and very likely you end by fathering them and their troubles. I've been in George Bulin's place. I would have fathered any troubles I could to get rid of them.

John Drew is always young, always time defying and time triumphant from an studied near the time he was a boy, who puck out the first grey hair and then the second, and finally fixed his position of age at the third—his is simply a common sense code of living. He smokes moderately, horseback rides moderately; he is a moderately good tennis player, moderately good at polo, an excellent swimmer, and so on the list is run. Wherever he finds himself; as perfectly at ease and as much in his conversation is a client with the President as in an exchange of remarks between innings at a ball game.

Life Smooth With Drew.

Life goes very smoothly with him, because he lives in the present and not in the past. He is not a prober of the times that are past, yet he has seen and participated in the events of nearly everything that is thought dramatically great in the past. When Edwin Booth were in his prime John Drew played Tubal to his Shylock and played it with a real Hebrew touch. And A study after traditional descriptions of Judas Drew is a picture of the Judas of The Variorum praising young John Drew for his shallows performance. Yet Mr. Drew has acted with all the best figures of the American stage and with many visiting foreign artists and with almost never refers to them except pass as if he shunned to speak of them and of the scenes of years that might make gray hairs plausible. Mr. Drew never argues. Your worries will not worry him. It is strung along with you.

Surely the stage knows no inhabitant who gets more amusement out of his work than John Drew. He is not there waiting for his entrance in a whole museum of characters, but a museum of deeply inspired initiations, humorous stories and the things he does with the freedom from care of a schoolboy, but carried off with a skilled artist's more sense of what amuses. He tells even a trivial anecdote well, coloring it with gestures, diction and a running fire of pantomime that fairly drives the listener's attention.

A great deal of outdoor recreation is a part of Mr. Drew's daily life. He is often found horseback riding in the park. He gets as far from the city as possible to country clubs. But his finest possible to spent at his country place at Easthampton on Long Island, where good food and plenty finds him in the country with "Georges Second-Nose" friends to invite to dine with him—for everybody, including himself, has the friend name "George" in Mr. Drew's parlance

COLLIER WILL "HOOF IT."

Plans to Cover One Night Circuit as a Pedestrian.

According to information dispensed by an unidentified press agent of "The Patriot," William Collier, the star and part author of that play, is going to indulge in a "hoof it" over the "one night" circuit of Massachusetts for a fortnight.

"The Patriot" company ends its engagement at the Park theatre, Boston, on Saturday night, October 30. It is due in New York on November 15. During the two weeks intervening it will play in Worcester, Lynn, Salem, Lowell, Brockton, Newport, etc. Most of the towns have been headquarters in long or short engagements and journeys out to the surrounding territory.

But Mr. Collier will do a walk every day from Boston out to the particular city where the play that night is. Riding with the sun, he will step briskly forth and "beat it" over the road just as though he didn't have a cent. If you meet a well-built young man with a serious rest of countenance plodding along the pike the first fortnight in November, let him alone. He's probably William Collier en route.

If he is ostentatiously reading a small volume entitled "Don't Do That," he's Mr. Collier for certain. He wrote the book.

THIS WEEK'S STARS AT BOSTON THEATRES

CHICAGO, October 23.

Kyrle Bellew—isms.

Give the other fellow credit for having some sense

Don't hurry. The man who does things with a rush often spoils his on a plan.

Be canny, but not suspicious. Suspicion is often color blind

Don't let success make you conceited. People may like you, but there are plenty of others whom they like just as well

Water is good. Remember that when you think you need a stimulant or tonic.

Sleep as much as you need to. Not too much. It's a sin to lay on one unexpected

Remember that fresh air does wonders to brighten that sunshine you enjoy, and stay out of doors all that you can Take things as they come and make everything you do the best thing you've ever done.

These are some of the precepts that have contributed to the success of Mr. Bellew, for many years a popular stage favorite.

"But I am not a matinee idol," said the tall actor with iron gray hair and blue eyes between the second and third acts of Builder of Bridges.

"I am not a matinee idol. I was never a matinee idol. I am just a matinee man and with people would pause it their invitations. Matinees are one of the best ways to cure the term is mentioned in my hearing I am glad I had been trumped up. Just for the atmosphere of my work. Into a matinee audience quite naturally and I would be glad to if were up to me to pull my pebbles and roll my eyes and say, 'Oh, you beauty!' Really that is insane. It is, without much humor and things Pauline. And really—oh my—I'm in a bad mood for it.

"The real matinee idols are women. A woman star always has the largest after a matinee. What! Because women like to watch other women, and how they dress, and wonder what they would do in such and such a part? Because they look down in the same set of circumstances. They like confidences and they are better to sympathize with women.

"The matinee girl in the cast may receive some of their attention and consideration, but they go back to the real woman in the play. If he is good to her, why the matinee audience quite approves of him.

"If he is a villain, they think he's mean and what a shame it is that he is. I would wish the rest of men who would stand them in the face. I'm invited some to appear among the actress' body.

"Why, I'm not the best to appear in, Mr. Hoyt's."

"Shaw-speare. My best successes have been achieved in these. Parts in these plays are, however, more difficult to memorize than are many others. The work of men of letters is far more difficult to interpret than is that of the man who is merely a story writer.

"I am sure every good writer has his own particular style, and it is for the actor to find out what it is and be guided as much as is possible by it.

"I am sure that Bernard Shaw would be willing to pay for his writings and I'm sure he does not bother him particularly. You see, Shaw is a man who is not going to be easier to represent than is the other.

"Shaw-speare, you see, is not nothing pays is that I have such a good income—I appreciate that. Some of my parts have been changed. Certain parts have been changed, but I have been given sufficient leadings and interlinings. When this is the case and I get on the stage, the printed words are always before me, and a faint picture of the new words with the old. I clearly do I see all this that sometimes I have to ask my leading man to make concentration to keep from becoming confused and saying the wrong thing at the wrong time."

"You are interested in many other things than your acting, are you not?"

"Indeed, yes. I am a good deal of a scientist and have one of the finest microscopes in this country. I am fond of the study of bacteria and hope some time that I may, in my research, discover something that may be a benefit to the world. And my favorite recreation is yachting."

NOTES OF DRAMA AND THE STAGE

"The Fourth Estate," the newspaper play at Wallack's Theatre, New York, has been given a different ending in order to relieve it of its gloomy finale. Instead of having Wheeler Bread, the young reformer, blow out his brains, George C. Tyler, the author, has deftly rearranged matters so Dave Braid saves his brains, preserves his journalistic honor, get the girl he craves for and achieve happiness generally. The revamped finale is more popular, even if it may not be Jay Tyler's sense of dramatic art.

Frank Campeau has been engaged by Liebler & Co. for "These Are My People," the play which is to be produced as a sequel to "The Squaw Man." Both Campeau will recall Mr. Campeau's vigorous acting in the role of Trampas in "The Virginian." His role in the new play is to be similar. H. B. Warner is to be star in "These Are My People" and Miss Alice Brady, referred to as "the most beautiful actress in London," is to be leading woman.

The latest report concerning the resignation of Miss Irving Wanzer, the Buffalo girl who was to have been the leading lady of Lew Dockstader's minstrels, is that she will not join the Dockstader company at all, but will be seen in the title role of "Trilby" in which Wilton Lackaye will be starred. Miss Wanzer's place with the minstrels will be filled by Miss Ethel Levey, who will be seen in a new musical comedy.

The latest report concerning the resignation of Miss Irving Wanzer, the Buffalo girl who was to have been the leading lady of Lew Dockstader's minstrels, is that she will not join the Dockstader company at all, but will be seen in the title role of "Trilby" in which Wilton Lackaye will be starred. Miss Wanzer's place with the minstrels will be filled by Miss Ethel Levey, who will be seen in a new musical comedy.

Frank Ward will open her season in Rochester on Nov. 1 in "A Woman's Life." Then she will be seen with Forrest Robey and Lee Arthur, with scenes in New York, in which Miss Ward's man will be it Rogers Smith. John Dunn and Hazel Cox will support Miss Ward, as they were last season in "The Man He Left Behind." Miss Ward will have a serious role a radical departure from her previous comedy line.

Emma Trentini has been engaged by Lew Fields for one of the leads in "The Jolly Bachelors," which opens at the New York next Thursday. The cast now lists as follows: Molly Madison, Lillie Faye, Jessie Glendinning, Ida Fuller, Jessie Ashley, Lyle Tyler, Trixie Lorraine, Ida Mulle, Lee Kohlmar, Bobby Gaylor, Walter Percival, Bell, Taylor and Bell.

The opening act in "Your Humble Servant," to open play which Charles Frohman will present at the Savoy theatre, New York, Shubert takes place in a small Brooklyn boarding house. Edward Abeles, as Salome, appears as the leading man of a theatrical company who is stopping there. Throughout the first act, the scenes change to New York, where Mr. Abeell is to be Mr. Skinner's leading woman.

At the time of his death Clyde Fitch was just finishing a play to be called "The Manhaven," which was to be a starring vehicle for Miss Fiske. It is now announced in her or almost part of Mrs Fiske's repertoire for the season of 1909-10. Clyde Thorpe "The play began by Mr. Fitch, but the author of "Becky Sharp" then produced by the Shuberts for Miss Fiske, is an originality intended.

The first time that Mrs. Taft, wife of the President, has appeared in public since her illness will be at the New National Theatre, Washington, last Monday night, when she will attend Miss Helen Taft's wedding. Miss Taft, she is a granddaughter of Mrs. Lewis Boardman Harmon, and the President's secretary, Fred Carpenter.

Walter Lawrence has brought out a new play by Louis Lloyd Sulpman entitled, "The Model," the title of the same play in the Admiral's cabin aboard the United States battleship Maine. The cast includes William F. Hawtrey, Warren Fabian, Richard Bennett, Charles Burton, Harriet Ross and Mathilde Deshon.

"Polly Redux," the new play by W. J. Hirleman, for the author of "Polly Primrose," will probably be given on the site of the Wallack's, New York, theatre, presented in London by Sir Herbert Tree. Londen reports say that Ethel Barrymore will appear in it in this country.

Josephine Hull Mrs. Alfred P. Aargood has returned to the cast of "Pomander" after six years to play in "The Air Ring" company, in which John T. Kelly is being remodeled. She is a clever little actress and will be remembered especially for her work in "The Girl from Maxim's."

Charles Klein's drama, "The Lion and the Mouse," which Richard Bennett is to be produced in Austin by J. J. Mc Hanson, Australian manager for Sanger & Jordan, Katherine Gray will probably have the principal roles and is preparing to depart for the Antipodes for rehearsals.

"The Broken Idol," the B. C. Whitney production in which Otis Harlan appeared at the Tremont Theatre last season, has been brought outright by Alfred E. Aarons. It is to be reshaped for a New York book for and achieve happiness generally. The revamped finale is more popular, even if it may not be Jay Tyler's sense of dramatic art.

Henry W. Savage is in England on a pleasure trip. He expects to return late in November, when, according to his business, is said to be his purpose, but it is expected he will give his attention on the Continent to new operatic possibilities.

"The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," the musical play which was barred from Boston, and which has been playing Chicago for seven weeks, has returned to New York for its second engagement, this time playing at the Broadway Theatre.

Cecil Lean and Florence Holbrook, now in vaudeville, have been engaged by Joseph M. Gaites for the principal roles in "Bright Eyes," the forthcoming musical comedy version of Charles Dickson's "Mistake Will Happen."

The palpitating London rabies send report that Edna Wallace Hopper Brown is starring the stolid British heart by a burlesque and dance number entitled "So Long." London chappies are quite enamored of her petite "form."

Willis P. Sweetnam, who was in "The Country Chairman" and also in Cohan productions, has signed with Lew Fields to appear in "Sweet Kitten." He is one of the best known legitimate blackface comedians in the business.

Mlle. Dazie, whose press agent must be one of the most industrious people to be in the business, drops a couch and four from New Haven to Springfield last week, making the trip in ten hours, with two days of horses.

The scenery used in "Arizona," the Augustus Thomas drama of the West which is to be the grand opera House this week, was painted from sketches made by Frederick Remington, the American artist.

John Murry, who recently bought "Vim, Vigor and Vitality" from Richard Carle and Frederic Thompson, announces that on Monday, November 1, he will start it out at Youngstown, O., on November 3, and then work it from there.

A new firm of producers is out, consisting of Bell & Bergin. Their first production is a one act musical comedy called "Design of the Feticest," by Charles Horwitz.

Mort H. Singer has added John Ransone to the long cast of "The Fighting Parsons," which is announced for early production at the La Salle Theatre, Chicago.

"The Blue Mouse," now running at the Garrick Theatre, has been presented 1,200 times in America—the companies are now out with it.

Miss Lulu Barrett of vaudeville fame is preparing to entertain Broadway soon in a new one-act play written for her by Paul Potter.

Julian Edwards, composer of "The Girl from Utah" and "The Wizard of Oz," has thirty musical works in all to his credit.

Miss Jessie Millward has been engaged by Liebler & Co. as leading woman for "Mary Daly in Paul Bevlen's 'Knox Thyself.'"

Former Sheriff Butting of Kings county, New York, is to build a theatre in the Williamsburg district of New York.

Harry Clay Blaney has succeeded Billy Van Is the cast of Klaw & Erlanger's production of "Ben Hur."

If You Cannot be a Leader, Don't Hold Back.

THERE are few real leaders of men. Those few are the pioneers of civilization, the planners of the future. The responsibility that they must bear enslaves them. Their lives are given to others, and comfort, ease, even ambition, must be sacrificed to the work that they are called upon to do.

Such a leader was the Apostle Paul. Such was Abraham Lincoln. They cleared the way for others that were to follow. Prejudice, opposition, lack of sympathy conspired to retard their progress, but they were destined to succeed. The words of Paul live to-day, to inspire every thinking human creature. The words and the deeds of Lincoln will endure as long as will the Liberty for which he gave his life.

In every community, whether it be a company of States bonded together to make a nation or a handful of families collected into a village, there are little leaders and little followers and little idlers who are carried along by the energy and industry of their betters.

As long as the workers—the leaders and those who follow them—outnumber the idlers, the nation or city or village will prosper. When the idlers become too many there will be failure and bankruptcy. Every man is able, under press of necessity, to carry another man, perhaps several other men, along with him. No man can make headway when the load he carries begins to drain his strength.

In taking your place in the upward march that will go on, whether you will or no, you must list yourself as a leader, a follower or an idler. In either of the former places you will be a useful citizen, worthy to share the benefits of your own labor and that of your fellow men. As an idler you are a cumberer of the earth, a burden on your brethren, whose upward climb must be retarded because of your idleness.

It is not enough to carry your own load The most narrow and selfish of men do that.

The mere gaining of a livelihood is instinctive. There is not a coyote on the prairies or a squirrel in the trees that does not make his own living, even provide for his family.

As long as you live in the world you share to a greater or less extent in the blessings conferred by the labor or courage or sacrifice of others. And unless you, too, try to do your share in the work that is going on about you, for your own benefit as well as for that of the world in general, you have a pretty poor excuse for existence.

The next time you go from your home to your place of business, or on a holiday take a walk about a town or city, spend a little time in observation.

The street car that carries you to your work, saving you three-quarters of an hour to two hours each day, not to mention a great deal of wear and tear on your shoes and feet—how was that provided for you?

By the earnest thought and toil of a succession of men, beginning, perhaps, with Thomas A. Edison, ending, for the present, with the inventor of the latest electrical traffic appliance.

Go into an apartment house in a city, where tenants are taken quickly, safely and silently in the elevators to the eleventh, twelfth or twentieth floor.

Who made that luxury possible? More inventors, who worked not merely for their own pleasure and profit, but for the future good of their fellow men.

In the provision and meat stores you find clean, sanitary food at your disposal—food that you may eat without fear of poisoning yourself, food that you know is clean.

It took years of thought and invention to supply machinery and appliances for the safe and sanitary handling of food products. More than that, it took years of legislation and hard fights with greedy manufacturers to get laws that would insure the delivery of wholesome food.

That fight is only begun. Still in many districts food is sold that is unfit for the human stomach. Still gluttonous corporations are permitted to murder children with tainted meat and adulterated groceries. The fight is going on to-day, and will continue to go on till nothing can come to the table of rich man or poor man which is not insured by the Government.

Are YOU taking any part in that fight? Are you even so much as helping it along by your approval?

The late E. H. Harriman was a high type of the man who worked for others. Perhaps without knowing it he devoted his life to building better railroad lines, to giving his patrons better service, to making traffic conditions more nearly what they should be throughout the country.

It was a gigantic task, but Harriman, having spent the larger part of his life in preparing himself for it, undertook it willingly.

There Is Work Enough for the Workers in the World, Without Supporting the Idlers.

That he knew the importance of what he did—that he understood he was building for the future—he revealed when a week or two before he died he said:

"The lines I am speaking of may not pay in my time; that does not matter. Eventually they will pay, and they will develop and improve the districts through which they run."

Harriman was abused and opposed and belittled. But he was a man with a big idea. He was the first railroad builder really to grasp the possibilities of railroads in this country, really to understand what they would do for the farmer and the shipper and the merchant.

And so, despite failing health and abuse, he worked relentlessly for the future, and laid out a scheme of building that will continue long after his name shall cease to be identified with the roads that were once under his control.

Such a man does the work of many men, makes possible many idlers. He carried hundreds of speculators to success. Shrewd Wall Street men soon discovered that to follow Harriman was to make money, and they did follow him. He was the man who was at the head of the rope, like the guide in the cartoon above. The others trailed along behind, some of them helping, some of them holding back.

Often the stumblers imperilled the financial life of the leader, but he always managed to keep going, and just when the peak of success on which his eyes were fixed was in sight Death overbore him and he had to leave the rest of the way for the others to find.

In the life of any builder, any leader, be he great or small, is inspiration. And there is equal inspiration in the lives of those who, realizing that they are not fitted to be leaders, nobly toil to make possible the work that the leaders are carrying out.

For them there is little glory in life, little fame when their work is done. But the knowledge that they are not idlers, but helpers, not parasites, but real producers, gives them heart in their work and the contentment that comes only with honest achievement.

To the workers of the world every man, whether also a worker or a mere sponge upon the rest, owes a heavy debt of gratitude.

Most of that which comes to us, of prosperity or comfort or happiness, comes as the gift of other men. It is a pretty poor part to play in life not to do our best to pay that debt, even though our contribution to the welfare of others can be but small.

HER SISTER—Novelized from the Celebrated Play

Play Written by Clyde Fitch and Gordon Lennox. Novelization by L. M. Loughborough.

CHAPTER I.

Romance on a Train

IN the first-class compartment of a full-road carriage bound for Edinburgh sat a strangely fascinating girl. She was tall, lithe and commanding in appearance, like the Sabine women. Her delicately-moulded features declared beauty and natural refinement. Within the depths of her large, violet eyes there was an expression which betokened keen perception.

A student of human nature would have observed about her an air of embarrassment and indignation, mingled with just a trace of supercilious scorn. For in the opposite seat reclined a handsome youth who stared at her as the girl, who wore a pure face worthy of art that belonged in the British Museum. And they were alone in the compartment.

There are girls who enjoy being stared at by men, and there are girls who detest it. This girl detested it, or at least she thought she did.

Such things as smiles or men's quizzing glances with sinful eyes at a woman who has never consented to receive such attentions from them are self-annoying and impudent.

Her profession was one descended from ancient times. She was a fortune-teller. In London she was known as "Mme. Isle," in private life plain Eleanor Alderson, who had won fame and money through her ability to gaze into a crystal globe and foretell, with more or less accuracy, the stages, deaths and all sorts of joys and calamities.

Open Admiration in His Eyes

It [illegible] over, for her to have divined why the youth was staring. [illegible] of his eyes every bit of his person, to a close upon admiration. And [illegible] that she detested it, she sat [illegible] a woe bit pleased.

"If I only had my crystal here," she mused, "I would peep into the future for me. Oh, if I could! I would tell him that he looked like a hillsnob and that he was a [illegible] to admire me! What I thought [illegible] Ha, ha, ha!"

Her laugh stirred [illegible] Anderson was not the sort of girl that [illegible] with [illegible] of sly [illegible] [illegible] paper, or [illegible] [illegible] to be misled, [illegible] a good [illegible]

CO-OPERATIVE RENTS CAUSE LABOR DEBATE

WOULD the wage workers of Greater Boston be benefited by the formation of a co-operative renting club? Or, would collective house renting perpetuate landlordism and draw the cash still closer into overreaching strike? Are working-class residential areas where a child has a right to play over-crowded property?

This question is being discussed extensively by representative labor men the city over. It was raised by a recent state report credited to Philip Abbot, a wealthy member of the Union movement and published in the Sunday American as the effect that an increasing number of workingmen were to-day seeking to free themselves from the clutches of high rents through the medium of co-operative renting clubs, their undoubted aim being to obtain more desirable apartments, either at the same money or equally desirable rooms for a smaller rental.

Henry Abrahams, secretary of the Boston Central Labor and the Cigarmakers' Unions, one of the best known trade union men in the State, is a firm believer in the plan, which he declares to be original with Mr. Cabot, and which would represent a step towards the practicability of such a club. But, taken as a whole, the trade union officials in this city seem favorable to some form of co-operative effort as a means toward lessening the amount now paid by workingmen for housing their families.

Better Homes For Workers.

Co-operative renting clubs, such as proposed by Mr. Cabot, undoubtedly would be the means of providing better homes for the wage workers of greater Boston for what is equally important, such clubs would give satisfaction at a much lower rental than is now demanded by the landlords, declared Secretary Abrahams.

"Watching of the union trade, and reporting the wages paid, I find in the same parts of the city, anyway. Like attracts like, in selecting homes as well as in other matters. Under a good co-operative system of renting, where every man chooses for himself we have our New End, our West End, our South End and other distinctively race or class residential districts.

"If this is true, as undoubtedly, why not adopt the principle of building a lot of common houses by forming them into co-operative renting clubs? By wholesale renting, through these clubs, taking whole blocks of apartment houses, or an entire street of modern flats, and subletting those apartments, flats or tenements to individual club members, the amount saved to each family getting these wholesale rent rates would be well worth the effort.

Benefit to Owners, Also.

"It also would be a benefit to the real estate owner He would be saved the expense now entailed in collecting his rent A steady income would be guaranteed him for his block of apartments. There would be no element of risk, no uncertainty as regards the possibility of having one or more of his flats without a tenant. It would be a paying venture for both parties to the deal.

"We now have a blind herding of races Why not substitute intelligent cooperation. Co-operative house building clubs are good in their way, but a certain per cent. of our population always will rent in preference to building, and the Sunday American is doing a grand work in exploiting the principle of co-operative renting as a means of benefiting the working people of Boston"

"Such clubs would insure the perpetuity of households. They would derive, relatively sharply than at present strictly speaking. The possible success of any such a movement presupposes but for a small measure consideration on the part of the folk together like sheep," declared F. A. Fitzgerald, financial secretary of Painters' Union, No. 11, one of the largest trade unions in Boston

Says Idea Is All Wrong.

"The idea would be a kind of separation of the sheep and the goats, and the land lord should get the workingman's goat, at least," continued. "I don't think such clubs practicable, either do I consider them desirable We want some plan that will permit workingmen to own their own homes.

"Our national unions eventually will take the question under consideration, and instead of attempting to conduct costly experiments with great national homes for indigent members, they will erect model individual homes in desirable residential districts, and sell them to the union men on some co-operative basis.

"Under such a plan there would have an opportunity to live until he reached a ripe old age, and would be proud of a home he helped build and the cold wounds," while under any kind of renting system he is sure to be plucked by landlordism —co-operative or no co-operative."

"The suggestion is deserving of serious consideration by every workingman living in the city of Boston. I trust that it will be taken up by the unions in order that a competent union times appointed for such purpose, can report upon confidence with like committees representing real estate owners; the question should be gone into thoroughly," said Daniel J. McDonald, secretary of the Allied Printing Trades Council

Good Thing for All Hands.

"Co-operative renting clubs, conducted properly, would be a grand thing for the non-home owner, as well as real estate owners, and in my opinion would benefit the renting population of Boston immensely. I can see only two difficulties that would have to be overcome.

"First I should consider it advisable to have the club organized in some way that the individual liability of each member would be defined clearly Then, to prevent the breaking of home ties, where certain families have lived in the same neighborhood for a number of years, I also would like to see some provision made for the location, not of these neighbors, relatives"

"If I can help with the plan, I will be eventually the natural law of supply and demand would assert itself, and the co-operative renter would have to pay the same price for their homes, each of the club," asserted Arthur M. Watson, secretary of the Carpenters' Union, which is perhaps the strongest single combination of trade unionists in Greater Boston

Watson spent a couple of years in co-operative home building clubs in the Southwest most prominent and most successful undertakings were the organization of the suburb that now bears his name. Here moderate means can be erected and sold at a reasonable profit to the buyer, who pays a month And that with no initial deposit, merely by the payment of the monthly rent. Same homes would at the end of that time become the property of the respective tenants

"A co-operative rent club, on the other hand, merely would insure stability to its members. I feel sure that such a club would quell the necks of its workingmen members from ever going into the red. A bad year would mean one of the high houses. It means would be going a-begging, and the rent would be collected with a promise for good times, and rent them. At least, that's my theory of practical co-operation."

Favors Ren. Clubs

"Anything that could help the working class, whether a socialistic co-operative renting club or a co-operative home association, is better than no organization," said Frank Jenney, president of Boston Labor No 13 M. C. U. A.

"I have been paying rent for eighteen years now, and while I should like to own a home of my own, if that were impossible through co-operative effort, it is said that under the proposed form of collective renting one could save from $2 to $5 a month in rent alone Let's try to save it!

"Fully seven out of every ten workingmen in Greater Boston rent their homes If they can be benefited by some form of co-operative rent clubs, I for one favor the idea, and in any event favor going into the question thoroughly to determine its practicability

"Perhaps, when the Boston 1915 movement gives fairly under way, the organization itself will develop a still better plan. Its housing committee may take up the question of co-operative home building, In the meantime, we may obtain a temporary relief by co-operative renting, which easily can be determined by conscientious appointees of the Parsons.

Would Rather Own Homes.

Albert E. Pike, business agent of Hoisting and Portable Engineers, Union, No. 4, and secretary of the Building Trades Department of the Boston Central Labor Union, while a pronounced believer in the theory of co-operative effort, was opposed to the proposed plans

"Every man should own his own home, he said. "The Commonwealth should provide some equitable plan to bring this about By charging a nominal interest on the money loaned for building purposes, and then permitting the borrower to pay off his home in small monthly sums, the State could make home owners out of the greatest possible number of men.

"Rental housed, whether the rentals are paid on a wholesale or a retail basis are a mere makeshift. An ideal plan would be the building of homes. There would be no real problem to solve if every citizen owned his own home. And I believe home ownership instead of tenantry is a long step in the right direction."

DR. MYERS FITS TEMPLE PULPIT

REV. CORTLAND MYERS

New Pastor Has to Repeat in Boston His Success of Other Charges.

THE REV. DR. CORTLAND MYERS, the new pastor of Tremont Temple is one of the most gifted ministers of the Baptist church in New England.

Stout in stature, with a strong voice, fearless and a most attractive manner, he impresses the visitor in his study in the Temple as a man who has observed much in life, and one who knows how to meet the many exacting duties demanded of him in the plain straightforward ways pending the somewhat of a business man, who has other talents.

With well chosen words, he tackles every subject and is meaning if not in reason practical. There is nothing of the dull or the ordinary about him. He has a warm and sunny disposition, and is glad to meet people. He is fond of children. Many are glad something him upon the peculiarities that he has observed in them. He is a lover of a jest and enjoys a humorous anecdote.

Secret of His Success.

While he is a close and forceful preacher, he is also pastor in the best sense of that term. This has been the secret of his success in three pastorates, which he has served.

His home life in boyhood days, was of the type that young men love to think of in prayer and the influence of the Christian life future was a deep in one of the largest churches of the Baptist denomination in the country. The children delighted their parents "from the start," as they say. Present at hand it is how the experiment warrants Boston in taking pronounced optimistic view of the do the same all over the city. It is a system worth while adopting in communities all over the world and Boston should take the lead and lead it will. The Temple will pioneer in this great sanitary movement. Its success will mean much to thousands of parents to point to their children in the open air, and say, "Behold what I have provided with, owing to lack of facilities to properly carry out this meritorious work

NEWS OF BOSTON CHURCHES

Dr. Henry Sloane Bridges has begun some years in charge of St. John's Methodist Church, St. Louis, has become pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, Worcester, Mass. He was born in Georgia and is the son of a Southern preacher and for many years was a member of the board of trustees of Wesleyan University. One of the best-known preachers of Boston is Dr. Daniels, pastor of the Berkeley Street Church, who has announced last month

At the School of Theology of Boston University 120 men are registered from the Western States as against 37 from New England Methodism is especially strong in the Middle West and on the Pacific coast.

The first meeting for the Autumn of the Boston Methodist Social Union was held in the parlors of the Park Street Church and inaugurated the interests of the Laymen's Association of the New England Conference. This organization is now forty two years old

TRADE IN REALTY CONTINUES ACTIVE

TONE MOST ENCOURAGING

All Kinds of Property, in City and Country, Figure in Transactions.

THOUGH October is fast drawing to a close and Winter is fast coming on, but little appreciable change is noted in the realty market. Trading still continues good and the past week, in a measure, at least, shows a large volume of business. All kinds and classes of real estate are being bought and sold and the tone of the present market is most encouraging to brokers and others interested in the realty.

For this the [illegible] cause the showing made by the various [illegible] is gratifying and from present [illegible] there seems to be [illegible] time to [illegible] in those districts. The [illegible] appetites were [illegible] showing some [illegible] of investment [illegible] and Back Bay [illegible] in looking [illegible] in the West End is not [illegible] in point of sales [illegible] the sales reported yesterday were [illegible] in the south End the two frame houses [illegible] Dorchester.

FALL REAL ESTATE MARKET SHOWS BIG IMPROVEMENT IN ALL BRANCHES

BIG DEVELOPMENT IN "FLAT" HOUSES

No Other Type of Construction Has Shown Greater Advance in Methods.

Since the days of twenty-five or thirty years ago, apartment house construction in this city has become a leading factor in the development of proper housing facilities for its vast and constantly increasing and [illegible]

[illegible] constructional work has [illegible] sterling advances in methods and designs, unless it be the [illegible] of high office building structures, and even these do not approach the record made in apartment house construction when in [illegible] improvements and appointments are [illegible] considered.

[illegible] of the movement is to be found in the [illegible] of the flats [illegible] some of the [illegible] of the city to a type of residence [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Wellington-In-The-Fellsway

OFFERS THE MOST ACCESSIBLE

HOME SITES

With Garden Plots

ON THE NORTH SIDE OF BOSTON

46 Trains a Day from the North Station
"Fellsway" Cars Every Few Minutes.
5 Cent Fare by the Boston Elevated
6 Cent Fare by the Boston & Maine R. R.
8 Minutes Ride by Steam Cars, 15 Minutes by Electrics

Notice What the Boston Elevated Says of the FELLSWAY

"For those who want a home there is none for whom the picturesque makes a deep impression that can compare with the suburbs of the city. The Fellsway is the most accessible of all the suburban districts, and the people who live there are those who appreciate the fact that they can get into the city in the least possible time, and at the cheapest rate. In the Fellsway district every foot of land is reached by our cars, and we have more cars per mile of track than any other district we operate."

Wellington Is the Key to the Fellsway!!
Every Fellsway Car Passes Through Wellington!!

Wellington might readily be called a town by itself. It has splendid streets, fine rest dances, being under the management and control of a HOMEWOOD organization.

HAVE YOU VISITED Atlantic-By-The-Sea

If Not, You Will Surely Regret It!!

If you are one who has been telling YOU that ATLANTIC-BY-THE-SEA is an ideal location, combining all the features of the metropolitan boulevard or quincy bay, only 13 minutes from South Station by electric train, and $500 to $700 per lot, you are mistaken.

DON'T BE A "DOUBTING THOMAS" ANY LONGER!!

All we have said is TRUE and we want you to see this Mecca for Home Seekers, because

WE WANT YOUR CONFIDENCE,
YOU DON'T HAVE TO WAIT FOR IMPROVEMENTS, and
THE LAND TITLES ARE GUARANTEED.

If you are moderate with monthly payments of ten or three years, if you desire, you can build a home either now or next spring. If you are ready to buy, tell us the best as a description of property you want to sell and we will show you how quickly it will convert you into cash.

So There is No Excuse For You To Hesitate.

SEE ATLANTIC-BY-THE-SEA TODAY!!

It's Just Where You Want To Live!!

BUY LAND in the outlying borders of a rapidly growing city, the wise man of today, young or old, knows that the money invested in land will double and treble merely by the growth of the city. Two weeks recently about one hundred people in Boston purchased 10 acres of land in Revere Beach, Mass., and in less than 30 days they sold and made gratifying profit. I can sell you a lot in Revere Beach for $100 cash and $5 per month, or in Wellington, 15 miles away, on the Fellsway, for $50 cash and $5 per month. Both are growing cities, and you will make money on your investment. Call at my office and get full particulars. CHARLES M. CONANT, Old South Building.

DISHONESTY IS A CONFESSION OF COWARDICE—By HERBERT KAUFMAN

Poisoned roots produce poisoned fruits. The twist in the tree begins with a bend in the sapling. The time to start right is the outset of life.

The penalty of dishonesty is too heavy and too permanent to justify it. It is often deferred but never escaped. The longer it is postponed the more the punishment compounds.

There's a straight way of doing every crooked thing. It is the easiest and safest way, besides. A THIEF IS SIMPLY A MENTAL AND MORAL WEAKLING. He not only lacks staying power and courage, but also common sense. Even with all history to furnish precedent, he won't realize that the odds against him are 101 per cent---and they have never been less since society first bet its enemies that right was right.

He's just a lazy man with a lazy mind. He's a shirker without the will power to work. He never gets on top because he won't climb.

He proclaims himself incompetent and unfit to cope with his fellows on fair terms and even ground. He won't stand trial. He is never convinced until he is convicted; and when repentant it's usually safe to figure that he isn't sorry for what he did, but because he is caught.

Dishonesty is an outright confession of cowardice---a declaration of inability to survive by legitimate means.

It can never be truly successful. Even if the world cannot put its finger upon the wrong, conscience knows it and proclaims failure---the greatest of all failures---the most irreparable---the loss of honor, for which there can be no substitute.

Busy people are seldom tempted---they haven't time to get into trouble. They're too occupied with performances---they're too intent on deeds to be diverted from the safe road. Hard work stiffens as well as straightens a man's backbone.

The few surpassing geniuses who have misapplied their debased and debauched abilities---the exceptional criminals, whose brilliant wits have been squandered upon unworthy aims, however much they gained---cheated no one so much as themselves.

Unless money can bring with it peace and pleasure, and self-esteem as well as admiration, it is a taunt and not a satisfaction.

Life loses its fine aspect when mere luxury and indulgence are its utmost pleasures. Existence becomes a horrible bore and a cruel punishment when Society lashes with the whip of contempt.

The walls of ostracism are sometimes thicker and colder than those of a prison.

There is a vast difference between notoriety and fame. Really great men have never worn smirches upon their names. D cent companionship has never been bought with dirty money. Illustrious achievements have never been wrought with stained hands.

STREET HOPES FOR BEST IN COPPERS

If There Were any Pressure to Sell, a Ragged Market Would Follow.

By E. A. WILKINS.

STATE STREET, Oct. 23.—Disappointment expressed the feeling regarding copper shares. As it is always the darkest before dawn, there is hope for them. The buoyancy of Amalgamated helps the local market some, but if there were any great pressure to sell stocks a ragged market would surely ensue. As it is, tipless are quiet and other by and the street is pos for the better, with belief that the present period of lethargy will be dispelled in a comparatively short time.

The necessity for restriction of copper production is apparent, but there are two sides to this question. Without doubt the production has reached its maximum. With the excellent prospects for renewed activity in this special line the time may soon be ripe for restriction, particularly in view of the fact that certain mines can make a big percentage of profit with the metal at its present price while others, particularly those of the Amalgamated brand, have larger coal sheets and consequent smaller profits.

Summed up, the weaker of the two controlling interests of the copper market is in the stronger position, and the bear interests are on the defensive. This is the real crush for the anticipated formation of a combination.

The street is told that it will be a $150,000,000 corporation to deal in the metal that is by part bought the producing from the mines direct.

In this manner the price can be kept level although no action would not necessarily follow as certain interests would not be brought fair. To date the combination has been a corporate state, but of late it will have a corporate kind of PROFITS SHARED.

President Richards Explains Consolidated Gas Plans.

President Richards of the Boston Consolidated Gas Co. has addressed a letter to the customers that concerns why are stockholders in the Massachusetts Gas Companies, through the operation of the profit-sharing plan, in which he says in part:

I desire to call your attention to the profit-sharing plan of this company and again impress upon you the object in same, which is not only to increase the prosperity of the company and improve the service to the public, but also to give you an opportunity to participate in the profits of the company.

[illegible] the year ending June 30, 1909, the company paid out to its employees under the profit-sharing plan amounts ranging from $30 to $100, the average paid each employee being $50. The company has also paid to its employees during the present year [illegible] the year ending June 30, 1909, and the amount to be paid during the present year should not be highly satisfied.

MARKET DEPRESSED, CLOSE IS FEVERISH

Advance in Rates by Banks of England and Germany Possible; New York Banking Position Weaker.

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Complete reversal of the speculative position in Wall street was made apparent to-day when the entire list opened weak, grew weaker and closed active and feverish at the bottom figures of the day.

London sent over prices showing material losses in American stocks. Foreign exchange rose sharply and indicated gold exports early the coming week. Nothing was done in money, but higher rates are expected in Wall street.

The banks showed an increase of more than $6,000,000 in the average statement, but of only a million in the actual statement. While the average statement showed a heavy reduction in loans, the actual statement showed an increase in that item. It is evident that the banking position in New York is growing weaker at the moment.

Advance of the Bank of Germany rate which is expected for the coming week, with the possible further advance of the Bank of England rate, will give the United States an opportunity to test the virtues of the Aldrich law, which has been the cause of most of the inflation of prices. Should actual use of Aldrich money be begun it may be possible to turn speculative sentiment, but at the moment Wall street markets are very much depressed and no relief is expected until the British budget is adjusted and the storm in London is allayed.

At the beginning of the week some attempt was made to boom copper stocks. The movement was a failure because of the friendship of unpopular interests. The public felt that it was a plan to sell stocks, and developments of the week proved this feeling justified.

Union Pacific's annual report, which was made public on Thursday, showed earnings equal to about 19 per cent on the common stock, as against 16 per cent the previous year. This advance had been thoroughly discounted by confidential reports in general circulation about the Street. Actual appearance of the report, therefore, had no influence on the market. It was one of the best statements ever made by the Union Pacific, but a feeling exists that the next statement will show a great increase in operating expenses, as Harriman's management will be missed. The income from investments will also be greatly reduced.

Strength of express companies' stocks, and especially of Wells Fargo, led to a belief of higher dividends. It has always been charged that E. H. Harriman refused to let larger dividends be paid on Wells Fargo because he wanted the profits held in the shape of cash as a convenient source for borrowing. The stock advanced a little more than 100 per cent on the week's operations.

It became known late in the week that an organized effort is to be made this Winter to advance freight rates over the whole United States. This advance will be made on the ground that every other business is getting higher prices. The railroads are overlooking the fact that they will be overwhelmed with business, and that the percentage of profit is greater on railroads in proportion to the increase of business. Immediately on announcement of the proposed campaign murmurs were heard of adverse legislation being prepared by new Congressmen. It is generally expected, therefore, that this Winter at Washington will see more freak legislation. An unsettled condition of the stock market will naturally result from this. The public will be so busy in actual trade that the outlook for Wall Street is not cheerful in the light of this latest move by the railroads. If the railroads want to raise capital they had better not raise rates.

Great expectations are entertained in regard to the Steel Trust meeting on Tuesday. It is thoroughly understood that the dividend is to be advanced to 4 per cent, but talk of a higher rate is discouraged in official quarters. The earnings for the September quarter, which will be officially announced, will probably be about $40,000,000. The record of unfilled business at the end of the September quarter will be surprisingly large, and some banking interests believe that an additional report of unfilled business will be made so as to inform the public of the state of business up to the date of making the report on Tuesday. If the whole be done it will be a great surprise for the public —for one of the estimates published by any newspaper is as large as the actual figures on the books of the company.

Shipments of gold from New York are expected in the near future, and the action of the Bank of England has so unsettled money rates throughout the financial world that a position of extreme conservatism is being adopted in the stock market by interests that have until the last few days been buoyantly bullish.

DECEMBER WHEAT IN BULL CONTROL

An Overproduction of Flour With Scarcity of Grain Is Threatened.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—The wheat bull is in complete control of the December future, and while the bears may possibly be enabled to stave off a concerted attack for another month or six weeks they will be obliged to seek cover in the end.

There are possibilities of more changes before the last day of December, but it has been won the market from the hands of the bulls it will be through larger receipts of wheat and big increases in the visible supply of this country and Canada.

Congestion in the December delivery in the Northwest markets has resulted in a similar condition in Chicago. December wheat has shown much strength and has been difficult to buy throughout the week. It has shown any moderate setback during week periods.

Minneapolis shows the effect of the phenomenal flour output, as well as the storing of farmers' wheat to an unusual extent, despite lower prices, charges, interest and insurance. The price of flour in New York are estimated between three and 70,000 barrels a day, against the normal run of 15,000 to 20,000. In other words five stocks are taking the place of wheat stocks, and it would not be surprising if overproduction on a big scale should be the result.

In the meantime lack of wheat supplies at Minneapolis is forcing millers to cover to the extent in the nearby futures, and this fear is largely the basis for the strength of these months, while the more deferred options are under continued pressure.

Notes for Investors

For the fiscal year ended September 30 the Interborough-Metropolitan Company earned on its $25,000,000 preferred stock 10.56 per cent, against 6.40 per cent, or $1,600,000 more, the preferred's share. Of $1,757,500 increase in the capital stock has in the purchase last February of a controlling interest in the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company's system.

The money markets of the world are in a more or less state of uneasiness. The one per cent ad vance last Thursday by the Bank of England's discount rate to five per cent, tightens the grip on gold all the more, as it points to scarce money and the yellow metal from this side. In three weeks time the bank's rate doubled.

Hawley, Tewksbury & Co. have issued a circular giving interesting statistics of the New Bedford Gas & Edison Light Company. It contains the cash balance sheet, the earnings for ten years, the number of meters and leases and the capitalization. The circular is issued by the class of goods handled by the company.

The Amalgamated Copper Company's two per cent, note this year compares with four per cent. in 1907, when $39,000,000 and $40,000,000 were issued each year, while in 1905 the total amount was $50,000,000. The Amalgamated has a cash balance of $15,000,000 and 1906 and 1907.

Disappointment is expressed that Nevada Consolidated directors made no initial dividend but the fact that the property has been put in good condition and that the rate of 25 per annum, the same as the Ray Consolidated, is expected later cannot be overlooked.

The jobs discovered at the Lee Line mines No. 3 and No. 4 are said to be of great value. The Lee Consolidated, has developed rich ore bodies both in lessen of its shafts and the other properties and profits because its smaller position is not determined.

The annual meeting of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company will be held in Boston on Wednesday, November 10, at which proxies until October 27 when action will be taken on the proposition to issue $40,000,000 bonds.

A special meeting of the directors of the Brandon Consolidated Mining Company was held in Providence, when $10,000 was voted to be expended in erecting a stamp mill. It will have 10 stamps of 1,000 pounds each and the American Zinc, Lead and Smelting Company is building them.

Curb Broker Thomas H. Worsley, Jr., has issued a circular on Trull and Company, the shares of which has been placed on the curb in limited denominations. The property is said to be one of the best in the North Butte mining district.

It is now declared that Somerset Ely will be taken over by the Nevada Consolidated on the basis of three and a quarter shares for one of the latter.

The advance in Boston Ely stock is based on reports that the company has had an offer for Ely property for consolidation purposes.

The court has given F. A. Heinze permission to take a trip West. This will be the first time in two years that he has been in his mining camps to which he is interested.

Friends of Charles W. Morse have been it circulating Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies preferred stock lately, and it is said, as a matter of fact, the road.

A persistent demand for Butte Coalition is reported by a brokerage house which usually acts for insiders.

President William A. Paine, of several of the Lake Superior [illegible] on his way to that district for a few days.

There is over $1,000,000 of savings bank life insurance in force in Massachusetts, mostly written among [illegible] and the large companies.

BRILLIANT BRITISH COUP RULES MARKET

Hint That Loans Would Not Be Renewed Confounds Issues for American Investors.

By BOERBIANER.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—The money and stock markets have had a queer effect on the mentality of many market mentors. Some sapient advisers have been forced to talk and write in order to find out what they themselves think, thus reversing the conventional process of thinking first and talking and writing afterward.

The average output of financial pens has not been imperatively worth reading; it has suggested the perplexed views of other people on some things and no lucid and original views on anything.

As for the logical analysis—those who go "to the bottom of things"—their current deductions seem to confirm Mr. Bernard Shaw's accusation that a logician is like a liar in many respects, but chiefly in that he should have a good memory.

The confusion, perplexity and double dodging generally have been due to a bewildering mixture of foreign facts and foreign action. Europe, principally England, has confounded the market issue here in the minds of Americans in a matter so masterly that it compels a sort of admiration. Londoners, committed on the short side of the "Yankee," have taken advantage of a peculiarity in the money situation in a way that should be instructive to future manipulators on this side.

The ingenious campaign began a month ago. At that time it was hinted that European lenders would not renew loans made on American securities. The first shot was well timed. It denoted a full knowledge of the importance of such renewals to the monetary situation and a cognizance of the fact that a number of Wall Street and La Salle street pools were carrying stocks abroad. This was perfunctory to the customary advance in the discount rates in England and on the Continent—rises ordered, as a rule, in quick Autumn or later.

The lifts came earlier because of a widespread revival in Europe, accelerated by bountiful crops in Russia. Europe, like an elderly person, quick to be affected by the American fiscal epidemic of 1907, was slow to recover from that disease. It was not until a year after the original patient had gone about his prosperous business that the infected countries came out of the hospital.

But they came out suddenly a few weeks ago, and at once made large demands on their respective money markets, markets, it must be noted, that had given very freely to the stock broker of America, the coffee broker of Brazil and the wheat and beef exporters of the Argentine, in addition to a recurrent spasm of company promotions in Germany.

Inevitably England, the pivotal point in European money matters, hastens to raise the discount premium following an anticipatory action in Berlin. The initial lift was followed by another rise of a point a week later. Admittedly the charges were abrupt and radical, but hardly more so than the demands of the European business community emphasized by the unusual requirements in Russia to take care of the rich harvests.

For Englishmen, who had sold an enormous amount of calls on United States Steel common, Union Pacific, St. Paul and other leaders, the unexpectedly abrupt rise in the discount rate seemed like signs from heaven—or, rather, the other place; they were strangely fortuitous. Nothing could have played better into the hands of the Capel court operators who have a vast number of American shares to deliver in the next sixty days, and who have failed to hedge against such deliveries.

These obligated gentlemen immediately made connection with numerous rumor disseminators. The most serious in intent was that the governors of the Bank of England had put the rate at 5 per cent, in order to stop "dangerous" speculation in Wall Street, New York and Burgstrasse, Berlin. The benevolent attitude of the Englishman to everything German is proverbial. He would jeopardize his own financial position to save a German from inconvenience. He is almost solicitous of the financial welfare of the American.

Moreover, it is notorious that the main purpose of the banking establishment in Threadneedle street is to promote ethical culture among foreign financial communities. Its invariable custom is to proceed at any time, and in harness, hunt merchants and manufacturers—by making a 5 per cent. rate in order to discipline speculators in America and Germany. It is a Central Bank whose Central idea is sternly philanthropic.

The gravest and most pretentious of the English journals—therefore the most stupid—gravely announced last week that if the average per cent. rate would not reform Wall Street and Burgstrasse, then the premium must be made 6 per cent. European commerce and South America needs have nothing to do with the case. The American and German must be reformed.

The essence of last week's market was the forced liquidation of stocks by people easily forced and influenced. It cannot be repeated too often that the time to dispose of securities is not in slumps in a year of prosperity that has existed immediately upon a period of business depression. Such breaks are bound to occur at intervals in the most prosperous times. If it is not the annual flurry in money rates it will be something more untoward. But reactions, sometimes deep reactions, are quite natural.

THESE MEN ARE BACK OF THIS LAND

Charles S. Painter, President of the Florida National Land Co., is a man who is known all over this country. He was for 20 years engaged in the newspaper business and is known to every publisher of daily papers of value in America and Canada. He has for years had a Florida home, though his residence is Chicago, dividing his residence between Chicago and Florida. This man, among those who know him, stands above misrepresentation and has a record and commercial value second to no man in America. He is in direct and daily touch with every department of this company and can be found at his desk in the Chicago office every day. He stands back of every statement here made.

W. Owen Gandy, Treasurer of this company, resides in Fort Wayne, Ind. No better citizen can be found in this section of Indiana or one whose reputation is freer from failure or blemish.

The following letter from a United States Depositary and National Bank of Fort Wayne, Ind., tells you how you may regard the man to whom you send your money:

German American National Bank, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Morris Jones of Chicago, Ill., is Secretary, and is of equal business standing to his companion officers of this company. These men are not figureheads, but are actively engaged in directing this colony and will personally see that every obligation here made is carried out to the strict letter of moral and legal obligation. Do not buy until you know with whom you are dealing. These men and this company court and can successfully meet the most stringent investigation.

June	81 deg.	5.07 ins.	December	59 deg.	2.45 ins.

Average temperature for year, 70 degrees; average rainfall, for year, 51.50 inches.

Statistics show that Florida has the lowest death rate in the United States. This is no doubt due to mild winters and the vast forests of pine that cover the State, charging the air with their health-preserving properties. The snow ceasing between Orsam and Gulf Hammock, Florida, is the only one we will follow.

"How Raw Food Made Me Thin"

—The Countess of Warwick—

Forty-Two Pounds in Three Months She Lost, Now Her Daughter Is Trying It, Wu Ting Fang Is a Convert---

What Is Claimed for the New Dietary Fad.

The Countess of Warwick Before Her Raw Food Diet and—on the Right—"After Taking."

THE beautiful Countess of Warwick, [illegible] who is always advocating something, enlisted in the thing original and striking and ranks of the "raw who is well known in this country on food-ers" under the account of her leanings [illegible] banner of [illegible] tem, has declared war on the cook-stove [illegible] and the oven.

Despite the fact that [illegible] mother several [illegible] ess has always [illegible] trim and girlish [illegible] due to her gra[illegible] to her perfect [illegible] to be regarded as [illegible] woman in Europe.

It was natural [illegible] her ladyship to [illegible] ning of the present [illegible] getting fat; that [illegible] twice its usual [illegible] line was gradually [illegible] pearing, and that nothing she could do seemed to stem the unnatural burden of flesh which was destroying [illegible] lovely figure.

"Get rid of the cook stove and [illegible] oven, and your avoirdupois will go [illegible] of itself," [illegible] friend [illegible] distracted [illegible] delivered [illegible] the meat [illegible]

That was three months ago. To-day [illegible] as [illegible] against [illegible] the beautiful [illegible] Warwick [illegible] has lost [illegible] has demonstrated [illegible] the sensational [illegible] abolition of [illegible] gives her exp[illegible] booth of [illegible]

Instead of the [illegible] and stewed and roasted [illegible] baked food to which she had been accustomed all her life and of which she had partaken with so much relish, she subsists entirely on raw carrots, raw beans, raw [illegible] raw eggs, nuts, figs, dates and fruit.

This regimen has been attended with such success that she persuaded upon her daughter, the loving Associates of Helmsley, to follow her example.

The Viscountess was [illegible] too, and readily acquired the [illegible] er's suggestion, with the result that she, too, has regained her former [illegible]

Not that the charming Countess was the first person of prominence to take up the raw food theory. Over a year ago Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese Minister, [illegible] Work on [illegible] they are ordinarily capable of performing, and raw food would not be a way before [illegible] good substitute for [illegible] ed variety.

The case of the Countess of Warwick is illustrative [illegible]

She was probably an overfed, elderly matron, who led a sedentary life and who was accustomed to well-elaborated and well-prepared food. Her success as the fortunate Countess, as digestive system had indeed very little raw food is by no means to be considered a panacea for all the ills to work to perform. Under the new conditions, on account of the diet she has which flesh is heir.

Raw Corn Is One of the Staples of the Raw Food Cult.

Why I Advise Raw Food.

By the COUNTESS OF WARWICK.

Y[illegible] Americans are the most [illegible] people. [illegible] new and wonderful things that [illegible] manity has needed so long. Think of it! We have of known [illegible] centuries, cooking [illegible] food with fire, killing it and eating dead [illegible] nourish with all the rare [illegible] chemicals evaporated and dried up [illegible]

"Our scientists spend their lives and [illegible] the trees. [illegible] "It is all new and wonderful to me. [illegible] ing fruit was a [illegible] carrots and beets, with a dressing of butter, with soaked French [illegible] dates olive oil, raw eggs and lemon, no salt. or figs, [illegible] grated nuts and figs and a Bartlett pear.

My principal meal in dinner at which [illegible] celery or raw [illegible] cereals with [illegible] and a dish consisting of raw [illegible] and peanuts, raw ground green peas, [illegible] and [illegible] mixed with chopped dates and figs, chopped raw onion and raw rolled wheat, well blended with [illegible] wafers and sweet, unsalted [illegible] which has done so much for me.

The greatest change in [illegible] nce since I discarded [illegible] mouth my teeth with [illegible] came rough and [illegible] clear and pure [illegible] their lustre and white [illegible] one thing and [illegible] lost weight without in any way weakening myself. NO WONDER KING EDWARD TRIED TO SUPPRESS THIS BOOK

Lady Cardigan's Embarrassing Disclosures Behind the Scenes Among the Personages of Highest Title and Position in the Royal Court.

"MY RECOLLECTIONS"

By the Countess of Cardigan.

(By Permission of Eveleigh Nash, the Publisher.)

I SUPPOSE few people alive can say, as I can, that they have spoken to the wicked "Lord Steyne," who, as every one knows, was the Marquis of Hertford. I think Thackeray did a great deal to malign Lord Hertford, and he did not quite deserve it. There is, of course, no doubt that he was a roue. The society he lived in, his great wealth, his epicurean tendencies all conspired to make him exceptional in his passions and dissipations in the days of his flaming youth. But after all he only wore his vice with a difference, and he always looked a great nobleman, never lowering his manners, however much he neglected his morals. A veteran himself, he was the last young man of to-day, who is apt to forget magnificent morals and manners in his desire to have "a good time."

Lord Hertford was persona grata at court, every one visited him, and his breakfast and luncheon parties at St. Dunstan's were not deleted delicatii. There were, of course, all kinds of rumors about the orgies at St. Dunstan's after the opera, when closed carriages, containing certain members of the corps de ballet, used to be driven to the Regent's Park house so securely hidden in its lovely sylvan grounds. Scandal said that once there the ladies discarded the conventional attire of the ballet and waited on Lord Hertford and his friends at supper wearing less than is now considered good form to appear in as Salome. On these occasions the trees were decked with hundreds of colored lamps, the supper was a Lucullus like feast, and soft music from a concealed orchestra made night romantic; the guests were among the best known members of the haut monde, and the lovely hours played their part.

* * *

The Adelphi visited us at Cowes for several seasons, also Queen Adelaide lived the place, they took a house every Sun. Although Lady Aylesbury was considered a beauty, she was exceedingly thin, and her scragginess was the source of a joke for years later. She was devoted to Lord Wilton, but one day, when on board Lord Cardigan's yacht, which was lying off Cowes, and stayed the night before returning to Cowes. Lord Wilton, who was furious about it, made quite an unnecessary fuss, and Cardigan, and some kind friend said that after all it was only a case of two dogs licking over a bone."

* * *

One of the most amusing experiences about this time originated when I wish to see a rather risque play at the Princess's Theatre.

"Papa," said I one morning at breakfast, "I wish you would take me to the Prince's Theatre, every one's talking about the play. Do let us go this evening."

"Quite impossible," answered papa, with great decision. "Quite impossible, Adeline—I am dining to-night with General Cavendish, the club, a long-standing engagement, and," he continued, "even if I were disengaged I should not think of taking my daughter to such a play, nothing, my dear, is so degrading as a public display of lax morals, and it is the duty of every self-respecting person to discountenance such a performance. Let me hear no more about it," and he opened The Times with an air of finality.

I came for my maid, "Parker," I said, "go at once to the Princess's Theatre and bespeak a box for me, and be ready to come with me to-night."

"Alone, miss?" ventured Parker.

"Yes, alone; now don't waste a moment," and no sooner had I said off than I wrote and dispatched a letter to Lord Cardigan—he was a friend of papa, and asked him to come to my box at the theatre that evening.

Parker and I arrived early and I settled down to enjoy myself. The overture commenced, and I was just about to inspect the audience when Lord Cardigan came into the box; he was rather agitated. "Miss de Horsey," he said, without any preliminaries, "you must leave the theatre at once."

"I'll do no such thing," I cried angrily. "What on earth is the matter?"

"Well" reluctantly answered Cardigan—"well, Miss de Horsey your father and General Cavendish are in the box opposite—"with a look at me apologetically—"with two ladies they would not like to be seen with."

"I shall see the play," I said to Lord Cardigan, "and you'll put me into a cab because it is over. I shall be home before papa returns from the—the club," and I laughed again at the idea.

I spent a most exciting evening hidden behind the curtain, and I divided my attention between Papa and the performance. About the middle of the last act we left. Lord Cardigan hailed a hack, my carriage and gave the driver directions where to go; he then wished me good night and a safe return. It was a foggy evening and the drive seemed interminable. I became impatient. "Parker," I said, "lower the window and tell the man to make haste."

Parker obeyed, and I heard an angry argument in the fog. She sat down with a horrified face and an astounded:

"Oh, Miss—we are nearly at Islington—and the driver is drunk."

Here was a pretty state of things! "Parker, tell him to stop at once." She did so, and I got out to ascertain what was happening. The man was drunk, but I succeeded in frightening him into turning his horse's head in the direction of Upper Grosvenor street and we set off again.

Theatres were "out" much earlier then than now, but it must have taken a long time to reach Mayfair, for I heard midnight strike when the cab stopped at the end of the street. I sent Parker on to open the door, while I paid the man, and I devoutly hoped the cloth had proved attractive enough to prevent papa returning home before me.

As I stood in front of No. 8 the door was opened—not by Parker but by papa.

I felt I was in for a maurais quart d'heure, but I walked quietly into the hall.

"Adeline," said papa, in an awful voice, "explain yourself! Where have you been? Is this an hour for a young lady to be out of doors? How dare you conduct yourself in this manner?"

The courage of despair seized me—and, let me confess it, a spice of devilment also. I faced my angry parent quite calmly.

"I've been to the Princess's Theatre, papa," I said, demurely. "Parker and I saw you and General Cavendish there; I thought you were dining at the club—and I knew—"

"Go to bed at once, Adeline," interrupted papa, looking very nonplus. "we'll talk about your behaviour later."

But he never mentioned the subject to me again!

* * *

CONSTANCE DE BURGH was one of my great friends. She was a very pretty, charming girl, who married Lord Ward, a man who had always been considered a great parti by mothers with marriageable daughters.

Constance was not in love with her husband; he had proposed to her and she most accept him. A dutiful daughter of a cobdolesa character, Constance never dreamt of opposition. So she became Lady Ward.

Marriage frequently means disillusion and the Ward marriage was no exception.

Fate then threw Constance across Lord Duppin's path, with the result that the tragedy began.

I knew Blanche Duppin very well, and often when I was dining with her she would tell me sorrowfully about her husband's infatuation. "It is useless to expostulate," said Blanche, "Duppin will not abandon the affair, and I don't know how it will end if William Ward finds out about his wife."

Matters came to a crisis at a fancy dress ball given by Lady Londonderry at Holderness House, the chief feature being a quadrille danced by ladies representing famous European Queens. I met the Wards there, Constance looked delicate, and early in the evening she said she felt ill and must go home.

Her husband remained until nearly 3 a. m., when he departed for his house in Park Lane—It was daylight, and as he approached the house he suddenly noticed a man leaving it. Their eyes met—it was Lord Duppin, who turned and ran for his life down the street.

Lord Ward entered and startled the sleepy footman by telling him to arouse all the servants and bid them assemble in the hall. He then went upstairs to his wife's room.

"Get up, madam," he said, "my house is yours no longer; an arrangement shall be made for your future, but henceforth you are no wife of mine."

Tears and entreaties were useless, and Constance was obliged to dress; William Ward then led her past the scandalized servants who were waiting down stairs and—turned her out of doors.

The poor frightened girl managed to reach her parents' house in Grosvenor Crescent, and implored them to give her shelter, but they were as heartless as her husband, and told her they could not take her in. More dead than alive, she turned her steps to Conduit street, where her singing master lived, and this gentleman, full of compassion for his unfortunate pupil, allowed her to remain there until the next day, when she went to Ostend.

From Ostend she went to Nice, where her child was prematurely born, and the unhappy young mother died. Her husband brought her body to England and once again Constance Ward lay in her darkened bedroom.

On the evening of the day before her burial, Lord Colville came to see Lord Ward. They talked for some time and then the latter suddenly turned to his friend.

"Colville—you admired my wife?"

"Yes," replied Lord Colville "I did."

"Well you're welcome to her—dead!" said Lord Ward in a strong, angry tone, but the next moment he bent over the pale, beautiful face of the dead woman. Silently Lord Colville stood by her and his heart ached when he thought of her fate. Ward was watching him intently.

"Still admiring my wife? Well, she was a pretty woman—but you would never credit she had such bad teeth."

He sat down at the candlestick and, as he spoke and stood at the head of the coffin. With cool deliberation, he wrenched open the dead lips. "I say—look you—she had bad teeth," he repeated. Look, here and there!" Lord Colville had no need to look—he had told me afterward it was the most ghastly sight he had ever seen.

LORD CARDIGAN has sometimes been described as a favorite of [illegible] and [illegible] wealth, was a personal attache [illegible] and was a friend of the late Queen Victoria, and Prince Albert. Commanding the Fifteenth Hussars, he was the first to welcome the Prince of Wales when he arrived to marry the Queen, and his regiment was afterward known as "Prince Albert's own Hussars."

The fordship was a typical soldier, and after the Crimean war there was no more popular hero in all England. So much has been written about him that it is unnecessary for me to retail matters of which are well known. I have often been asked whether he confided to me anything particular about the Charge of the Light Brigade, which he commanded, but the truth is, he never seemed to attach any importance to the part he played.

* * *

Lord Cardigan and I had one, on [illegible] particular comment would have been made on our friendship, but in 1857 Society was scandalized because I had the courage to ride and drive with a married man.

* * *

ON the morning of July 12, 1858, I was awakened by a loud knocking at the front door. I looked at my watch, and saw that it was no seven o'clock. I was, needless to say, very alarmed, as I wondered whether anything had happened to my father or my brothers. The knocking continued. I heard the bolts drawn, the door opened, and a voice I knew well called impatiently on the stairs.

It was Lord Cardigan! I had just time to slip on a dressing gown before he came into my room, sans ceremonie, and taken me in his arms he said:

"My dearest, she's dead—let us get married at once."

Then I knew that the trying period of our probation was over and that we were free to be happy at last.

When Cardigan grew calmer, he told me he had just come from his wife's deathbed. The poor lady had urged him to marry me, saying she knew that I should make him happy. She had also warned him against Mathe Mathilde—of Albeshire, who of his cousin the extent of whose [illegible] appears, was only known to Lady Cardigan, who told me her [illegible] unvarnished truth about them.

As I did not wish to insult the memory of Lady Cardigan, who had shown me so many kindnesses, I refused to marry Cardigan until some time had elapsed.

* * *

ON September 28, 1858, our marriage took place at the Moldo Chapel, Gibraltar, and I was the first Countess of Cardigan to be married on foreign soil. I wore a white silk gown, draped with a blue scarf and a large hat adorned with plumes and feathers. Lord Cardigan's friends Stuart Paget, Mrs. Paget, and the Misses Paget, were present, and we gave a ball on the yacht in the evening. We spent a very gay week at Gibraltar, then left for Cadiz, touching at Malaga and Alicante; then we took rail to Madrid, where we arrived October 16, in time to witness a review of 30,000 troops upon Queen Isabella's birthday.

* * *

PARIS was then a city of delight, revelling in the palmy days of the Second Empire, and I greatly enjoyed my visit there. One night I went to the opera with Cardigan, and we saw Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Trelawney in a box. Mrs. Trelawney was the famous Miss Howard, once the friend of Louis Napoleon, who paid her £250,000 when he renounced her to marry Eugenie de Montijo. Mrs. Trelawney annoyed the Emperor and Empress as much as she dared by sitting opposite the royal box at the opera and driving almost immediately behind the Empress's carriage in the Bois de Boulogne. She was a very fat woman, and her embonpoint increased to such an extent that the doors of her carriage had to be enlarged to allow her to get in or out with comfort.

From Paris we came to London, and stayed at Lord Cardigan's town house in Portman Square; then we went on to Deene on December 14, where we had a royal reception, six hundred tenants on horseback escorting our carriage from station to house.

* * *

MY hunting recollections would not be complete without mentioning a hunting meeting there in 1875, when I went to a meet at Belvoir and met His Majesty King Edward VII., then Prince of Wales, who was staying at the castle. I was riding my famous mare Dandy, which was the Hillyard Copper Stakes at Stratton Park, and that morning I was much exercised in my mind about a proposal of marriage I had just received from Disraeli, my uncle, Admiral Rous, had said to me, "My dear, you can't marry that old Jew." And I had known Disraeli all my life, and liked him very well. He had, however, one drawback, so far as I was concerned, and that was his breath—the ill odor of politics, perhaps.

In ancient Rome a wife could divorce her husband if his breath was unpleasant, and how often I lived in those days, his wife would have been able to divorce him without any difficulty. I was wondering whether I could possibly put up with this unfortunate attribute in a great man, when I met the hero himself, who was graciously pleased to ride with me. In the course of our conversation I told him about Disraeli's proposal, and asked him whether he would advise me to accept it, but the King said he did not think the marriage would be a very happy one.

I lunched with the royal party at Belvoir Castle, and as I rode home afterward I felt well pleased that I had decided not to become the wife of a politician.

THE lavish expenditure and the feverish pursuit of pleasure that constitute society do not appeal to me any more than the restaurant life, which is the fashion in my day. A woman's thought our hospitality has now become rare. It has been said that the long early Victorian dinner parties were very dull functions. They may have been—but at least they ought always to show us to the best advantage in her own house. It is her proper setting—not the smart restaurant where she now entertains her friends at so much a head!

In the present reign English court functions are more sober and imposing than they were when I was young, but they lack the exclusiveness of the Victorian era. Nowadays money is king and birth and breeding whisper!

* * *

THE Court is broader-minded now than it has been for years, and King Edward does not exhibit those sometimes rather unkind and inconsistent peculiarities which were shown by his mother. Her well-known dislike of widows marrying again was very remarkable considering that she was the offspring of a happy second marriage. The late Queen was most kind to me when I was young, but I fear the way which I defied convention before I married Lord Cardigan did not prepossess her favorably to me, and my second marriage greatly displeased her, as by it I took the title of Countess of Lancaster, which she was so fond of using when she travelled incognito.

"His epicurean tendencies all combined to make him exceptional in his vagaries and enormities. Yours in his mode of gratifying them."

"Took the pieces of members of the corps de ballet up to the Regent's Park house."

How Titled Foreign Fortune Hu

Astonishing New Revelations of the Sordid Bargains, Heartless Schemes and Shameless Conspiracies Foreign Noblemen Have Employed To Win American Girls' Fortunes.

Florence Audenried, Countess de la Forest-Divonne, Whose Husband Spent Her Fortune Gambling.

WILL American girls ever be convinced of the folly of marrying foreign noblemen?

They ought to have been warned by the love lyst of girls whose lives have been wrecked by international marriages; but if that is not sufficient they have now a revelation of [illegible] with fortune-hunting [illegible] plan to catch American brides.

This revelation has come about partly as a sequel to the marriage of Miss Anita Stewart and Prince Miguel of Braganza, partly through the suit of Mrs. William Franklin Ernest, of Chicago against Count Santa Eulalia, and also through other recent incidents both in this country and in Europe. It is an astonishing revelation of sordid bargains, shameful tricks and conspiracies, which proves that love or even personal regard has, as a rule no part in these alliances, and that the sole object of the foreign noblemen is the fortune of the bride.

Those who take a rose-colored view of international alliances were particularly delighted with the marriage of Prince Miguel of Braganza and Miss Anita Stewart. Here was a bridegroom who was not merely a nobleman but a royal Prince and the descendant of a real King. He was by far the highest [illegible] in rank it had ever won the hand of an American [illegible] and the bride was not only rich, but [illegible] and pretty. Her charms without a penny right to have been price enough for any husband.

But hardly had the akiel of the bagpipes at the Highland wedding ceremony died away and the [illegible] guests departed to their worm-eaten [illegible] than we were treated to a view of the machinery by which the marriage had been brought about. A Viennese money lender brought suit against Prince Miguel of Braganza and other noblemen for $1,200, a sum which had [illegible] connected with the promised [illegible] of paying the Prince's fare to Scotland for the wedding ceremony.

The money lender said that the Prince was [illegible] Paris at the time the money was advanced, and that His Royal Highness admitted that he had not money enough to pay for railway and [illegible] tickets to Scotland, where his future bride awaited him. He was equally unable to settle his hotel bill at the Paris hotel, thus making it doubtful whether he would be able to get away to Scotland with his clothes, even [illegible] one thousand [illegible] the necessary tickets. The money lender advanced the Prince $1,200 on a note endorsed by several other noblemen, including Count Anton Sigray, who came to America to attend the wedding of Miss Gladys Vanderbilt and Count Szechenyi as one of the latter's ushers.

Helen Morton, Whose Husband, the Duke de Valencay, Insulted Her Brutally on Her Wedding Day.

An Heiress-Catching Syndicate.

This mention of Count Sigray is particularly interesting as pointing to the existence of a syndicate of the leading impecunious noblemen of Austria-Hungary, organized for the purpose of helping one another to catch American heiresses.

The suit happened to be brought because Count Sigray was unwilling to pay the rate of [illegible] demanded by the money lender, who finally [illegible] a compromise, and the suit was withdrawn upon a promise to pay a lower rate of interest. Another interesting point brought out at the trial was that the Prince, after receiving the first sum, had opened negotiations for a further loan of $40,000. He does not need this now, as his marriage has put him in possession of ample funds.

The money lender declared that the Prince had repeated y borrowed money during the past five years, the condition of payment always being that he would make good on marrying an American heiress.

At nearly the same time a petition to declare Prince Miguel a bankrupt was drawn at the instance of [illegible] creditors for the amount of $30,000, and submitted to the Vienna courts. It was not granted, however, owing to the absence of Prince Miguel, who was in Scotland, making plans for his marriage, and because that event might substantially alter his position.

In Paris Prince Miguel's debts and frantic plans to marry an American heiress were a subject of common knowledge and much amusement. When very hard pressed by his creditors, he announced, it is said, that he was to marry an American heiress worth $50,000,000. Since he was then paying attention to Miss Stewart, who was in Paris, it was assumed that she was the heiress he had in mind.

Countess Paul Deroily, the Chicago Girl, Whose Husband Affronted and Abused Her at a Hotel Table.

As the creditors knew roughly that the fortune possessed by Miss Stewart's step-father, the late James Henry Smith, was somewhere in seven thousand and five million, they pointed out to the Prince that it was absurd to pretend that she would have anything like the former sum. They advised him to obtain more information before making any more overtures.

The Prince then, it is related, went to certain information bureaus which profess to supply information concerning the financial status of American heiresses. From them he learned that Miss Stewart had received $500,000 under her step-father's will, that he had given her a sum probably amounting to as much as that for taking her mother's side in certain divorce proceedings, and that she had handsome prospects from her mother, who, while she had received only $5,000,000 under her husband's will had probably received considerably more during his lifetime. This promised sufficient wealth to a youth who had not the money to pay his rail-way fare, although it was ludicrously below his estimate of $50,000,000.

It is stated that the Prince made a bargain at Claridge's Hotel, London, whereby he was to receive $1,000,000 in cash from his future mother after the wedding.

The Perpetual Fiance.

The Prince used to be known as the perpetual fiance, because every time he found himself in fresh difficulties he announced his engagement to some new American heiress. At one time, pressed by money lenders, he announced publicly that he was to wed Mrs. Samuel Sloan Channcey, the well-known and beautiful widow of great wealth, who formerly lived in Brooklyn, N. Y.

A year ago, when he needed financing again, he announced that Miss Mary Pullman, of Chicago, was to be his bride. Then last Spring it announced that he was going to marry "Miss M. Vanderbilt, of New York." The money lenders made inquiries in America, and were greatly pained to learn that there was no such person as "Miss M. Vanderbilt" in the well-known Family.

We have another kind of revelation of the machine y whereby American heiresses are captured in the suit brought by Mrs. William Franklin Ernest, of Chicago, to recover $10,000 for marrying Count Santa Eulalia to Miss John B. Stetson, the enormously wealthy widow of the [illegible] manufacturer. She is an heiress in the legal sense of having inherited a fortune, although not in the popular use of the word.

Mrs. Ernest, who is the wife of a Chicago physician, has furnished the following highly circumstantial account especially for this newspaper of the astonishing manner in which she secured Count Santa Eulalia for Mrs. Stetson, or vice versa, as you prefer.

"I met Count Santa Eulalia, who was no Count then, some four or five years ago at the Alliance Francaise. He was penniless, but so exemplary in his life, for a foreigner of noble birth, and so confiding, that I took an interest in him, and when he told me that it was the ambition and the wish of his family that he marry a woman of wealth, I agreed, out of sympathy, to take him as a 'charity patient.'

"It was a long struggle. My husband and I spend the Winters at the Auditorium Hotel, and I put the Count up there and paid his bills.

"I was continually telling him what to do and what not to do, and getting him in shape for his entree into society, but he embarrassed me so frequently. Once he sent his card to Hobart Chatfield-Chatfield-Taylor with the number of his room marked in the corner. I told him I felt degraded by his stupidity and lack of social savoir faire.

Financing a Fiance.

"The fact that he was not a Count was, of course, a secret that he and I alone knew, and part of my plan was to get a title for him. Santa Eulalia's brother, the Republican leader at Lisbon, was a Count, and as he did not need a title I thought I could get it from him for his brother in America.

"Well, Mrs. D. Bishop and I talked it over, and we decided upon Mrs. Stetson. Mr. Stetson then had been dead about eight months. The Count knew that Mrs. Stetson was about ten years his senior, but that didn't make any difference—she had the money.

"The next step was to bring Mrs. Stetson and the Count together. That was easy. We arranged to have Mrs. Stetson come to Chicago, and she came with her adopted daughter, Miss Ellen Parker, and took apartments. They were registered at the Congress Hotel under assumed names.

"The Count did not progress very rapidly with Mrs. Stetson, because of his personal faults, so I let Mrs. Stetson go away to Philadelphia as soon as possible in order to permit the Count to consolidate his position by letter.

"Then Mrs. Stetson began to receive letters from Count Santa Eulalia, and [illegible] assertion seems to prove. The letters [illegible] of unashamed, beautiful love and devotion and fervor in every line. I know, because I wrote them—every one.

"Count Eulalia couldn't write a line of the letters. I wrote them for him, and I [illegible] in and [illegible]

"It was a hard [illegible] work. Frequently Mrs. Stetson would [illegible], and that made the work harder. Finally I framed a proposal of marriage, and the Count sent it to Mrs. Stetson [illegible] a letter full of arguments, and I had to meet them.

"I [illegible] upon [illegible] that Mrs. Stetson [illegible], and finally he was [illegible] decision. Then, suddenly, and to our [illegible], Mrs. Stetson began a personal investigation into the title of Count Eulalia.

"I found out that Miss [illegible] that King Alfonso was going to be married. An invitation was procured for the Count. I sent him to the wedding. I furnished his wardrobe, bought his ticket and sent him to Spain and gave him $400 with which to [illegible] Count, provided he could induce his brother to relinquish claim to it.

"While he was in Lisbon I wrote many letters to him, full of stories telling how Miss So-and-So or Mrs. Blank were in ecstasies over a prospect of marriage with him. I sent him pictures of the young women. These pictures were procured from art galleries; but they all made an impression upon Count Eulalia's elder brother as a Republican he didn't believe much in royalty, so he finally was induced to turn his title over to Santa Eulalia, just the same as a piece of merchandise.

"The next step was to have the Count appointed as Portugese vice-consul to Chicago, and that was managed without much difficulty. Then he returned and everything went smooth y—thanks to my management.

"Finally all was arranged. I sent Count Eulalia to Philadelphia to meet his bride. I took him to a store in Chicago and bought him a complete outfit. Then I bought his ticket and sent him East.

"I am not worrying about my claim. I have witnesses and I have documentary evidence. I have some mighty interesting love letters that I will produce if the case comes to trial. letters that I wrote for the Count to Mrs. Stetson and also the original draft of the business proposal. I trained and advanced him and he is an [illegible]

"Two years ago we went to Philadelphia and drove out to Idro, the magnificent home of the Count and Countess Santa Eulalia. If a person has any conception of Paradise, Idro, with its [illegible] of great wealth on every side, its [illegible] gardens and [illegible], certainly does fulfill the conception.

"There was a lot of work on Eulalia, and I did it. Now he must pay for it."

The Count and Countess deny the allegations of Mrs. Ernest in nearly every point.

Shall or bargaining [illegible] unconscionable element of marriages with foreign noblemen. The Earl of Yarmouth, who was in his ears in debt, waited until the day of his wedding to M[illegible] Alice Thaw, of Pittsburg, and then demanded a much larger sum of money than the family had previously been willing to put before he would consent to go on with the ceremony. Even after that he virtually refused to live with her, spending nearly all his time away from her, and after a few years of unspeakable wretchedness she obtained an annulment of the marriage.

It is impossible to describe in detail all the cases of misery caused by marriages of this kind, but it is instructive to refer to a few, because they illustrate peculiarly the shameful aspects of foreign noblemen, their disreputable habits and their utter lack of personal regard for their American wives.

Count Boni de Castellane probably summed up all the evil traits of all the foreign noblemen, in that he squandered his wife's fortune on other women and on almost every conceivable extravagance, and when she remonstrated meekly, shook her, pinched her and insulted her in a shocking manner. It seems an inexplicable outrage of feminine nature that a woman [illegible] to [illegible] such an experience and after securing a divorce from her tormentor, should marry another man of the same kind, Prince Helie de Sagan, a cousin of Boni, and endowed at one time with an even worse reputation than the latter.

[illegible] other, Baron Ludwig [illegible] Duke de Valencay, who [illegible] no greater rival in [illegible] among the foreign nobility. He was married to Miss Helen Morton, the handsome daughter of ex-[illegible] Morton. It is believed [illegible] to her [illegible] cynicism that he knew she had married him just for his title, and that he did not care a rap for her. It is even said that he displayed this brutality even on the wedding day. The bride obtained an annulment of the marriage within a short time and is now known as Mrs. Helen Morton.

No nobleman ever bargained for a greater sum of money than the Duke of Marlborough when he married Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt. He was accompanied by his lawyer, who conducted the negotiations, and it is said on good authority that the sum of $10,000,000 was placed at the Duke's disposal. We all know that that marriage has turned out miserably for the lovely Duchess.

THE good fortune of Prince Miguel of Braganza in winning Miss Anita Stewart, Count Laszlo Festetics in securing Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, and other recent events of a similar character have naturally led many European noblemen with the making similar successes.

This is the richest country in the world, American girls share equally with [illegible] brothers in the fortunes of their parents, [illegible] to the custom of most European countries. Consequently there is an extraordinary number of young women of vast wealth.

Among these a few are especially conspicuous, both on account of the unusual size of their fortunes and for their personal attractions, and are already beginning to figure in international celebrity. Such instances are Miss Marjorie Gould, the lovely daughter of Mrs. George Gould; Miss Mathilde Townsend, the granddaughter of the late William Rockefeller, the Pennsylvania mine owner; and Miss Eleanor Elkins Widener, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Widener, of the immensely wealthy Philadelphia family of that name.

Prince Miguel of Braganza has a [illegible] slightly younger than himself, Prince Joseph of Braganza, who, inspired by his brother's example in winning Miss Anita Stewart, apparently entertains strong hopes of doing a fortune as easily.

During the festivities attendant upon his brother's wedding he was seen to be extremely attentive to Miss Margarita Drexel, who is a cousin of the former Miss Stewart.

But now it is stated that the Prince is a suitor for the hand of Miss Marjorie Gould, daughter Francis Joseph opened negotiations in Paris with George Gould, through the Baron Berlie, a well known man of fashion in society. The Baron met Mr. Gould at the Ritz, in Paris, assured him that the Prince would consider it a great honor to be [illegible] his family and produced evidence to [illegible] his suit was encouraged by the Empress Eugenie, Joseph, who is the young man's [illegible].

The Prince planned to visit the United States to pay his respects to Miss Gould and [illegible] the wonderful country which has done so much for his family.

Meanwhile the Prince finds that he has a serious rival in His Highness the Duke of Leuchtenberg, who is also a Prince and [illegible]

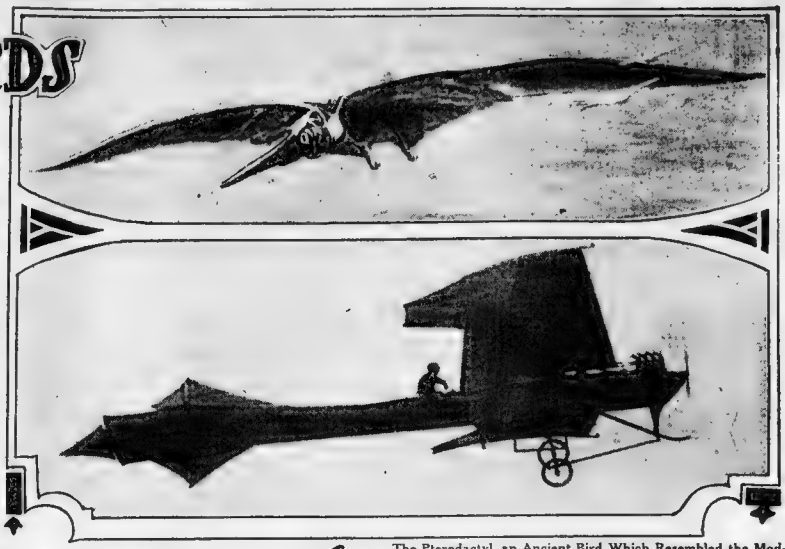
The Balancing Levels in a Hawk's Ear Which Control Equilibrium on a Freer Plane Than Man Moves.

How Men Birds Keep Their Balance

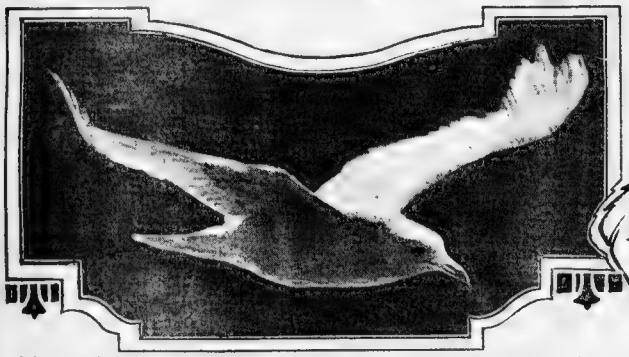
The Delicate "Spirit Levels" in the Ears That Preserve the Body's Equilibrium Develop Special Sensitiveness, As in the Case of Flying Creatures.



The Pterodactyl, an Ancient Bird Which Resembled the Modern Aeroplane Is Shown Here in Comparison With Bleriot's Aeroplane From Tip to Tip of Its Wings the Average Pterodactyl Was Thirty Feet — Five Feet More Than the Length of the Machine Below It.

MORE wonderful than the spectacle presented by a man speeding through the air in a mechanical contrivance imitating a bird's wings and motive power, is the discovery that the little group of new sciences usually associated with the name of Darwin, and including the study of animals themselves, throws a flood of light upon the problems of flight.

"Man-like" is probably the term that best describes a phenomenon familiar to every biologist — the tendency of the brain to model the animals of the environment after the image of man. Thus we have Darwin, Wallace and Huxley among naturalists, Bleriot and the Wrights among aviators, and we can see the same tendency working backward and forward through the ages, creating the Pterodactyl, the bird-man of the Stone Age, and the Archaeopteryx, the bird with the wings of a man.



A Remarkable Picture of the Seagull in Flight, Showing the "Flexible Wing Tips" on Which the Wrights Claim Monopoly, and Which the "Spirit Levels" in the Gull's Ears Control.

Looking Up at Bleriot's Monoplane, Diagrammatic Outline Shows the Remarkable Resemblance to the Seagull.

When the Acrobat Stands on His Head Like This, "Spirit Levels" Must Accommodate Themselves to More Abnormal Conditions Than If He Were Flying.

The Semi-Circular Canals of the Human Ear, by Which the Balance of the Body Is Maintained.

A Diagrammatic Sketch of the Flight of the Seagull, Which More Closely Resembles the Aeroplane's Flight Than That of Any Other Bird.

HOW TO BE GRACEFUL

BY MME LINA CAVALIERI
THE MOST FAMOUS LIVING BEAUTY

MME. CAVALIERI to-day discusses the important subject of how to acquire and cultivate grace. She treats it from both subjective and objective viewpoints. Illustrating the subjective phase of grace she says: "A bent and stooping form is quite sure to come of a bent and stooping spirit." As an instance of the objective she says: "A soldier on parade is an excellent model of how to stand."

Next week she will write on "Winter Foes of Beauty."

By Madame Lina Cavalieri.

"A soldier on parade is a good model as to how to stand."

"A simple exercise for sagging shoulders is to draw the arms behind you, bend them at the elbows, and thrust a cane between the elbows and back."

"If the ends of the shoulder blades can be felt at a light touch of the fingers the carriage is incorrect."

"The chin should be held well up. Nature designed woman to hold her head proudly."

ward those who stole your boy, what reward am I to have who bring him back to you?"

"Oh, anything, everything, Clement. Only bring him! I am in torment!"

"If I could comfort you, dear"——

"There isn't any comfort," she said dashing away her tears with both her trembling hands. "Oh, way can't I know if he is well—if he"——

"You may be sure those that have been bidding him for a big sum of money are not cutting any harm come to him."

"Oh, how can you tell?

Free Superfluous Hair Cure

A Positive Remedy That Removes Any Hairy Growth and Does Not Burn the Skin.

SENT FREE TO YOU FOR TRIAL.

Could Anyone Kiss a Face Like This?

It is easy now for any woman to have a beautiful face, handsome arms and bust, free from all disfiguring superfluous hair. It matters not whether it's only a few hairs or a regular mustache or goatee, or how light or heavy the growth is. It can be destroyed in a few minutes with the marvelous new remedy Elec-tro-la.

This wonderful hair destroyer can be used on the face, neck, arms, bust, or any portion of the body with perfect safety. It is not like other remedies. It positively will not fail to remove, or wear the most tender skin, no matter how long it is left on, and it never fails to remove even the most obstinate growth almost instantly. If you want a permanent lasting cure, not merely temporary relief, don't fail to send for a trial, for it goes to the hair roots and kills them.

We have decided to send a trial bottle of Elec-tro-la to any man or woman who writes for it. To prove that it does get at and destroy the hair in a permanent manner, we guarantee results. The regular sized bottle is $1.00 and your money will be refunded if Elec-tro-la does not do all we claim. We don't ask you to take our word for what Elec-tro-la will do. Just fill out trial coupon below and mail with a two-cent stamp to-day.

The Making of Men

Navy training develops character. Under the Navy system of advancement, the worthy young man is given greater responsibility, with higher pay, as his capabilities increase. Inevitably he develops self-reliance; becomes quick and alert, resourceful and confident, with a military bearing and a clear brain—the natural accompaniment of a healthy life and a clean body. If the young man does not develop under Naval influences he lacks the qualities to "make good" anywhere. When a bluejacket is questioned regarding his opinion of the Navy after a few years' service, his answer most frequently is "It made a man of me."

But Navy training alone would not produce this result. The young man must come into the Navy with good principles, industrious, of temperate habits, a common school education, and a serious intention to stick to his job, whether he likes it at first or not. This is the type of youth the Navy appeals to, and shiftless characters need not apply.

Look for the address of the Navy Recruiting Office in the want columns of your Sunday papers. If you don't find it, write for illustrated booklet describing duties, pay, privileges, etc., and for instructions how and where to apply. Address:
